Guerrillas Blow Up 3 Planes

Storm Winds Blow B.C. Ferry Aground on Galiano Island

The British Columbia government ferry Queen of Sidney ran aground at the eastern entrance to Active Pass during a storm Friday night.

A B.C. Ferries spokesman at Swartz Bay said the 310-foot vessel was blown off course while entering Sturdies Bay on Galiano Island.

The grounding occurred about 9:30 p.m. as the Queen of Sidney made a regular run from the Tsawwassen terminal to Swartz Bay through the Gulf Islands.

TOW LINE SNAPS

The tug Island Mariner, after breaking its towline twice, pulled the ferry free about three hours after it went aground.

Rescue vessels, which included the Queen of Esquimalt, a Coast Guard cutter and a rescue coordination centre hovercraft, stood by during the operation.

The ferry carried 200 passengers and 30 cars bound for Galiano, Mayne and Pender Islands.

The weather office in Vancouver issued a gale warning for Georgia Strait at 11 p.m. Friday as northeasterly winds rose to about 58 miles an hour over the strait.

CRUISER SINKS

At Sidney, breakup of the government wharf resulted in minor damage to several pleasure craft, including the sinking of the 40-foot cruiser Dream Girl.

Sidney RCMP reported floats making up the wharf broke away during the high winds. Some craft were pounded against the floats, while others were driven up on adjacent rocks.

Gonzales weather station had winds of up to 53 miles an hour overnight, while the weather office at Victoria International Airport had

'Hussein Must Yield'

By The Associated Press

Palestinian guerrillas warring on the one hand with Jordan and on the other with Israel say King Hussein of Jordan must yield his power to a "national authority" if a new ceasefire is to continue between the commandos and the Amman government.

The central committee of the Palestine Liberation Organization, which generally speaks for all 11 commando groups, said in a broadcast Friday the authority would "run the country and purge anti-guerrilla elements from the army, the state and police." It would represent "the forces of the people," said the broadcast from Baghdad, Iraq.

When it takes over, the broadcast continued, the ruling authority should pull Jordan's armed forces from Jordan's cities and redeploy them along the ceasefire line with Israel.

Jordan, Egypt and Israel agreed to a ceasefire Aug. 7, and the guerrillas charge that Hussein has brought most of the army from the front into Amman and other towns to defend against the guerrillas.

HINT AT CONCESSIONS

The guerrilla broadcast said both sides had agreed to "remove the causes" of civil strife in Jordan. Observers read this as an indication that Hussein might have accepted some of the conditions of the broadcast.

Egypt's government radio in Cairo said the United States committed "an act of war against the Arabs" by promising Phantom jets to Israel.

DIDN'T EVEN GET OFF THE GROUND

NEW YORK (UPI) — Off-duty patrolman Melvin Lasky was on his way home in Brooklyn early today when a man jumped on his back, pointed a knife at his neck and shouted, "Take me to Cuba."

Lasky, 22, subdued the man with the help of bystanders and police. The man, identified as Donald Gordon, 22, of Brooklyn, was charged with felonious assault and possession of a dangerous weapon.

Leila To Be Released

LONDON (UPI) — Britain announced today it would release Leila Khaled, the female guerrilla, as part of the ransom for freeing hostages from three jetliners hijacked to Jordan.

The decision to release Miss Khaled was taken at an emergency cabinet meeting today only hours after Arab guerrillas blew up the three jetliners on a dusty airstrip north of Amman.

Fighting Flares Inside Amman

AMMAN (Reuters) — Fresh fighting flared in Amman today, two days after a ceasefire ended two weeks of clashes between Jordanian troops and Arab guerrilla commandos.

Automatic fire was heard in various parts of the city during the early afternoon. Stores were shut and traffic thinned rapidly in the streets.

LONDON (AP) — A British insurance company has tapped brisk revenue with a policy giving individual cover against the danger of being held captive on a hijacked airplane.

Hostages Safe In Amman Hotel

AMMAN (Reuters) — The three hijacked Western airliners have been blown up at the desert airstrip, it was officially announced here.

Radio Amman said all passengers were safe and none had been hurt in the dynamiting of the aircraft today.

A spokesman for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine said the planes — valued at $25 million for all three — were destroyed a few hours after the 240 hostages were removed from them to Amman and other undisclosed areas.

Palestinian guerrillas who hijacked a Pan American World Airways 747 jumbo jet last Sunday also blew that one up soon after they removed the passengers and crew in Cairo. That loss was put at $24.5 million.

The Popular Front spokesman said the blowing up of the planes "is the first step of our warning following the delay of the three Western governments to concede to our terms."

He said the fate of the passengers still held by the Front will be decided upon depending on the reaction of the three governments.

Sixty men were kept aboard the dynamite-laden planes until the last possible moment.

One group of 124 hostages arrived in Amman this morning in a convoy of eight Jordanian army buses.

Tonight the remaining male passengers arrived in two heavily guarded convoys, apparently the last of the refugees.

In Nicosia, Cyprus, the first group of 66 hostages freed by the guerrillas left aboard a chartered Swissair jet for Zurich after spending their first night of freedom in Nicosia hotels.

The passengers, 44 from the Swissair plane and 22 from the TWA plane, had been in an Amman hotel since Monday after being transferred from the aircraft, which Palestinian guerrillas hijacked to a desert airstrip in Jordan last Sunday.

The three jetliners — a Trans World Airlines Boeing 707, a Swissair DC-8 and a British Overseas Airways Corp. VC-10 — were blown up at 3:15 p.m. Jordan time, a spokesman for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine said.

Witnesses reporting on the blast in Jordan said it was greeted by shouting and shots fired in the air by the guerrillas.

Smoke from the airstrip, heavy and black in the clear blue sky, was visible 20 miles away.

Jordanian troops had pulled back 15 miles from the airstrip, which was sealed off after removal of the last passengers.

Guerrilla sources stated categorically that there was no loss of life in the explosion.

About 240 passengers were believed to have been aboard the three planes Friday night. Originally there had been 400 persons — passengers and crew. From time to time various parties were removed.

The International Red Cross has been negotiating since early in the week with the guerrilla leaders for release of all hijacked hostages in exchange for seven Arabs held in three European countries.

Cabinet Muffling Objectors To Mine Waste Dump—SPEC

By DOUG MacRAE

Members of the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control will try to crash a controversial pollution hearing at Port Hardy Wednesday.

Charging "deliberate government attempts to muffle objections" to an application to dump mine wastes, the militant Cowichan-Malahat branch of SPEC plans to attend the hearing despite rejection of its request to appear.

The Pollution Control Branch hearing concerns an application by Utah Construction and Mining Ltd. to pump 9.3 million gallons of mine effluent daily into Rupert Inlet.

Utah has been working almost a year on a $74-million mine-refinery complex and residential development in the Port Hardy area on north Vancouver Island.

Of 140 original objectors to the Utah application, William Venables, the province's director of pollution control, has said he will hear four briefs at the hearing — not including SPEC's.

Cowichan-Malahat branch president Kurt Horn said today he and three pollution experts would try to attend the hearing to present the SPEC brief, already prepared, and to offer technical advice to the lay appellants.

Horn said he was "out-

CHLORINE CLOUD CLEARS HOTEL

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A cloud of chlorine gas sent more than 100 persons choking and stumbling for air at the Sahara Hotel, leaving 16 in fair condition in hospital, authorities said today.

The pale yellow fumes, which burn the eyes and skin and cause instant nausea, were released Friday when a tank of chlorine ruptured beside the hotel's crowded swimming pool.

Some 65 persons including the 16 in hospital were taken by ambulances to the two hospitals.

San Diego to L.A. Hit by Quakes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A strong rolling earthquake and two smaller ones shook southern California this morning, swaying tall buildings and awakening residents. There were no immediate reports of major damage.

Police departments throughout southern California were flooded with telephone calls.

The largest tremor, at 7:31 a.m., lasted about 15 seconds and was felt from Los Angeles to San Diego, 120 miles to the south.

It was one of the strongest felt recently in the area, which is often rattled by minor quakes.

"It really shook us here and we're on the bottom floor," said Sheriff's Sgt. Bob Ryan of San Diego County. "We sure felt it."

The quake was believed centred in the San Gabriel mountains along the San Jacinto fault, not far from the huge San Andreas fault.

Mebbe we need a ferry godmother.

Chemainus Plant To Close Tuesday

VANCOUVER — MacMillan Bloedel's sawmill division at Chemainus on Vancouver Island will be closed Tuesday, putting 450 men out of work.

J. R. Forrest, vice-president of the company's wood products group, said Friday the shutdown was being forced by the continuing strike of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada.

He said the timber firm's Harmac pulp division at Nanaimo, which normally takes wood chips from MB's wood products mills, has been closed by the PPWC strike since July 24.

The Chemainus sawmill division is among the mills which supply chips to Harmac. About 1,000 PPWC members are on strike at Harmac with no sign of a wage settlement.

Previously, production at the company's Vancouver plywood division, which also supplies wood chips to Harmac, had been curtailed for the same reason. The plywood mill is operating only one shift a day, compared with the normal three shifts.

About 600 men were left without jobs at the plywood mill because of the strike, said Forrest.

The PPWC is on strike at seven other British Columbia pulp mills.

Strife, Booze Murder Causes

OTTAWA (CP) — The murder rate is rising, says Dominion Bureau of Statistics, but the bureau's annual volume on the subject is another sad tale of domestic strife or too much booze.

The report, released Friday, says there were 342 murder victims in 1969, a rate of 1.9 per 100,000 populatios. The rate was 1.8 in 1968 and 1.6 in 1967.

At the same time, says the report, the number of murders during commission of other criminal acts—robbery or sexual assault—has "slightly decreased" in recent years.

Family life accounted for 120 of last year's victims and 72 of the 120 were women. When the killing isn't domestic in nature, says the report, the man is usually the victim.

The DBS figures are read closely by legislators as a clue to how the current five-year trial abolition of capital punishment is working.

The death penalty, except where police or prison guards are killed, was abolished Dec. 29, 1967, until that date in 1972.

POLICE MAKE COUNT

DBS gets its basic figures from police, who described 342 deaths last year as murder. Once in court, however, the picture changed drastically.

The report says 121 persons were tried by last Dec. 31 in a number of the 1969 murders and 60 were convicted of manslaughter.

Another 14 were acquitted, four were declared insane, and only 24 convicted of non-capital murder.

That the victims were victims is certain.

The report says 152 were shot, 76 beaten to death, 61 stabbed, 22 strangled and the rest killed in varying ways.

There were 315 "incidents," with 296 single murders, 15 double murders, three triple murders, and one case in which seven persons were killed.

60 UNSOLVED

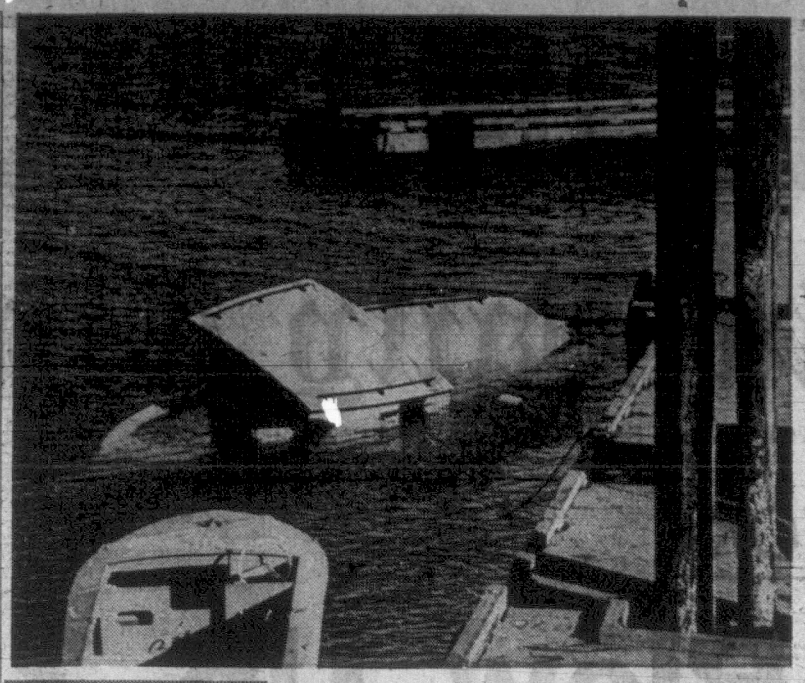

Sixty of the 315 incidents remained unsolved at Dec. 31. In 236 others charges had been placed and in 18, suicide had cleared things up.

The report says that where there was no domestic relationship, "the accused may have been insane, may have been involved in an argument immediately prior to the murder, may have been involved in an argument during a prolonged drinking bout, or the action may have been self-defence." Cases of jealousy and professional killings also are mentioned.

The report looks to the seasons for a clue but finds none. There is "no apparent patterns to the seasons of the year when murders occur," it says.

However, its five-year statistical summary shows summer leading the way in three of the years and winter with the lowest figures in three years.

DBS says one-third of last year's bloodletting was done in Quebec. The Yukon reported no "murders" in 1969 and Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick one each.

B.C. Needs Labor Court —McGeer

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia needs an economic council to set guidelines for labor contract settlements, Dr. Pat McGeer said Friday.

The B.C. Liberal leader said this should be accompanied by an impartial labor court, made up of a judge, a labor man and an industry man, to arbitrate any settlement outside these guidelines.

And, he added, there should be "special laws" to deal with anyone who won't accept settlements worked out this way.

"Their position would be reduced to something comparable to an outlaw."

Dr. McGeer, speaking to the kraft paper section of the Canadian Pulp and Paper association, said the labor court could be given sole control over wage rates of civil servants and people in essential services.

"This concept may even be extendable to those who chronically are the last to catch up in a wage spiral and the first to suffer in inflation, those on assistance of various kinds."

B.C. JOBLESS CUT TO 8.3%

July employment figures for British Columbia showed a 29,000 increase over the previous month, while the unemployment rate showed "a marked decline" from 9.7 to 8.3 per cent, says Industrial Development Minister Waldo M. Skillings in his monthly report on business activity in the province.

The report says industrial unrest in the construction, forestry and transportation industries has been responsible for lower levels of output in many sectors of the provincial economy.

But other sectors have recorded impressive gains, and the report predicts an improved outlook for the rest of the year.

Ferry Off Course, Pilot Testifies

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Canadian marine pilot testified Friday that the British Columbia ferry Queen of Victoria was on the wrong side of a narrow pass when he first saw the ferry from the Soviet freighter Fergey Yesenin, moments before the two vessels collided.

Capt. D. G. Crabbe, 45, of Victoria, told a federal inquiry into the fatal collision that he was on the freighter's bridge just preparing for the turn into Active Pass when he saw the ferry moving in an opposite course.

"Normally I give an order for 20 degrees of starboard helm (when entering the pass), but I can't recall it, I did this time because at this point, who should be coming around the point but the ferry.

"As soon as I saw it, I knew the position of the ferry was wrong . . . it was too far down on our side (of the pass)."

Under rules of the road at sea, vessels should keep to the starboard, or right, side of such channels.

The 14,700-ton Sergey Yesenin was headed to Vancouver from Victoria at the time, a sunny Sunday afternoon, and the 3,541-ton ferry was on her regular run to Swartz Bay from Tsawwassen.

Three persons died in the collision, which occurred at about noon Aug. 2 at the western end of Active Pass.

Crabbe, making his first appearance on the stand in 16 days of testimony, said that after sighting the ferry he gave two short blasts of the freighter's whistle to indicate the ferry should "stay where she was (in course)."

He then ordered the freighter to half speed astern. The ferry "kept coming" around the point and the skipper of the freighter, Capt. Nikolai Khaustov, then ordered his ship to full speed astern, the pilot said.

Crabbe said he did not hear any whistles from the ferry.

His testimony as to the ferry's position concurred with that of Khaustov and officers of the Yesenin. Capt. James Pollock, 57, skipper of the ferry has testified that he was on the proper (starboard) side of the pass.

In earlier testimony, Crabbe said he boarded the Sergey Yesenin at 9:35 a.m. just off Victoria and shortly afterward decided to take Active Pass, rather than the longer route through the more southerly Boundary Pass.

He said Khaustov questioned whether Active Pass was a safe route and that he explained the tide was slack and the pass safe. Crabbe also said he consulted a ferry schedule and estimated that all ferries would be clear of the pass when the freighter reached it.

CANADIAN SKIPPER CHARGED

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Four state charges were filed Friday against Dennis Smith of Prince Rupert, skipper of a Canadian halibut vessel seized Monday for allegedly fishing in Alaskan waters off Cape Muzon north of the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Smith was arraigned Friday and pleaded innocent to charges of being an alien fishing for halibut in United States waters, fishing without a commercial licence, fishing without a vessel licence, and fishing without a lingline licence. The last three charges refer to Alaska licences.

winds of up to 40 miles an hour. Gonzales instruments were recording 40-mph gusts late this morning.

B.C. Hydro said six crews were kept busy during the night responding to reports of power outages in Victoria and the Saanich Peninsula. Most of the outages were caused by broken tree tops and limbs.

B.C. Telephone Co. reported a few lines down, but no major interruptions.

The weather office at the airport said a gale warning for Georgia Strait and small craft warning for Juan de Fuca Strait will probably remain in effect until Sunday.

Dissatisfaction Seen In Leadership of IWA

By BOB MITCHELL

Dissatisfaction with leadership of the International Woodworkers of America could unseat regional president Jack Moore following the IWA convention next week.

Several members of the IWA negotiating committee are reported disenchanted with Moore's leadership during the recent inquiry into the forest industry dispute headed by Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz.

At least four members of the negotiating committee — all of them presidents of various B.C. locals — have indicated they will support regional vice-president Jack MacKenzie as a presidential candidate.

Rank and file union members will elect the president within 60 days after the convention.

EIGHT YEARS

MacKenzie backers include Murray Drew of Victoria, Weldon Jubenville of Duncan, Walter Allen of Port Alberni and Syd Thompson of Vancouver.

Moore, who came from Port Alberni, and MacKenzie, who was once president of the Victoria local, have held their respective executive positions for eight years.

Moore resigned as chairman of the negotiating committee in August when the committee voted to recommend rejection of the Nemetz report.

MacKenzie said Thursday he made up his mind to challenge Moore as a result of what happened during negotiations.

"My concern over lack of leadership has been steadily growing and came to a head during the recent negotiations when Jack Moore, in an abortive attempt to force his will on the majority of the negotiating committee, abdicated his responsibility as president by resigning as chairman of the negotiating committee," MacKenzie said.

The IWA's western region includes the four western provinces and a membership of 40,000, most of it in B.C.

HOFFMAN PREDICTS INFLUX OF YIPPIES

CALGARY (CP)—Abbie Hoffman, self-styled Yippie leader, said Friday that by spring 1,000 revolutionaries will have left the U.S. to seek refuge in Canada.

He urged Young Canadians to make sure the government will offer political asylum.

Hands of the Clock Told End of WW II

TORONTO (CP) — John Diefenbaker says former Prime Minister William Lyon Mackenzie King, clad in pyjamas, looked at the hands of the clock at 10:20 a.m. June 14, 1940, and predicted Germany would lose the Second World War.

In an interview Friday, Mr. Diefenbaker, also a former prime minister, reminisced before his 75th birthday next week, and said the incident took place as members of Parliament listened to the war news in a back room of the House of Commons where the prime minister liked to sleep in times of stress.

He said that Mr. King would not make any decision, in cabinet or out of it, unless the hands of the clock were in opposite directions, or unless one hand covered the other.

Mr. Diefenbaker recalled that as the members sat in the room, Mr. King was asked if it was true that Paris had fallen.

"Mackenzie King nodded and walked over to the clock on the wall and looked at it. The time was exactly 10:20 a.m.

"Then the prime minister said: 'Gentlemen, it's going to be all right. The Germans are not going to win the war. I know because the hour hand and minute hand of the clock are pointing in exactly opposite directions'."

raged" that the government appeared to be "bending over backwards" to prevent as thorough an airing of the opposition to the mine's application as could be mustered.

"Their (the pollution control branch) approach should be the other way around, to interpret the law in as liberal a manner as possible in these things," he said.

OBJECTIONS

"Instead, they seem to represent deliberate government attempts to muffle objections by making it as inconvenient as possible for anyone with a real interest in pollution control."

Horn said he and the SPEC party — as well as others trying to be present for the hearing — were finding it difficult to find accommodation at Port Hardy, or even to get there.

The SPEC group finally was able to find a basement in a private home where they will be permitted to bunk in sleeping bags, but have been unable to get plane reservations or even to confirm space on the Kelsey Bay Ferry to make the trip by car.

Objectors scheduled to be heard are E. R. Morton, Cowichan Station; Roger Prentice, North Vancouver, the Pacific Salmon Society, Vancouver; and Mrs. Elaine Price, Duncan.

"Mrs. Price is concerned in particular because she has been unable to find accommodation anywhere in the area," Horn said.

EARLIER CASE

The hearing was called following a B.C. Supreme Court ruling that Venables had not acted in a judicial manner in an earlier case, in which no inquiry had been held.

The SPEC brief is especially concerned that a ruling favorable to Utah at Port Hardy would be a dangerous precedent.

Noting that the federal fisheries department had considered the Rupert Inlet dumping plan the "lesser of two evils" in disposing of the mine's wastes, the brief says:

"If this can be interpreted as reluctant approval of this application, what would their reaction be to the fact that four other mining companies have signified their intentions of mining in the same general area . . ."

Horn said that since development of the Utah project had proceeded to the extent it has, a restricted hearing of objections to their plans was making a "farce" of serious attempts to control pollution in the province.

Business Seminar Tuesday

A three-hour seminar on communicating in business and industry will be offered Tuesday as the first in a three-part series by Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

About 25 registrations for the inaugural session at the Imperfal Inn at 9 a.m., followed by luncheon, have been received by the chamber office.

Management condultants Woods, Gordon and Co. are arranging the study, in which organization consultant Godfrey H. Chowne, Ronald G. Crampton, of Clarkson, Gordon and Co., and G. Hardy Nielsen, will lead discussion.

How to identify, reduce, and solve communication breakdown in a corporation will be among the subjects, relating to employees, clients, managers, new programs, political issues, union negociations and community relations.

Workmen Honored For Saving Comrade

Two longshoremen have been awarded Workmen's Compensation Board Bravery Awards for saving a fellow worker from drowning in the Port Alberni harbor last January.

Brian J. Davis, 23, of Victoria, and Thomas Watts, 62, of Port Alberni received the awards and $500 each from Labor Minister Leslie Peterson at a dinner in their honor in Port Alberni Friday night.

24-FOOT FALL

Co-worker Fred Jackson was supervising the loading of a ship in Port Alberni when he was knocked over the ship's side by a timber from a landed load.

He fell 24 feet and landed with his body draped across a fender log between the ship and the dock. Jackson suffered multiple injuries, including a skull fracture, and lay unconsious with his head in the water.

At the cry of "man overboard," Davis rigged a rope from the ship, slid down the fender log and pulled Jackson's head from the water. Watts, a foreman for the stevedoring company, followed Davis down the rope and both men held Jackson out of the water on the slippery log until a stretcher could be lowered.

Jackson was in hospital for seven weeks and is recovering at home in Errington, B.C.

The citations were the 16th and 17th under the bravery awards program since its inception in 1968.

TAIPEI (AP) — Police said 85 persons were killed and 42 are missing in accidents attributed to Typhoon Fran, which struck Formosa. The national highway bureau said the typhoon caused $2.5-million damage to Formosa's highways.

Savage Whirlwind Kills 30 in Venice

VENICE (AP) — A short-lived whirlwind wrought destruction and death in the suburbs and on the lagoon of this historic Italian port city Friday night. It picked up a crowded passenger boat "like a toothpik," spun it in the air and plunged it back into the water, where it sank in 30 seconds.

Frogmen recovered 18 bodies, and 30 other persons were rescued. The remaining toll on land was 12 killed and about 200 injured, police said.

"I saw the whirlwind whisk by," a gondolier said. "It picked up the motorboat like a toothpick, held it in the air and then threw it back into the water like a cannonball.

"There wasn't a shout. Nobody had time to realize what was going on. I only heard the bang of the metal being twisted as if it were a feather."

The survivors, including Enzo Bullo, the pilot, fell from the craft while it was in the air, police said.

DAMAGE WIDESPREAD

"I tried to steer the wheel away, but I couldn't do a thing," Bullo said, "suddenly I found myself in mid-air, the boat plunging into the water under me. I fell into the lagoon, and I looked around for any possible survivors. But I was dazed, half crazy, and I barely managed to get to shore."

Authorities estimated the wind speed at 125 miles an hour. The whirlwind, similar to a tornado, splintered houses, shops and street stands, then dissipated over the Gulf of Venice. Electrical power was disrupted throughout the canal city.

Police said damage was confined mainly to private buildings, although a hospital and soccer stadium received heavy damage. The twister spared the city's art treasures in St. Mark's Square and along the Grand Canal.

The 25-ton motorboat had just pulled in to St. Elena Island, off St. Mark's Basin, when the wind struck, demolishing the dock and capsizing a number of empty boats.

Passersby began rescue activities, some swimming to the stunned survivors. Then frogmen took over. Policemen and Italian soldiers were called to control anxious crowds.

"The boat looks like a car after a head-on collision," one diver said after inspecting the craft on the bottom. "It's all in one piece, but all broken up, the roof caved in, the seats all ripped away and the windows no longer there."

The lagoon has been the site of many disasters, but none has taken so high a death toll in recent years.

Venice was hit by a wind-swept high tide almost four years ago, when sea water caused an estimated $1.6 million damage.

Stoke City Beats Leeds United 3-0

LONDON (CP) — Leeds United suffered its first defeat of the English soccer season when it lost 3-0 today to Stoke City. The result opened up the race in the English First Division.

Despite the defeat, Leeds still is on top with 13 points. Manchester City, 1-0 winner over Nottingham Forest, has 12 points. Crystal Palace and Arsenal are tied with 11, while five teams are bracketed at nine—Southampton, Chelsea, Manchester United, Liverpool and Tottenham.

The season has only started, however, with some teams having played eight games in a schedule that calls for 42.

PORT HARDY – ONCE QUIET AND LITTLE

Botched Up With Old and New

By DONNA CLEMENTS
Times Staff

PORT HARDY — It was only a few years ago that life in this far-flung wilderness of northern Vancouver Island was simple, quiet and at the worst, lonely.

Now things are becoming much more complicated. The modern industrial state, with all its benefits and headaches, is moving in fast.

Take for example Port Hardy, the largest of a string of small settlements now connected to each other (but not to the rest of the Island) by a 50-mile-long stretch of highway on the northern tip of the Island.

In 10 years Port Hardy's population has jumped from 600 to 2,500, and next year, when Utah Construction and Mining Company starts its large-scale strip-mining operation, the population will likely double.

As a result, this once quiet little village has become a botch-up of half-century-old buildings intermingled with Dong Chong's new shopping centre, a new post office, a modern hotel, and new banks, garages and trailers scrambled around dusty crooked streets.

Unhappy with what Port Hardy has become are old-timers like Mr. and Mrs. John Nicholson.

"They tried to make something out of what was not here," said Nicholson, 64. "The layout of this town is crazy. There has been no planning. They should have picked another nearby area and left us to ourselves."

The Nicholsons were among the 12 families that moved into Port Hardy in 1925 from its original site across Hardy Bay. Nicholson, who has fished, logged and been assistant postmaster in this community, said the main industries before Utah came were the fish cannery, clams and logging.

"We are not supposed to eat clams now because they are polluted," he said. "The town sewer did it. I think they are now applying for a treatment plant to clean it up."

They say they miss their freedom since a regional district was formed and as one visiting Victoria businessman put it: "There are more restrictions, regulatians and bylaws than in the city of Victoria."

The businessman, who declined to give his name, said the town will not grow beyond 5,000 persons because of the mentality of the ruling elite. The mayor and aldermen, who are key business owners, "won't let anyone else in."

Besides, he said, "this area is no good for agriculture because there is no soil. It costs a fortune to clear the land because the trees and roots are a maze. When putting in a septic tank you hit water even before you are halfway to the required depth."

NICHOLSON
. . . 'it wasn't here'

Costs for food and materials are high because they have to be shipped in by barge.

The main ways of reaching this isolated region — which also includes Telegraph Cove, Kokish, Alert Bay, Port McNeill and Port Alice — are by 168-mile drive from Campbell River, 93 miles of which are on a logging road from Gold River, and by a four-hour-long trip on the Island Princess from Kelsey Bay to Beaver Cove. To get on the ferry, which usually only takes 12 cars, one has to make reservations.

Easier encroachment by civilization won't happen until around 1978 when a highway from Kelsey Bay to Port Hardy is proposed for completion.

The swiftest and most comfortable way in is by air, and Port Hardy does have a modern terminal boasting three runways, the longest being 5,000 feet long. Two Boeing 707 jets and two turbine Convair planes land and take off twice a day.

Despite transportation problems, tourists are becoming more plentiful, drawn by the area's main attractions: fishing, boating and hunting.

Tourists also face bad public serivce, especially in hotels. Even the new hotels at Port McNeill and Port Hardy provide below par service, and if anyone complains about it there is nowhere else to go.

The northern Island is not an exciting place for women unless they like tramping around the wilds with the men.

For entertainment I sat in the Port Hardy airport, and if I wanted a beer there was the Canadian Legion where there are 50 men for every woman.

At Kokish, a logging camp of 600 under Crown Zellerbach's Beaver Cove division, the women do manage to keep busy. They have formed a fire department so they can handle any fires while the men are working in the woods.

Housewives finish their work in a matter of hours in the morning and usually spend the rest of their day driving to Port Hardy or Port McNeill to shop or gossip over coffee. There are no secrets in Kokish.

One 30-year-old housewife said it has been a real experience living in Kokish since she moved there as a bride 10 years ago.

Then, the only way in was by boat and there was no contact with other nearby communities. "The only form of entertainment was to have babies."

She said living in the camp became fun when the highway connected the communties in 1964. But now she has had enough of this life and would like to move to a city.

Perhaps the quietest place in the area is Telegraph Cove, a lumber mill village of 50 people.

Marvin Farrant who went there at nine says, plainly, 27 years later: "There is no pace to life here."

Wooden homes, mostly built in 1928 when the mill opened are along the waterfront and face an unusual 1,000-foot-long board street.

Port McNeill, a mixture of old and new homes 14 miles north of Kokish, is smaller than Port Hardy but it seems to be better planned. It has the high school for all of northern Vancouver Island students, and they live in residences erected by the school.

Port Alice, 47 miles southwest of Port McNeill on Neuroutsos Inlet, faced an ocean of polluted foam so bad it had to be moved two miles away to Rumble Beach. The reason for the pollution: Rayonier Co. pulp mill, employer of most of the residents.

Outside of Alert Bay, which is on an island northeast of Beaver Cove, Port Alice is the only place with a hospital, and it is still located on the old town site.

Because of the scarcity of medical facilties, some of the area's women said the only time they get out of the northern part of the island is when they are pregnant and can go for a monthly checkup to Vancouver or Campbell River.

RANGOON DECLINING

Burma—Progress Passed It

New York Times

RANGOON, Burma — You can still hear their paddles on the Rangoon River.

The boatmen are too poor to equip their small craft with the outboard motors that have modernized and polluted the rivers of Bangkok, Saigon and Pnompenh and filled the ports with din and fumes.

The other cities of the region have the turmoil that goes with commerce and unequal prosperity — traffic, hawkers, construction, garbage in the streets, beggars and prostitutes.

Rangoon is a city of 1.7 million with little noise other than that of people walking and talking. It is a city of old buildings crumbling rather than new buildings rising, of shuttered shops and so little traffic that barefoot boys play soccer in parking lots downtown.

Rangoon, the capital of a country that eight years ago was put on the Burmese way to socialism under military rule, has oarsmen rhythmically swinging their paddles on the river and streets safe from the hordes of noisy Japanese motorcycles that pose a threat in other cities of Southeast Asia.

It also has garbage in the streets and beggars. It is difficult to tell whether the absence of prostitutes is due more to the puritanism of Gen. Ne Win, the chairman of the Revolutionary Council, or the absence of tourists and the poverty of local customers.

"We know other cities in Asia have downtown skyscrapers and wide boulevards and night clubs," an officer occupying a high government post normally held by civilians said. "But most people live in the country and such progress only widens the gap betwen city and country.

"What we are doing is tedious and a little bit slow, but we want the whole country to come up together."

While waiting for the joint ascension, however, Burmese say that the gap is being narrowed not by a rise in the countryside but by the decline of Rangoon.

The capital, once a thriving trading centre, has been stilled by nationalism on all but the smallest shops and the exodus of the Chinese and Indian traders who formed the backbone of Rangoon's commerce.

Public entertainment is limited almost wholly to sports and the crowded movie house, where ticket lines are longer than those outside the people's stores which sell rationed necessities such as rice and fishpaste and cotton skirt that is worn by men and skit that is worn by men and women alike.

A Good Step Forward

THE PROPOSED PLEBISCITE for a two-year college to be established at the Institute for Adult Studies campus on Lansdowne Road should present no problem to this community. The plan should be adopted with a resounding affirmative vote.

The advantages of such a college will be many. In bare financial terms it will provide a more favorable sharing basis for the local taxpayers, since the province will take up 60 per cent of the costs instead of 47 per cent under the present setup. But the benefits will far exceed this aspect. With college status, the institution will offer students courses which will command credit at university, it will be able to co-operate closely with the local vocational school as well as with the Burnaby school, it will be able to continue the good work it is doing with teenagers and adults who endeavor to make up courses or improve their earning abilities, and it will still provide the special classes for Indian students — one of the excellent features of the present Institute.

The fact that Grade 13 will be eliminated by the Department of Education at the end of the present school year, of course, adds necessity to benefit as a reason for college status. The college will be the only way in which students may get first year university credits without attending university at higher cost. And this consideration leads to another important factor, which is that the new college should ease a good deal of the pressure on the University of Victoria in coping with the annual flood of first and second year students.

This will assist the university in holding its total enrolment to a reasonable figure and thus help to avoid the giantism which eventually would constitute a serious threat to the environment and quality of the Gordon Head institution.

It will be essential, to reap the greatest benefit, for the new college to retain as much flexibility as possible. Its purpose will be not merely to offer university academic courses but also a useful array of technological training courses which will fill a real need in the community and equip young and old for advanced employment in this province. We live in rapidly changing times with rapidly changing demands on the people who keep the wheels of industry and commerce turning. It is therefore necessary to provide training in an ever-wider field of techniques. This is what the people will be voting for in the plebiscite. We should lose no time in getting the program under way.

Service Through Rescue

THE WORK LOAD OF THE RESCUE Co-ordination Centre, formerly the air-sea rescue organization, is increasing and funds are running low, Rear-Admiral Richard Leir, Commander Maritime Command Pacific, reports, with the suggestion that part of the tab be picked up by provincial authorities and private citizens. He also urges that privately-owned aircraft be required to carry homing devices which would help searchers to locate them when they are forced down or crash in isolated locations.

The admiral's anxiety is understandable. More people are acquiring more aircraft and pleasure boats. Under existing circumstances, the higher totals present a potential for more accidents — and the potential is being realized. That means that the expensive equipment of the Rescue Co-ordination Centre is brought into heavier use and costs mount at a time when federal budget policy calls for reduced expenditure.

There are a number of protective measures which the private owners of aircraft and boats should automatically adopt, among them adequate equipment to meet an emergency, and this includes radio homing devices to assist in locating downed aircraft. Pleasure boatmen and airmen should not take chances which almost inevitably invite accidents, for not only are search and rescue efforts costly, but they endanger the lives of crews which go out to render aid. The humanitarian effort cannot be denied, but it should not be brought into play through careless disregard for elementary precautions.

Even with that proviso, it appears that more money is needed for the legitimate requirements of search and rescue. This is a service which should not languish for lack of funds, and there would be wide public approval of a further use of Defence Department facilities in this regard, perhaps accompanied by some form of insurance provision by the individuals whose welfare is at stake.

Chile Elects Marxist

THE EXPRESSION "SABRE rattling" is said to have originated in Chile many years ago when military officers went to parliament and rattled their swords in the gallery to back up their demands. And after Marxist Salvador Allende's victory in Chile's election last week it would be an understatement to say the country's conservative military forces are themselves rattled. In fact most of Latin America's military regimes view the results of the free Chilean election with alarm.

Military sources in Rio de Janiero claim the Marxist victory is a greater threat to hemispheric security than Cuba. In Chile itself there has been a run on chartered banks and the Santiago stock exchange, which lists only about 100 closely held companies, is reported in sharp decline. The fact that the 100 companies are controlled by a small number of families in a poverty-striken land may explain why, according to Latin American Week, "more than 50 per cent of the country backs some form of socialism."

By nationalizing the banking system, and instituting agrarian reform, Allende hopes to destroy the political and economic power of Chile's few wealthy families. Asked at a recent press conference if his left-wing coalition planned to establish a one-party system, Allende replied, "Never." With promised support from the Christian Democrats Allende will have a solid majority in the Chilean Congress. As the first avowed Marxist to be freely elected head of a Latin American country, Allende's administration faces dangerous political problems on a continent dominated by military dictatorships. If more conventional forms of democracy had been allowed to develop in Latin America, perhaps hemispheric military establishments would not have to worry about a freely elected Marxist today.

President's Protest

Under the heading "Their Own Mag — The Inside Look At Doctors' Lives" on September 9, 1970, Mr. Jack Scott wrote an article that can only reflect adversely on your newspaper and Mr. Scott. After spending "two full, fascinating hours" the writer has obviously failed to appreciate that the source of his information is a non-medical magazine. "Canadian Doctor" is published by National Business Publications and describes itself as accepting articles in the field of medical business, economics, management and ethics. It is clearly not written by, nor produced by, doctors, and in fact, is mailed to doctors gratuitously, probably by the advertisers.

As President of the Victoria Medical Society, I wish to protest the publication of such a misleading article and can only condemn the innuendo implicit in it, as poor journalism, poor research and a reflection of the attitude of your newspaper towards our profession. —JOHN F. HIGGINS, MD, President, Victoria Medical Society.

Question of Taste

Recently you published a summary of salaries paid, via Medicare, to the medical profession. This was, I feel, in very poor taste. Our doctors are providing a wonderful service for the people. To offset the bad taste you have left with us, publish a full account of all salaries paid to all members of the government in general. After all, what do they as a whole do for the people? Nothing, just promises.— "M.E.P."

EVEN AWAY FROM CITIES

By C. L. SULZBERGER

In the Pollution War 'The Enemy Is Us'

ONE has become accustomed to gasping through today's "gray" and "brown" cities, defined according to the order and type of their polluted atmosphere. It is when one escapes to distant hills, forests and beaches and finds them also blemished—discovering plastic containers bobbing down Colorado's Roaring Fork and tin cans littering the limpid Frying Pan—only then does one see the problem's all-embracing extent.

Sulzberger

A recent pamphlet ("Cleaning House —Inside the Ecology Revolution") observes: "In the immortal words of Pogo, 'we have met the enemy and he is us'."

This is a striking and embarrassing truth for, with any kind of systematic ban that prevented American society from destroying itself, the menace could yet be met. But the disaster rate rapidly approaches terrible proportions.

Prof. R. Stephen Berry of the University of Chicago makes the point in a recent issue of the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists that "the death rate in Vietnam has been between 20 and 40 per 100,000 per week. This . . . is roughly 10 times that of November 5 to 11, 1969, in (a) Chicago (smog). In plain words we have been killing ourselves with air pollution, but only at a rate that society seems willing to sustain."

International Problem

This is an international problem directly related to the degree of industrialization and social advance in all countries. I wrote about it recently in the Soviet Union, which has now achieved an economic breakthrough to the level where the disadvantages of what used to be called progress must be weighed against its advantages. Some of France's most famous Normandy chalk streams have recently been poisoned by detergents and are now suddenly troutless.

Air and water spoliation are largely caused by automobiles, factories and faulty garbage disposal. Vast stretches of American beach have been ruined by oil leaks.

Pollution is so bad in some of the Great Lakes that parts of them have actually become fire hazards! In Denver, a so-called "brown air city," the morning is sometimes visibly brown from nitrogen dioxide steaming from the early traffic jam.

Berry envisions a time 50 years hence when, if nothing sufficient is done to avoid the threat, "there will be enough carbon dioxide in the atmosphere to create a greenhouse effect, melt the polar icecaps and inundate the coastal cities . . .

"Another favorite apocalypse of my own is due to the world-wide appearance of lead in the atmosphere . . . one of the effects of chronic lead poisoning is to make its victims stupid. I sometimes think we have passed that critical threshold."

Every American already suffers in one or another degree from this creeping disaster (just as every other human will when his or her country climbs the industrialization ladder). Nevertheless, insufficient protest has been staged and the amount of political interest in this vital question is still inadequate.

Predictable Danger

No group has yet managed to persuade the nation that this predictable danger is even greater, if less emotional or dramatic, than that of the Indochina war. As Prof. Norman F. Ramsey of Harvard writes:

"College students, while throwing empty beer cans along the side of the road from their maladjusted and fume-producing automobiles, indignantly blame the military-industrial complex for its indifference to human environment because the establishment pollutes the atmosphere with its factories and power plants and permits the manufacture of automobiles with internal combustion engines."

Modern democratic societies do not succeed in encouraging enough individual discipline and self-restraint to face the problem by voluntary action. Legal sanctions are required. And, since the general public—Pogo's "us"—is the main culprit as well as the main victim, a system of anti-pollution taxes should clearly be instituted on city, state and nation-wide bases.

Heavy Fines

Moreover, power companies and other energy producers must face heavy fines if they don't install pollution-control equipment. And the public should be fined for negligence—on a deliberately punitive basis.

Although the critical pollution level has only so far been approached in but a few highly "advanced" nations, some kind of international convention on sanitation and ecology needs to be drafted. It isn't going to matter to New York, Leningrad, London or Marseille if the polar icecaps are melted by a "greenhouse effect" caused in someone else's country; all would be inundated together.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

By WILLIAM R. FRYE

Turning in Revulsion From the Skyjackers

FACED with the graphic ordeal of several hundred hijacked airline passengers who were, in effect, kidnapped to Jordan, the UN and world chanelleries set about in greater earnest this past week to see if they could prevent a repetition of the crime. It was not an easy undertaking. A theoretical answer might be to shut off all prospect of reward for hijackings, and thus remove the motive for them.

Frye

This could be done, again theoretically, by an international agreement never to bargain for the release of hostages nor to pay any price whatsoever for their safety.

Once the seizure of human beings ceased to provide their captors with leverage, the unprofitability of the crime would discourage its commission, the theory goes.

Impossible To Comply

But this is like telling a man not to pay ransom for a kidnapped relative. He may know in theory that it is the right course to follow, but in practice it is virtually impossible for him to comply. His actions are not determined by computers.

Nor is it persuasive for a man to threaten an action which his adversary is persuaded he will not take. All the credibility then lies with the adversary.

Penalties for hijackers who are caught could be made more swift and severe. Kidnapping has long been a capital offence, and hijacking an airplane for the purpose of demanding political ransom is an analogous act. Even if ransom is not demanded, it is still a serious crime to endanger the lives of others.

Crackdown Difficult

But a crackdown via increased penalties would require virtually universal world-wide co-operation. Several key Arab states are either unwilling or unable to enforce such measures on the Palestinian commandos.

The world's airlines could boycott countries which fail to enforce the penalties. But boycott is not a very effective weapon; and in this instance, it might serve to bring the Arab governments and the commandos together. These two elements are now usefully divided.

This restricts the options to defensive measures, such as the posting of armed guards on all flights, and the mobilization of moral and diplomatic pressures through international forums.

Guards have long been assigned to Israeli aircraft. One succeeded in frustrating an attempted hijacking this past week. The Palestinians, in a moment of supreme, if apparently unconscious, irony protested that the presence of the guards was "a gross violation of international law."

(It is, of course, an offence for an armed foreigner to enter the jurisdiction of a nation-state without authorization, as guards would do when the plane they were protecting entered another country's air space. But bilateral or multilateral agreements could waive this rule.)

In the realm of intangible pressure, the UN, the International Civil Aviation Organization, and the airline pilots have all tried to arouse world opinion. Each passed strongly-worded resolutions last year when the problem first arose in critical form.

One reason why the UN General Assembly was not able to do more was that there was heel-dragging by the Soviet bloc and by some Asian states sympathetic to the Arab cause. Recent events which have estranged the governments of Egypt and Jordan from the fedayeen have also prompted Moscow to urge that the commandos be curbed. Indeed, Moscow broke with them first.

Widespread Outrage

This, together with widespread outrage at the hijackers' tactics, may well have prepared the way for stronger action this year.

There is sometimes a tendency to belittle moral pressure as high-minded but ineffectual. It can, of course, be exactly that. But in the present instance, even Arab papers have been pointing out to the commandos that their acts have damaged their cause.

Few people are more totally dependent upon world sympathy than the Arab refugees, from whom the fedayeen are primarily drawn. There has been, until now, a considerable reservoir of such sympathy.

These people have endured great anguish and privation for more than 20 years; and if there is a peace settlement, their hope of regaining control of their homeland will be forever gone. It is understandable that they might feel desperate.

Need Generous Revisions

But a peace settlement could, and of course to be generally acceptable would have to, include generous provision for their future. It might help if, even before serious negotiation takes place on other Arab-Israel issues, the outlines of a refugee settlement were to be hammered out and agreed upon.

The refugee problem has been postponed because it is so formidably difficult, and because Israel could afford to be more generous in conditions of peace (or prospective peace) than she could in continued tension and war.

But postponement has not worked. It is further imperilling the already fragile prospect of negotiations on other Arab-Israel issues. The lesson of the past week is that, in this case, the hardest problem cannot be safely left until last.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

For those who enjoy the outdoors the different methods of seed distribution of various plants provide an interesting study.

Perhaps those of the compositae family are the most noticeable because their fluffy seeds are wind-carried. They are the dandelion, thistle, asters and the groundsel grown in gardens.

Each tiny seed is attached to its own parachute that can be lifted by the wind and carried to a new site. In this manner they "march down the road" — as has the oyster plant that a few years ago seemed to be close to the town and now is found in the Highland district.

Others scattered by the winds have wings, among them the Douglas fir, red cedar, spruces and pines. As the seeds fall, they spiral to the ground and the wind will move them to a new location from under the parent tree. There they can obtain the necessary sunlight they need to grow.

The maples have seeds in pairs and are distinct from those of other species. The two seed cases, each connected one seed to one wing, are joined on a single stalk and often in clusters. The seed will germinate almost as soon as it reaches moist soil.

Some seeds are scattered by mechanical means. In the broom and the peas and vetches, the pods, when ripe, give a sudden twist and the seeds are thrown out in an arc.

Then there are those that are "hitch-hikers" — the cleavers and the burrs. Each tiny seed has a hook which it attaches to some animal or bird and so travels from place to place. Some of these seeds are round while others are dart-shaped.

There are a great many seeds that are dispersed by birds that eat the pulp surrounding the hard nut-like seed. The hard husk is not absorbed by the bird and so passes through its intestinal tract and is dropped to ground where it can germinate and grow. Included in this group are holly, cherries, huckleberries, the hawthornes and cascara.

Others employ gravity, like the Easter lily, shooting star, seablush and the mimulas.

Seeds can be berry-like, with woody husks. Some are smooth, some hairy, some with barbs or hooks, some grow in clusters, others singly.

All plants grow many more seeds than are necessary for reproduction of the species, the surplus being used in very many ways such as food for animals and man.

Others, broken up in the ground, provide substances having the necessary ingredients to sustain survivors.

Beside plants which produce seed there are many others that reproduce by bulbs or tubers and corms.

'Human Relations Workshops'... or Brainwashing?

By ERNEST E. BARR

(Mr. Barr is a member of the Toronto Board of Education and chairman of its Mental Health Committee. He wrote this article for the Star.)

The Toronto Board of Education is planning a "human relations workshop" from Sept. 25-27 for its trustees. In straightforward language, this means that the board probably intends to embark upon a program of T-groups and sensitivity training, and that the trustees are to be their own first guinea pigs.

Ron Jones, the new director of education, is already on public record as being in favor of sensitivity training, and in the future I envision routine sensitivity training for all teachers.

The objectives of the September workshop, as outlined by Harvey A. Silver, PhD, and Henry D. Labatte, MA, the psychologists who are preparing it, are:

'Utilize Emotions'

1. To enable each participant to understand behavior of groups, his/her own behavior in interaction with others, how personal communication can be facilitated, how our own needs and emotions can be utilized positively and negatively;

2. To discuss how groups solve problems and make decisions;

3. To understand the place of groups in an organization and community.

The methods used to attain these ends include lectures, group talks, movies, role-playing, spontaneous case studies, group discussions, etc.

That these T-groups and sessions in sensitivity training should be termed "human relations workshops" is most ironical, because it seems to me the aim is to further dehumanize the individual in what is essentially a cunning and well-concealed form of Pavlovian conditioning. While the end sought, according to the implications of the name, is humanism—adding a "human" touch to education, or making people more "humane"—the truth is the exact antithesis of this.

You train seals for their performance at the circus; you train dogs for their performance on the hunt; and you "train" trustees, teachers, and officials so that they, too, will "perform" properly in the educational arena. The end product aimed at by sensitivity training and T-groups ("T" for training) is the "nice" trustee, teacher or official, who never loses his temper or gets "mad," who always agrees with everyone and is easy to convince.

In short, the "ideal" trustee, teacher or official should be the new personality-type so sought after today: the nonperson who has developed what Erich Fromm calls a marketing orientation. Such people have no character and no real character structure. They say, in essence: "I am whatever you want me to be." Their character structure and "feeling" apparatus become a hollow vessel, ever waiting to be filled from the outside.

It is not enough that a man's thoughts should originate outside of him, and be fed into his thinking apparatus as data is fed into a computer. Now his "feelings," which would have to originate deep in the inner core of his inner self in order to be rightly classified as "his," must also originate outside.

Feels, Reels

Trustees, teacher and officials alike will all be told not only what to "think" but even what to "feel." The rationale behind this is a modified version of the slogan in "Brave New World." "When the trustee (teacher or official) feels, the bureaucracy reels!"

Just as one oils machinery, so that each cog functions with a bare minimum of friction, so also one "oils" people. As cogs in the educational bureaucracy machinery, teachers, trustees and officials must be properly greased to operate smoothly.

Sensitivity training and T-groups are the diagnostic devices of the "adjustment" psychologist, who is the high priest of the new, smoothly run bureaucracy. He assists in isolating the squeaking wheels which are to get the "oil." No longer must anyone be interested in the nitty gritty of the issues; the principal aim is to avoid confrontations and conflict.

The ideal bureaucratic type turned out through this kind of training can best be described as "greasy." Slippery as an eel, it is impossible to tack him down on anything. He has no firm opinions, no fundamental unalterable principles, and no inner self. Truthfulness, courage, sincerity, inner conviction, humaneness, reason, and so on—all these are nonessential, unwanted commodities, which are readily dissolved and washed away in the "oil" from the "oilers."

The result is the nonperson, the "faceless man" who fits so well into the machinery of the modern bureaucracy — The True Believer of Eric Hoffer, The Organization Man of William H. Whyte, and the alienated personality of Feuerbach, Marx, Erich Fromm, Karen Horney, Ernest Schachtel and others.

The people who "sell" this type of psychology often speak of the problem of alienation in modern society, but they mean something that is the exact opposite of what these writers above mean by it. The Byles report on alienated youth in Metro Toronto is an excellent illustration of this. Byles and his committee define alienation as "the process of becoming estranged from social institutions." In terms of Marx, Fromm and others, this would mean alienation from conformity, or alienation from alienation.

The solutions proposed by the Byles report are all aimed at making an alienated, dehumanizing bureaucracy palatable. Like the department of love in Orwell's "1984," the aim is to confuse the citizen so badly that he gives up thinking and feeling. Then comes the savior — the psychologist who can move in and do his thinking and feeling for him.

Contented Cows

The Toronto Board of Education has long been accused of 1984 tactics, and only a few years ago trustee Barry Lowes publicly stated that some of our secondary schools are operated like totalitarian states. All this appears to be a thing of the past. We are now moving into an era of Brave New World, where everyone is conditioned to be placid and essentially without feelings; where the rebellious are converted into contented cows.

It is true that not all the products of T-groups and sensitivity training turn out this way. But those who do not are rapidly weeded out by the bureaucracy, for they are the squeaking wheels which do not respond to the psychologist's "oil." The history of sensitivity training and T-groups in industry shows that people who "fail" the course do not last long on the job in the bureaucracy which initiates the program.

A recent article on this very topic is found in a magazine for laymen published by the American Medical Association. In it we are reminded that the Mental Health Committee of the AMA does not endorse T-groups and sensitivity training.

The person who has fought most valiantly against this dehumanizing and alienating "adjustment" type of psychology is Erich Fromm; and in one of his most recent letters to me he spoke of "the enlightened, smooth bureaucrats of the modern enterprise who go in for T-groups and sensitivity training."

In "The Sane Society," Fromm writes; "There are many exceptions to this among psychiatrists, psychologists and psychoanalysts, but it becomes increasingly clear that these professions are in the process of becoming a serious danger to the development of man, that their practitioners are evolving into the priests of the new religion of fun, consumption and selflessness, into the specialists of manipulation, into the spokesmen for the alienated personality."

Let Hair Down

In these human relations groups, people are encouraged to let their hair down and let themselves go. In this way, they "defuse" the feelings within themselves. The tensions inside are relieved, at least temporarily.

Those who "sell" this type of therapy create the impression that self-knowledge is the aim. But it is not. The participant is taught what the "normal" person is, and, correspondingly, what is wrong with him. The emphasis is on adjustment. It is no coincidence that the division of the board which handles psychological services called the Child Adjustment Services.

In the future, if we as trustees continue in the direction we are going, the CAS will be requested to classify all students according to intelligence tests. Then, as in "Brave New World," we can create a psychological caste system ranging from the alpha plus, who runs society, to the delta minus, who is employed as a machine-minder.

JFK Persuaded Against Fulbright Appointment

THE NATION

The taped interviews which are being added to the archives that will ultimately find their way into the John F. Kennedy Library — or those of them which have been made public thus far — have added a new dimension of interest and relevance to the official record.

For example, one learns that after his election President Kennedy called on Dean Acheson in Georgetown and indicated that he might appoint Sen. J. W. Fulbright as his Secretary of State. Fulbright, he said, "ran the Foreign Relations Committee pretty well and seemed to know a good deal about foreign affairs."

Acheson advised against the appointment. The Senator, he warned, was "not as solid and serious a man as you need for this position. I've always thought that he had some of the qualities of a dilettante. He likes to criticize — he likes to call for brave, bold new ideas and he doesn't have a great many brave, bold new ideas."

But he could suggest just the man for the job — a man Mr. Kennedy did not know — Dean Rusk, who was "strong and loyal and good in every way."

There has always been an implausible quality about the Rusk appointment. Why would the President name as Secretary of State — even assuming that he intended to direct his own foreign policy — a man of whom he knew so little? The Acheson endorsement, while it may not have been conclusive, provides a partial answer.

In the wake of news stories about the Acheson interview, Senator Fulbright caught everyone more or less off guard by proposing that the United States enter into a bilateral guarantee of the territory and independence of Israel within the borders of 1967. As James Reston pointed out in The New York Times, it was "a surprising proposal from a surprising source at a surprising time."

ACHESON

In fact it might qualify as a brave, bold new idea if Mr. Acheson had not assured us that Senator Fulbright has few such ideas.

One can question the timing of the proposal. One can question the suggestion that the United Nations should impose a peace agreement. One can feel, too, that the United States should offer no guarantee until the parties immediately concerned have entered into a binding agreement to abjure war.

But the proposal is, as Reston notes, worth considering; more specifically, it is worth filing for future reference. Senator Fulbright has said what needs to be said — namely, that the U.S. has an obligation to prevent the destruction of Israel, a state it helped bring into being. This obligation cuts deeper than "national interest" or strategic consideration.

So a proposal of this sort, advanced by the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who can hardly be described as pro-Zionist, should be some assurance to the Israelis.

Senator Fulbright, one may be sure, did not expect the proposal to make much headway just now; it is, in any case, premature. All the same the proposal is merely another aspect of Fulbright's thinking and leadership in foreign affairs that makes us wish this "dilettante" had been Secretary of State during the years that post was held by Dean Rusk.

Perhaps even President Kennedy had second thoughts about whether he should have taken Acheson's advice or followed his own first impulse.

The Middle-Age Voyeurs

By EDMOND BOYD

Nowhere have I heard of a better example of what is implied by the generation gap than a small incident which arose during the recent rock festival at Mosport.

A number of hot, sweaty boys and girls thought it would be sport to go to a nearby mill pond, strip off all their clothes and plunge in. Hearing about this, a number of hot, sweaty suburban middle-agers though it would be sport to drive all the way to the mill pond and try to take photographs of them.

The middle-agers would no more dream of swimming nude in the mill pond than growing their hair long. But if by chance in any misguided moment they did, the teenagers would no more dream of spying on them than cutting their hair short.

Why does this spontaneous action and spontaneous reaction typify so much in the polarization between the generations?

Firstly, because the adults thought of nude bathing as naughty, it was nothing they would ever do themselves. The kids, however, felt that it broke no kind of moral code they acknowledged. It was just the natural thing to do on a hot day.

Secondly, the kids gave no thought to the implications of what they did in the eyes of adults. They just didn't care what anybody thought.

They were not interested, any more than they would bother to walk 10 yards out of their way to watch a bunch of adults cavorting skinny-pinny in a pool.

The middle-agers, however, were intensely interested in the kids' naked bodies. They were shocked by the public exposure, titillated by it, and probably envious of it.

In their minds, it was smutty and therefore exciting enough to make them stalk through the undergrowth, cameras and binoculars at the ready, their pulses quickening as fast as any peeping Tom's.

Some of these adults are almost certainly among those who are vocally anti-hippie, as they would call it. In their living-rooms they would loudly denounce the festival-goers as worthless immoral parasites.

Yet, given a chance, they want to see more of them, especially naked. Their attitude to pornography is probably the same. Even while condemning it, they surreptitiously sneak looks at it.

Violence too. While eloquent in their hatred of brutality, they will watch in fascination the most sadistic of movies.

It is this ambivalence, this hypocrisy, which drives the biggest single wedge between the generations. Observing it, no wonder youth tends to despise the establishment.

How can they trust adults when those who put them down may be the very ones who seek a vicarious thrill from being voyeurs at their tribal rites?

It is to the great credit of the police that they barred the audience from the pond, allowing the kids to bathe in privacy.

Not that the kids would have cared who saw them. It was the police who were disgusted by the photographers. Their crime was far worse than that of the swimmers.

Self-Improvement Once More

By ART STOTT

The lady looked up from her smocking to announce: "I think I'll take third-level sewing at adult education this year. It seems to me my progress, if I do say it myself, is sufficient to enter that grade and Kae, who wants to go this term, is pretty proficient too.

"Now when are you going to deliver your annual address on self-improvement and what you believe you should take this winter?"

"Is it going to be conversational French again, or are you skipping the gesture and foregoing the good resolution that never gets past the good resolution stage?"

I told her I wouldn't be talking conversational French this year. Since Walter Redel was pistol-whipped by the police for sight-seeing in Lower Town, I've sort of lost interest in revisiting Quebec, where I might use the language, and prospects of a trip to France glimmer so far in the future that I'd have forgotten anything I learned this year by the time we get there.

"If we have settled that, why don't you take up carpentry, rock work or furniture making?" she asked.

"They're not very intellectual courses," I told her.

"No," she agreed, "they aren't. But think of it in economic terms. You're still shaking from the price Jack quoted you for one-by-three tongue-and-groove to floor our three-and-a half by seven-foot back porch. At that price, you need to know how to saw straight, how to transfer measurements and how to avoid waste. And let's face it, your manual training years are almost half a century behind you.

"You've been collecting hardwood off the beach and you tell me of elaborate plans to produce some Danish-type furniture from it. It's a marvelous idea. You'll notice, though, that when you went on that end-table-making kick and the coffee table routine, certain technical problems of manufacture bothered you. Tables, it seems to me, ought to have all four legs resting firmly on the floor. Sure. You can put a small block of wood under the one that doesn't quite reach, but somebody always kicks the block out and it's annoying to have to play seesaw with a cup of tea placed on the top. Also, the top should be level. I'm not saying you build them like ski slides, but its irksome picking a ball of wool up off the floor every time I put my knitting on them.

"There's this about it, too," she went one, "when you came home theoretically tired from the theoretical brain-fag of your theoretical mental labors at the office, working with your hands could be refreshing."

"You're right, of course," I told her. "But before you get too involved in the economics of the thing, remember this: If my manual training dates back to the early half of the century, so do my tools. They've corroded a bit over the years, too.

"Now to update myself, I'd not only need a refresher course at night school. I'd also require a set of power tools — table saw, band saw, jig saw, skill-saw, drills, as well as replacements for my worn out chisels, mallets, and what-have-you. Then, as you mentioned there's lumber, the kind that isn't being delivered by the tide as it used to be. Maybe we'd better probe a little deeper into the economics of the thing before we blunder into a course of action we can't maintain."

"But if you stopped smoking," she argued, "you'd save enough to . . ."

And I said, "Yeah."

"Okay," she said, "there's stone work, rock walls and stuff. Rocks we got or can get off the beach. If you read the Irving Stone book, you'll remember that Mr. Buonarroti had a passion for stone and the world has loved him for it. I'm not suggesting that you'd reach quite his eminence, starting so late. But who knows, perhaps your metier could be stone, or rock — and if you go into it, cement them together. You're only asking for trouble with dry-walling of the kind that lets the weeds come through."

I asked the lady if her interst lay in my self-improvement or if she just wanted a cheap handyman around the lot.

"No sense being peevish," she replied. "If Mr. Churchill could turn from the organ tones of his oratory and the rolling majesty of his prose to lay bricks occasionally, what's wrong with you taking up rockwork? But look through the syllabus. Pick out something that interests you. We've got an adult education program here that deserves everybody's attention. And remember this, self-improvement doesn't come just from talking about it. Forgive the harshness, but did you ever think of putting your effort where your mouth is?"

Rewriting the Constitution . . . Critical Point Nearing

By ANTHONY WESTELL
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — The attempt to reunite Canada in a new pact of Confederation reaches a critical turning point next week.

Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 provincial premiers have to face the fact that the sense of urgency and national purpose has drained out their efforts to re-write the constitution.

They have to decide in frank talk behind closed doors on Monday and Tuesday if they are ready to commit the extra energy and resources needd to get the negotiations moving again.

Real Answer

Trudeau's opening remarks to the premiers will be, in effect: Hurry up or shut up. Assign a higher priority, more ministers and extra officials to the review of the British North America Act—or quietly shelve the whole project.

A tip-off to the real answer of the provinces—more revealing than any glib goodwill in the communique—will be when they agree to hold the next public session before the TV cameras.

They held three constitutional summits last year, before boredom and defeatism set in. They were supposed to hold an informal, closed working session in June, but it was postponed until next week—the first meeting this year.

Ottawa now wants the premiers to agree to a public session quickly, preferably in December. If the premiers approve, it will mean they intended to put the pressure on and expect to have something to show the country in a few months.

But if the premiers procrastinate and postpone the next session, it will indicate a lack of serious intent and a reluctance to appear empty-handed before the watching voters.

Compromises

Some premiers are believed to be toying with compromise proposals, such as conducting all future negotiations in private, allegedly to speed up the process, or even shifting the talks out of the political arena into a commission of experts.

The discussion and decision on how to proceed with the constitutional talks will be the most important issue before the conference next week—the other items are mostly exploration of problems—and it reveals how dramatically the national mood has changed in three years.

The federal government was never anxious to open the BNA Act for review and rewriting. Trudeau in particular argued that the country's real problems, including the problems of Quebec, were not rooted in the constitution, which was a flexible instrument capable of meeting all reasonable needs.

But Ontario Premier John Robarts was convinced by Quebec Premier Daniel Johnson, a personal friend and confidant, that dramatic action was urgently necessary to stem rising discontent of French-Canada within Confederation.

When Ottawa was slow to move, Robarts called his own Confederation of Tomorrow conference of the provinces, late in 1967, to begin the process of constitutional review.

The federal government was forced then to follow up by convening the official constitutional summit in February, 1968, and setting to work on a clause-by-clause re-examination and revision of the BNA Act.

More Pressing

Most of the provinces, however, have had neither the interest nor the resources of time and expertise to give a very high priority to theoretical research annd discussion.

Their ministers and top officials are fully engaged on pressing issues which seem far more important most days than changing a word or shifting a comma in a constitution which has served well enough for more than 100 years.

The federal government, for its part, has taken a certain

ROBARTS
. . . influenced

BOURASSA
. . . the real key

malicious pleasure in pouring positon papers, proposals and drafts upon the hapless provinces.

Plans for a charter of rights, reform of the Senate and the Supreme Court, revision of spending and taxing powers, division of social and foreign reponsibilities, and so on.

Trudeau has often seemed to be saying to the provinces: "You asked for it, and now you're going to get it. I warned you not to open up the constitution, but you insisted, and now just see how difficult it is."

There are grounds for suspecting, in fact that he is not so much interested in rewriting the constitution as proving to the provinces that it cannot be done, and forcing them to call off the process they began.

Certainly, the provinces have simply shelved most of the proposals put forward by Ottawa, by putting them into committee of ministers and officials which never seem to reach real decisions.

Areas in which there may be a reasonable consensus next week are mainly those of no great controversial importance.

There may be agreement on the technical formula for giving federal and provincial governments equal access to all tax resources.

There should be acceptance of a form of words, as part of the preamble of a new constitution, to express the view that part of the purpose of confederation is to reduce economic disparities between regions — a cause dear to the Atlantic provinces and acceptable to Ottawa as long as it has no binding legal affect.

New Questions

With all the past issues unresolved, Ottawa next week plans to add a couple of new and very complicated questions to the agenda.

It wants to explore the question of jurisdiction over capital markets. Although the BNA Act gives the federal government jurisdiction over chartered banks, a variety of near-banks and financial institutions have since grown up under provincial control, and there is a clear argument for centralizing authority.

Ottawa also favors some form of national control over the securities markets now supervised by the provinces.

The second new area to be explored is jurisdiction over pollution, a responsibility now badly divided between Ottawa and the provinces.

Divisions

Still to be put on the agenda at future sessions are half-a-dozen critical questions about division of powers—the heart and guts of the constitution—and important problems concerning machinery for federal-provincial co-operation and a formula for amending the constitution which finally emerges.

It all adds up to an agenda long and complex enough to frighten any province, and stretching, at the present rate of progress, into several years ahead.

The temptation to ease out of the process, to somehow shunt the constitutional review aside, will be very strong for many of the premiers.

PremierJohnson, after all, is dead, and Premier Robarts has clearly lost a lot of his early enthusiasm. So who's pressing?

Bourassa

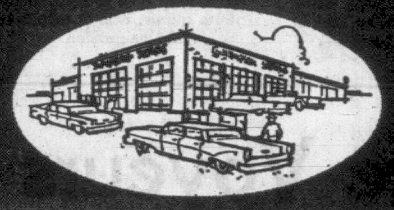

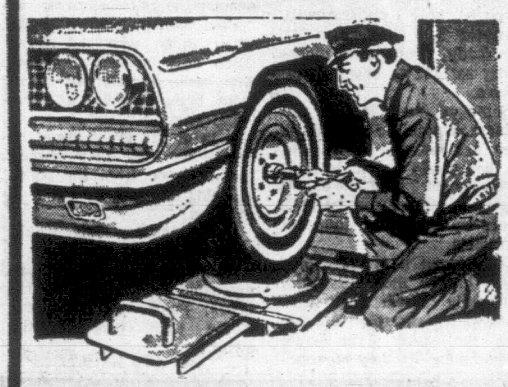

Much depends on the new Quebec premier, Robert Bourassa, who has yet to make clear his attitude to the constitutional review. If he insists that it is a still high priority for French-Canada and part of the price for continuing to support federalism, the other political leaders will have little option but to go along—grudgingly, perhaps, and with more appearance than reality.

But if Bourassa so much as hints that current economic problems are more important to him and to Quebec than the constitution, there will be no reluctance to sideline the review process and hurry along to Wednesday, which is scheduled for discussion of such "real" issues as the white paper on tax reform and the state of agriculture.

Government Apathy Accused

WINNIPEG (CP) — Both the federal and the provincial governments were accused Friday at a meeting of a parliamentary committee of taking a half-hearted approach to the constitutional discussions.

Professor Murray Donnelly of the political science department of the University of Manitoba, said:

"Most provinces have not taken the idea of a new or revised constitution very seriously."

Manitoba MLA Cy Gonick (NDP—Crescentwood) said Prime Minister Trudeau is using the constitutional conferences to stall for time until role of the central government has been changed.

Both men were appearing before the joint parliamentary committee on the constitution which is holding public hearings in Winnipeg.

Professor Donnelly said the federal and provincial governments should decide now that a new constitution should be drawn up. The job of drafting the new document should be given to experts and a one-year deadline set for implementation.

SHOULD DECIDE ON BNA

The draft constitution could be examined and a decision reached on whether to accept it or retain the British North America Act.

Prof. Donnelly said he prefers a new approach. The BNA Act was a "poor excuse for a constitution." It was difficult even to amend.

Mr. Gonick, professor of political science at the University of Manitoba, said the constitutional conferences are "one big con-game."

The constitution was being changed by the Trudeau government as it was talking of pulling out of shared-cost programs.

Responsibility for such programs as hospital insurance, grants and loans for public housing would revert to the provinces.

"The provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and the Maritimes are bound to be hurt by this transfer of powers."

Mr. Gonick said that once the prime minister is satisfied with the changed situation "we'll be asked to be his rubber stamp."

The Manitoba MLA suggested Quebec should be allowed to maintain or extend its powers while the central government should be strengthened in relation to the English-speaking provinces.

When Mr. Gonick referred to the prime minister as "Chairman Trudeau," E. B. Osler (L—Winnipeg South Centre) interrupted. He said Mr. Gonick seemed to be indulging in "cheap journalism not worthy of a member of the Manitoba legislature."

Other MPs objected to other references to the prime minister but a motion by Georges Lachance (L—LaFontaine) that Mr. Gonick's paper should not be discussed as it was irrelevant was defeated with only M. J. McQuaid (PC—Cardigan) supporting the Liberal MP.

CHICAGO (AP) — Three floors of the Board of Trade building in downtown Chicago were evacuated Friday following a telephoned bomb threat. Trading in the grain pits on the fourth floor of the building was not interrupted. Police found no bomb, and persons evacuated from the 19th, 20th and 21st floors returned to their offices.

Moscow Hotels To Be Avoided

By HOLGER JENSEN

MOSCOW (AP) — Most Westerners have one word of advice for foreigners planning an extended hotel stay in Moscow — "don't."

Russians tend to agree.

The quality of service, food and facilities, by Western standards, makes hotel living an endurance contest. But it can never be described as dull and most foreigners who survive brag about their exotic experiences.

If hotel life is hard on foreigners, it must be worse for Russians. By Soviet standards, foreigners get "first-class" treatment, while Russians, unless they're Communist party officials, just don't rate in their own hotels.

Hotel visits for tourists are handled by Intourist. If you are a diplomat or foreign correspondent, you're handled by an unfathomably bureaucratic service bureau of the foreign ministry called UPDK.

The Hotel Leningrad is not the best in Moscow but it's not the worst.

There are no eager bellhops to rush out and grab your suitcases. You have to go into the foyer and literally drag a reluctant porter outside for the baggage.

TIPS DON'T HELP

His services cost you one ruble ($1.20), but it's one of the few tips you'll have to pay. Money is readily accepted when offered, but it doesn't ensure better service.

You have a "pol lux," meaning a semi-deluxe two-room suite. The rooms are large — ceiling high and light bulbs bare. The furniture is Victorian and uncomfortable. The suite has an ancient TV set that delivers endless eulogies to Lenin.

You swiftly discover that the queen of your floor is the "dezhurnaya," a female floor manager with steely eyes who rules the maids and guests with iron discipline. But treated right, she is a gem who will get you taxis, arrange laundry needs and see to it that you get what little room service is offered.

The cardinal rule of survival in Moscow hotels is patience. You must wait for everything, usually never less than an hour. If you order a taxi by telephone it takes two or three hours to arrive. Trying to flag one down in the streets is hopeless.

If you want to eat in your room, there is a buffet that takes telephone orders, provided the switchboard is operating. Its only offerings are eggs, tea and coffee.

Getting a meal in the restaurant involves about an hour's wait for a table, plus a half-hour or so between courses. Dinner is thus a four-hour proposition, with the last course usually gulped down in great haste when the lights start flickering to indicate closing time at 11 p.m.

The tables seat six, and diners are lumped together regardless of any desire they might have for privacy. Their mood is usually foul after an hour's wait for a seat, but they warm up quickly.

Dining in the midst of a Russian wedding party is a gay, boisterous affair. Guests repeatedly stand up and scream "gorka, gorka." Translated, it means bitter, and tradition demands that the bride sweeten the atmosphere by kissing the groom whenever it is yelled.

The newly married couple is young, handsome and well-dressed. Their shining faces make the inconveniences of Moscow hotel life seem trivial.

We jump up and yell "gorka, gorka."

Canadians Oppose Alliance of Prairies

By THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

While Canadians split closely as to whether or not a union of the Maritime provinces would be a good idea, they show a strong objection to the suggestion that the Western provinces should unite. By a ratio of almost two to one, a majority, 52 per cent, think it would be a mistake, while 28 per cent favor the idea.

In the Western provinces disapproval for such a union rises to 63 per cent, with the Ontario public holding a matching point of view. In Quebec and the Maritimes, about four-in-ten don't like the suggestion, while about three-in-ten are in accord with it.

Weight of opinion in the main occupational groups all show a strong disagreement with the idea.

The question:

"DO YOU THINK THAT IT WOULD, OR WOULD NOT, BE A GOOD THING FOR THE WEST AND FOR CANADA IF THE WESTERN PROVINCES UNITED TO BECOME ONE PROVINCE?"

The strong national objection, echoed in all regions and among all occupations, is shown below.

Early Sockeye Threatened Warns Canadian Biologist

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A variety of salmon which once numbered in the hundreds of thousands may become extinct unless steps are taken to safeguard its last remaining spawning grounds.

The warning came from Dudley Foskett, who served for years with the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission and the Nanaimo biological station, and now appointed naturalist for the new Long Beach national park.

LAST HOME

The Cheewhat river and lake on Vancouver Island was probably the last home river of the "early spawning" sockeye, the well-known Canadian biologist said.

The sockeye he refers to is slightly smaller than the common species and spawns early in July.

It was once common in the Fraser River, but over the years the damming of creeks by municipalities to augment their water supply and various other public works projects blocked the way to their spawning grounds, Foskett said.

He believes the Cheewhat watershed, situated about 30 miles north of Port Renfrew, and probably another river, are the last spawning grounds of the variety.

LOGGING

The other river is the Hobiton which empties into Nitinat Lake a few miles north, but logging operations are now taking place in the area and the spawning grounds may be in jeopardy.

"Unless we protect the Cheewhat watershed, we may lose this variety for all time," he said. "Logging the watershed would destroy the spawning grounds."

RESEARCH

Scientists would also lose the opportunity to study the genetic make-up of the early-spawning sockeye—important for the development of new varieties of fish and the understanding of salmon, he said.

(Logging operations are quite close to the watershed—about 1½ miles.)

Foskett made a trip to the Cheewhat at Clo-oos, as the area—about half a mile in depth—will form part of the new national park.

The west coast trail, along the open Pacific from Bamfield to Port Renfrew, passes through Clo-oos.

Old-time residents of Clo-oos, now living in Victoria, recall seeing the Cheewhat choked with sockeye.

SMALL RUNS

Today the runs are small. Netting by Indians and non-Indians have greatly reduced their numbers.

Small creeks, emptying into the Cheewhat and once cleared by Indians to permit the fish to go upstream, are now clogged with debris. The nearby Indian village has been abandoned.

A B.C. fish and wildlife official said they were anxious to know more about the spawning grounds of the variety.

"I'm sure something can be done about this," he said. "We will look into the matter."

War Course Starts

TORONTO (CP) — Senior military officers from Canada and other countries this week began a year's training in what war is all about. The course at the Canadian Forces Staff College prepares officers for senior ranks. Most of the men enrolled in the course are in their mid-30s and have such ranks as major and lieutenant-colonel.

Marrow Transplant Provides New Hope

TORONTO (CP) — A recent bone marrow transplant, performed on a Toronto construction worker dying of leukemia, could provide hope for the 1,500 Canadians who die annually from the disease, it was revealed this week.

The operation performed July 8 at a Toronto hospital could be the first successful marrow transplant for a person who was not an identical twin.

Leukemia is marked by an abnormal increase of white blood cells. It is a malignant disease of the bone marrow which spreads by way of blood.

The transplanted marrow now is producing healthy cells.

The 10-man transplant team, headed by Dr. D. E. Bergsagel, used a technique developed at the Ontario Cancer Institute. From the 10,000 million cells taken from a donor, special cells are selected for transplant.

The case was reported Thursday at the International Transplant Society meeting in The Hague, The Netherlands, by Dr. Robert A. Phillips, a member of the Toronto team.

In a recent Toronto interview, Dr. Phillips, Dr. D. H. Cowan and Dr. Dominic Amato said it is too early to know how well the new treatment will work.

Such an operation, they said, would be given only to a patient who does not respond to other treatment and for whom a good tissue match can be found.

The Toronto team performed one previous transplant in June but the patient died. Two other marrow transplants have been performed in Canada, but they did not involve leukemia.

If successful, the operation would be the only known cure for leukemia.

Drug treatment can only provide a temporary remission from the disease.

The doctors performed the transplant when it became apparent that the patient's disease was of an "aggressive character" and drug treatment could not save him.

The doctors then began testing brothers and sisters in the 12-member family for tissue and blood type. A younger brother was selected as the donor.

The patient was given a transfusion of his brother's blood to stimulate his body cells and large doses of an anti-leukemia drug, cyclophosphamide.

"If we gave this big a dose normally, the patient would die," Dr. Cowan said.

But in this case, when the patient was to receive the transplant, doctors wanted to destroy his own leukemia-producing marrow.

Doctors then took about a pint of bone marrow, a thick blood-like substance, from the donor's pelvis.

From the marrow, the large white cells, about 30 per cent of the total, were separated for the transplant.

These cells, which produce all kinds of blood cells, were then injected into the patient.

A fonth later the level of white blood cells had returned to normal, and red blood cells formed by the transplanted bone marrow were detected after five weeks.

Seven weks afer h opette

Seven weeks after the operation the patient was able to go home, but returned to the hospital a few days later suffering from diarrhea and a skin rash, which doctors believe is a reaction caused by the foreign white cells.

He is still in hospital under observation.

To date weekly samplings of the patient's marrow and blood have shown no evidence of leukemia and, Dr. Cowan said, two months is longer than any drug has been able to control the disease.

Bond Investors Await New Issue

TORONTO (CP) — Prices remained generally unchanged on the Canadian bond market, as most investors appeared to be waiting for details on the new Government of Canada refund issue expected Monday. Trading throughout the week remained light.

The new Canada issue will total $525 million plus or minus 10 per cent. The Bank of Canada has agreed to acquire $150 million.

Canada Cement introduced a new issue Wednesday totalling $20 million. The 9½-per-cent, Oct. 1, 1990, issue sold at par.

Figures compiled by Wood Gundy Securities Ltd., show that government, municipal and corporate bond financing for August totalled $288,665,724 compared with $271,306,467 for the same month last year.

Total bond financing for the first eight months of the year was $3,015,251,171, down from $3,472,173,122 in 1969.

Day-to-day money ranged on the week from 5¼ to 5¾ per cent, closing Friday at 5¼ per cent. Three- and six-month treasury bills traded at 5.46 and 5.96 per cent, respectively.

Bell Seeks New Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — The decrease in demand for service that followed Bell Canada's increase in long-distance rates last September cost the company "some millions," Bell's head of operations said Friday.

But, Vice-President Walter Light told the Canadian transport commission, despite the fact that demand drops when prices rise Bell needs an additional increase in its general service rates to provide continuing adequate service to its customers.

Newsprint Hike 'Unreasonable'

CHATTANOOGA, Ten. (AP) — Canadian newsprint mills have been warned that a $10-a-ton newsprint increase might force members of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association to buy elsewhere.

Ralph W. Callahan, association president, issued the warning Friday in telegrams to the mills.

The increase, he said, is "shocking" and "unreasonable."

Canadian Pulp and Paper Mills Ltd., has announced the increase will be effective Jan. 1.

Few Developments for Reaction by Markets

By ART JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets remained almost unchanged at the close of trading this week.

The Toronto Stock Exchange's industrial index, a broad indicator of market movement, stood at 161.61 when trading ended Friday, the same level at which it had begun the week.

Exchanges were closed Monday for Labor Day.

During the four trading sessions, there were no major fluctuations in market trends.

Markets failed to maintain either an uptrend or a downtrend for more than one session.

On Tuesday, the first trading day of the week, prices moved downward. This was countered by a modest upswing Wednesday. Markets turned lower Thursday, but were up moderately Friday.

There were few Canadian developments to which markets reacted.

Observers said, however, that some profit-taking continued and Canadian markets reflected the unease in the United States over threatened rail and auto industry strikes.

Trading was fairly strong. The Toronto Stock Exchange's daily volume was 2.50 million shares, the highest level on a daily basis in about 13 weeks.

Investors received during the week some indications that the tight-money squeeze is loosening more.

The Bank of Nova Scotia reduced its lending rate for National Housing Act mortgage loans to 9.5 per cent from 10 per cent.

Other major banks did not immediately follow, but were said to be studying the possibility.

On index at Toronto, golds were up 6.62 points to 165.70 and base metals .97 to 96.79. Western oils dropped 2.89 to 178.69.

Volume for the four days totalled 980 million shares.

Gains outnumbered losses 378 to 356 with 213 issues unchanged.

At the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index was down .66 to 160.75.

Volume was 5.23 million shares, compared with 6.82 million last week.

Gains outnumbered losses 195 to 155 with 102 issues unchanged.

YOUR TAXES

By I. H. ASPER

Ottawa's Position Unrealistic

One of the most interesting aspects of Finance Minister E. J. Benson's recent announcement of modifications to the tax reform plan for the resource industries is the fact of the announcement itself. The minister has previously and repeatedly told critics of various aspects of the white paper that while there might be merit in their submissions, the government would make no announcement of changes on a piecemeal basis.

The finance minister has justified the current departure from his self imposed silence on the ground that the white paper proposals have created such concern and uncertainty in the mining industry that major developments, necessary to economic growth, are being deferred. As well, the near unanimity of the provincial governments in opposing the original plan, make it urgent that changes be announced now so that the federal-provincial finance ministers' conference next week does not waste its time debating a federal proposal which Ottawa intended to abandon in any event.

Mr. Benson's announcement raises two important questions. The first is whether or not the proposed changes in the mining tax structure, even though they represent a more liberal approach, are sufficient to make the plan genuinely fair. The second issue, one of much wider concern, is whether or not the government is right in asserting that this will be the only time before the tax bill is presented that it will announce revisions in the original white paper plan.

The first question regarding the effectiveness of the resources tax amendments is very complex indeed. Nevertheless, criteria are easily identified: the industry should pay federal taxes which, when added to provincial and municipal taxes, royalties, levies, licences, local improvement levies and all other relevant charges, puts it in a position where its taxes are neither higher nor lower than any other industry.

And on the basis of reality, because resource development is an international enterprise, Canada's mining tax structure cannot be significantly more onerous than that of other resource-rich countries competing for development. In order to assess our position here, a number of non-tax factors must be considered such as comparisons of political stability, currency exchange freedom, cost of extraction and distance from markets.

POSITIVE STEP

The new proposals are a positive step. They broaden the tax deduction base for the industry and at the same time create a major tax incentive for more refining activities (and more jobs) in Canada. The federal government has also put the provincial governments on the spot, by giving them the tax elbow room to grant further tax incentives to the industry without losing any provincial revenue. This occurs because Mr. Benson now proposes to transfer more of Ottawa's share of these taxes to the provinces so that they can, if they wish, return the money to the taxpayers from whom it was collected.

Although more time is needed to evaluate the new proposal, white-paper-watchers should note that the changes were made strictly within the principles contained in the white paper and not as a substitution. This indicates that the government is still not prepared to abandon the principles and basic foundation of the white paper, but is willing only to alter the details.

SECOND ISSUE

On the second issue, the decision to withhold any further announcements of change in other areas of the tax plan, the government's position is unrealistic and unwarranted. If the mining tax change was announced because of the adverse effect the current uncertainty is having on the industry and the economy generally, then surely the same logic applies to the other areas of human endeavour which have been stymied because of the tax reform debate.

It would be difficult to believe that Ottawa is unaware of the real estate developments which remain on the drawing tables because investors do not intend to proceed if the new tax rules on rentable real estate come into effect; or the many sales of private companies that are occurring because the owners fear the retroactivity of a capital gains tax and the onerous new taxes on small businesses; or the general restraint in establishment of new enterprises by private citizens, as opposed to existing corporations, because of what is expected to be an inhospitable tax climate for individual entrepreneurship.

The general uncertainty caused by the white paper is responsible for a considerable amount of undue activity in some cases and lethargy in others, all of which is undesirable. If the government now or in the future decides on changes in tax reform plan, since those changes would likely be for the better and act as a stimulus to resuming our currently retarded economic growth, it is clearly in the national interest that they be immediately announced, as in the mining tax case.

Pine Point

Pine Point Mines Ltd. directors will meet on site of the company's large base metals mine at Great Slave Lake, NWT, Sept. 22. It will be the first such meeting at the property.

Ten directors will tour the mine and concentrator and on the following day fly to Yellowknife to visit the Con gold mine operated by Cominco, manager-operator of Pine Point.

Home Oil

Home Oil Co. Ltd. has resumed exploratory drilling near its 1966 discovery at Lockton, England.

The well, started 12 miles southeast of the Lockton field Aug. 30, is the seventh in the area. Two earlier wells are ready for production and Home Oil estimates proved reserves at 550,000 million cubic feet.

Exploration was suspended until a sulphur extraction plant could be built to treat the sour gas. It is expected to begin operation by the end of the year and will have a capacity of 70 million cubic feet daily within four years.

Niagara Wire

Operating income of The Niagara Wire Weaving Co. after income taxes was $176,378, equal to 37 cents a share, in the quarter ended June 30, compared with $243,398 or 51 cents last year.

The reduction reflects a slowdown in the pulp and paper industry.

Provision has been made this year for an estimated exchange loss of $64,000 arising from unpegging the Canadian dollar, bringing net profit after extraordinary items to $112,485 or 23 cents a share compared with $218,824 or 46 cents in 1969.

Loblaw

Consolidated net earnings of Loblaw Companies Ltd., of $10 million or 79 cents per class A and B shares for the year ended March 28 compared with $7.36 million or 56 cents earned in 1968-69. Results include capital gains of $2.9 million in 1970 and $2.3 million in 1969.

Sales of $2.5 billion for the year were 3 per cent ahead of the previous $2.45 billion. The increase in 1970 sales over 1969 would be $118 million or 5 per cent if volume of Sayvette Ltd. included in 1970, and those of Kelly Douglas Co. shown in 1969 were eliminated.

Net earnings of Loblaw Groceterias Co. of $9.96 million or $9.02 per second preference and common share for year ended March 28 compared with $9.92 million or $8.95 last year.

Sales were $2.5 billion against $2.45 billion.

Ensbrook

Bulldozer stripping is continuing on Ensbrook Mines Ltd. McLeese Lake claims which adjoin the property of Gibralter Mines Ltd.

Trenches in the first zone explored were excavated to test coincident geo-chemical and induced polarization anomalies. Mineralization was exposed in all trenches establishing a length of 1,600 ft. and a width of 180 feet.

A second zone consisting of chalcopyrite, azurite and malachite is exposed 350 feet to the north of the first and may join it though at present over burden masks any such extension.

Another area consisting of an anomaly 1,700 feet by 900 feet where trenching is in progress is centred 1,500 feet north of the first anomaly.

A number of major mining companies are interested in the Ensbrook claims and their geologists will be inspecting the property in the near future.

Nation-Wide Service

VANCOUVER (CP) — Formation of a nation-wide real estate service by 72 real estate companies was announced Friday by Henry J. Block, president of Block Bros. Industries Ltd.

The new organization, called National Real Estate Service Ltd., will synchronize the work of nearly 3,000 real estate representatives across Canada, as well as agents in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle.

City Athletes Chosen For Tri-Nations' Meet

They were miles apart, and miles apart in their thinking, too. Which should make for an excellent track and field meet at Victoria next weekend.

The principals concerned are Don Basham and Alf Bjerke.

Basham is president of the B.C. Track and Field Association. Bjerke is manager of Norway's track and field team.

Norway, Canada and Sweden will meet here on Sept. 19 and 20 in Canada's first ever Tri-Country meet.

Basham, speaking here, said he figured Canada was better than Norway, but looked for "trouble" from Sweden.

Bjerke, speaking in Winnipeg, rated his Vikings slightly better than Canada's best.

The verbal sparring served to remind Canadians that track and field, like other sports, is permitted to overlap its season. The football season is in high gear, and hockey camps are opening all over the country, but the pick of three nations are determined to keep track and field in the spotlight.

About 150 of the finest track and field athletes from Norway and Sweden will compete against their Canadian counterparts in three meets during the next nine days.

The Norwegians get first crack at Canada's team, meeting in a dual meet at Winnipeg this weekend.

The Swedes have their turn Sept. 16 and 17 by facing Canada in Edmonton.

All three then head for Victoria's Centennial Stadium for the tri-nation, windup meet Sept. 19 and 20.

In Winnipeg, Bjerke conceded the Canadian team appears stronger than the one the Norwegians beat in 1968.

Basham, getting strong support from meet director Ron Bowker, also declared the Canadians much stronger than in 1968.

The Canadian squad, announced Thursday, will include two Victoria athletes—half-miler Dave Weicker and sprinter Connie Halbert. Courtenay's John Hawkins, a silver medalist in the high jump at the Commonwealth Games, also is included on the team.

The team boasts other medal winners supch as high jumper Debbie Brill and shotput star Dave Steen, but to Basham, the most impressive feature of the Canadian squad is the prominence of B.C. athletes and its youthfulness.

"About 20 of the 50 athletes are from B.C.," said Basham. "And I'd say about 80 to 90 per cent of the team is between 17 and 20 years of age.

"That's something you can't overlook. People tend to overlook track and field in non-Olympic years. This tri-nation meet will be especially important to the youngsters and give them competition that we always seem to lack."

Tickets for the meet ($1 for adults) are available at Bell's Men's Wear on Yates, Andrews' Men's Wear in the Hillside Shopping Centre, or at the YMCA.

BILL WALKER

Short order stuff for a short week, and it was nice to hear from Hal Laycoe again. He has to rank as one of the pleasant guys in the business, even if he won't win the National Hockey League east in his first full season at Vancouver. He can't, because coach Punch Imlach of Buffalo has predicted that he will have the first expansion championship club.

Otherwise, Laycoe still is the winningest coach in the business . . . and there was a story out of Vancouver the other day saying that Hal didn't know why it took 24 years for him to become an NHL coach . . . That was a tongue-in-cheek answer, really, because Laycoe did have an offer to go to the NHL long before the L.A. chance came along. He declined, and often afterwards said he was glad that he had, because he wanted to move only when he was ready to go, which unfortunately was last year . . . and the answer to the query is simple enough.

To cover four horses in a one-two perm, it will cost $12 . . . The exacto can be covered for $24 . . . but be sure and get the right four . . . Meanwhile, there is not that much evidence that the Montreal Alouettes are still popping ripe for an upset win in the eastern section of the CFL . . . but what a race it could be at the wire . . . not as two who will win — that's even money; but as to which team will be on the outside looking in when it is all over . . . and it does seem ridiculous to have a giant replay screen at Empire Stadium, and not be able to use it . . .

Stop press! The track and field season may only appear to be over, because next weekend the city is host to the biggest one of the year, the Tri-Country meet at Centennial Stadium . . . the fee is so nominal that nobody should afford to miss it, or as meet director Ron Bowker said of the Canadian team and the expected strong competition from Norway and Sweden: "With the strength of our Canadian team, there are no cinch winners from the other countries . . ." . . . Well said, but what about those 300-foot javelin throwers? "The field is just big enough to accomfodate them," said Ron . . ." now about the others" . . . suffice, for the moment, to say it should be a good one, if not the best yet!

Incidentally, one only has to glance at the video screen on most weekends to get an insight into the growing national recognition that is being given track and field athletes, and Victorians are prominent among them . . . It was only a few years ago, in 1968, to be exact, when Anne Langdale and Bob McLaren were the only Victorians in the nationals . . . Last year, the number increased, and this season representing the city in Winnipeg were Wendy Thompson, Connie Halbert, Jill Pelland, Lynda May, Dave Weicker, Lindsay Jack, and Vicki Hammond . . . All are on the road to national honors, and many others will be pounding right behind them if the trend continues, which it should . . . And sure, sure, I know that young Gordie Strongman started his baseball career with Little League . . . meet the coach . . . when he first turned up he looked like a waif the baby sitter had lost track of . . . he was that small . . . and perhaps you missed the item, but former Times staffer Hal Malone, now is in Ottawa with Manpower and Immigration . . .

And it is probably just that Denny McLain got his again from baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn this week . . . Denny never did live up to the terms of his reinstatement and didn't win many games for Detroit, either . . . and when he said "I was stupid" in the case of getting mixed up with gamblers and other undesirables, he wasn't fooling . . . But for dousing two members of the press with bucketsful of water, that was the last straw . . . Bill Shoemaker, who Monday cracked John Longden's riding record, rode 24,534 horses before he got the job done, and with 6,033 winners, and still climbing, the percentage is easy to figure out, which is the homework for tonight . . . and I can recall, too, making a special trip to Santa Anita one day, to see "The Shoe" ride, and he took off all his mounts when he heard I was coming . . . and it will have to be interesting at next year's sportsmen's dinner when it comes time to name the team of the year — Centennials, Royals, Vicettes . . . and the fall season hasn't even started yet!

Then there is "poor" John Weninger of Allan, Sask. . . . He had a sweep ticket on Typical Dancer in the recent Calgary futurity . . . was offered $35,000 for it . . . declined the offer . . . and settled for $1,500 when Typical Dancer, the favorite, ran out of the money . . . And next week, it's all hockey, Cougars and Kings, both here or where did the summer go? . . . but more about them next week . . . And if you don't think off-track betting will be a feature of the future, hearken to this . . . there was a quarter-page ad in Toronto newspapers recently advertising such services, and at no extra cost to the bettor . . . and in New York State, Computer Sciences Corporation has been selected by the New York City Off-Track Betting Corporation to negotiate a contract for the design and development of the first totally automatic wagering system in the U.S. . . . there would be 100 to 200 branch offices and telephone deposit betting exchanges . . . but you still have to pick those winners!

And here's a final quickie on the Canucks and a fellow who could make them tick . . . "Jim Hargreaves of Winnipeg Jets," says Hal Laycoe "looks like Teddy Green of Boston, hits like him, is just as big, and we hope, just as tough."

NEEBOOTS IN KNEE BOOTS

Fashion for the day? Not quite. Boots being worn by Neeboots, a three-year-old pacer, enable equine patient to receive whirlpool treatments for ailing legs. Ligament problem brought out boots for Neeboots in Edmonton's Northlands Park. Trainer-driver Ray Renmen supervises treatment. (CP Wirephoto)

MIGHTY NIJINSKY NOW 11 FOR 11!

DONCASTER, England (AP) — Nijinsky, the American-owned super horse that was bred in Canada, today won the St. Leger racing classic and stretched his unbeaten run to 11 wins in 11 starts.

Nijinsky, Canadian-bred son of Northern Dancer out of Flaming Page, went to the post at 2-to-7 odds in the race of 1¾ miles plus 132 yards.

Meadowville finished second, followed by Politico.

Nijinsky, ridden by British champion jockey Lester Piggott, won a first prize of £37,082 ($92,705) to increase his earnings to £238,715 ($596,787).

The three-year-old colt now is the most valuable horse in the world. The latest victory again boosted the fees that can be expected when he retires soon to stud. Syndicated for $5.4 million, Nijinsky will stand at the Clairborne Farm in Kentucky after perhaps another race or two.

Injuries, Morale Plague Grid Clubs

By The Canadian Press

Fans who hold to the theory that football is played between the ears—through morale and confidence—should find meat for armchair psychology in this weekend's Western Football Conference games.

Edmonton Eskimos, reported beset by morale problems and with a 2-6 record, play host tonight to Saskatchewan Roughriders, riding high with a 7-1 showing.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers, 1-6, injury-ridden and with hometown fans wondering about coach Jim Spavital's hardnosed approach, play in Vancouver Sunday against confident British Columbia Lions, who hold a 4-3 record.

Lions are holding down the last WFC playoff spot, two points behind Calgary Stampeders, 5-3. Edmonton and Winnipeg are, therefore, facing "must" games.

Tom Nettles, the little flanker cut by Edmonton to make way for Jim Thomas, arrived in Vancouver Friday for a tryout with Lions—he won't play Sunday—and said he'd like to stay.

SAYS ALL TRUE

Of the Edmonton picture, he said: "Those stories about the team morale being low are true. You just can't believe how bad it is there." (See story Page 11).

Spavital's juggling act with Winnipeg continues. John Senst takes the flanker spot of Ken Nielsen, who has what the club calls "a real problem" with his neck.

Lions have done a little shuffling too, with Vic Washington, the reluctant all-Canadian who really wants to play for San Francisco 49ers this year, given the word to dress Sunday.

If he plays, he'll have to wait until next year to try with 49ers. The National Football League rule is that if a player plays one game in Canada, he can't join an NFL club the same season.

Sunday's B.C.-Winnipeg game will be televised in the Victoria area on Channel 10 for Victoria Cablevision subscribers, starting at 2 p.m.

TITLE GAME TONIGHT

Victoria Royals will be attempting to make a clean sweep of the Western Canada Soccer League honors tonight when they meet Regina Concordia, the Prairie Division winner, in the sudden-death final.

Going into tonight's game, the Coastal champion Royals have beaten the opposition more times (16), lost fewer games (2), scored more goals (62), and conceded the fewest goals (16), than any other team in the WCSL.

Game time is 8 p.m. at Royal Athletic Park.

Vikings Nip Bears

CHICAGO (AP) — A 40-yard touchdown pass from Cary Cuozzo to Clint Jones with five seconds to play lifted Minnesota Vikings to a 31-30 victory over Chicago Bears Friday night in a National Football League exhibition game.

Gibson Cools Off Mets and Seaver

Oakland Rookie Fires One-Hitter

By The Associated Press

The Bob Gibson-Tom Seaver duel was billed as a matchup between Cy Young Award winners but St. Louis Cardinals ace Gibson wasn't interested. His only concern was beating the New York Mets and he did so convincingly.

The hard-throwing right-hander stifled the Mets on five hits as the Cardinals whipped Seaver and his mates 5-2 Friday night, dropping the New Yorker's one-half game behind the East Division leading Pittsburgh Pirates, who were idle.

The Chicago Cubs, another half-length back, also did not play.

Gibson rolled to his 21st victory of the season, striking out seven Mets. He has lost six. His lifetime mark over New York now stands at 24-7.

Seaver, 18-11, struck out 10 in six innings, increasing his season's total to 274, a National League record for right-handed pitchers. The righty however ran into trouble in one inning—the fourth—when the Cards scored four times. Jose Cardenal triggered the rally with a two-run double.

STREAK EXTENDED

Cleon Jones had three of the hits off Gibson, running his hitting streak to 18 games.

San Diego Padres edged Cincinnati Reds 3-2 Friday, while Houston Astros nipped Atlanta Braves 3-2. Montreal Expos blanked Philadelphia Phillies 1-0 and San Francisco Giants downed Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3.

Nate Colbert snapped a 2-2 tie with his 31st homer in the seventh inning, backing the two-hit pitching of Pat Dobson in the Padres' triumph.

Carl Morton tossed a two-hitter and Gary Sutherland came through with an RBI eighth inning single, giving the Expos right-hander his 16th victory. He has lost 10.

Tight relief pitching by Mike Davison and Don McMahon helped Juan Marichal, forced out of the game with stomach cramps in the seventh, gain his 11th victory as the Giants held off the skidding Dodgers.

FIRES ONE-HITTER

Vida Blue, a 21-year-old southpaw just recalled from the minors, pitched 7 2-3 hitless innings and finished, for the first time in his American League career, with a one-hitter as the Oakland Athletics whitewashed Kansas City Royals 3-0.

Blue, a six-foot fireballer who had worked a total of 42 major league innings, without marked success, stymied the Royals until Pat Kelly singled with two out in the eighth while hurling Oakland out of a three-game tailspin.

Despite the victory, the A's remained 8½ games behind the Minnesota Twins, who blanked the Chicago White Sox 6-0 behind rookie Bill Zepp to move another step closer to the AL West Division title.

Baltimore Orioles reduced their magic number to seven on the way to the East Division crown with a 3-2, 13-inning victory over Boston Red Sox. Cleveland Indians nipped the New York Yankees 3-2, Washington Senators topped Detroit Tigers 4-2 and Milwaukee Brewers beat California Angels 2-1.

Roughies Get Grid Veteran

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders of the Western Football Conference have announced the acquisition of Gary Lane, a four-year veteran of quarterbacking in the National Football League.

A graduate of University of Missouri, Lane was obtained by Roughriders in a trade that transferred playing rights of Wally Dempsey, the former Saskatchewan linebacker, to British Columbia Lions.

Little League Throws On Behalf of Seniors

The opening response to the Victoria Centennials financial appeal, in order that they may travel to Colombia for the world senior amateur baseball championship, has been excellent.

Centennials, who captured the Canadian senior amateur championship Aug. 31, received a big boost from Victoria Little League baseball Friday as $200 was donated to the fund. The first-day total reached $301.

Centennials, comprised of players from the Victoria Senior League, will form the nucleus of the team which will represent Canada in the world amateur tournament in November, and in 1971, at the Pan-American Games.

Expenses totalling about $7,000 for uniforms, equipment, etc., are being half paid for by the Canadian Federation of Amateur Baseball, but Centennials must raise the balance themselves.

The federal government has agreed to provide 75 per cent of transportation costs.

Donations are being accepted at the Ingraham Hotel, 2915 Douglas St.; Bell's Men's Wear, 721 Yates; Al Kubicek at Al's Esso, Hillside and Shelbourne, and Canada Trust Co., 650 View Street.

Barkwell Coach At Williams Lake

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — The Williams Lake Stampeders of the Cariboo Intermediate Hockey League have signed Ron Barkwell, 24, to a two-year contract as playing coach.

Barkwell, who moved to Williams Lake last season, played junior hockey on the Prairies, and also played for Nelson Maple Leafs of the Western International Hockey League.

Anderson Kings' Best Golfer

Golf interrupted hockey training Friday, but Los Angeles Kings returned to the conditioning grind today.

Manager-coach Larry Regan offered candidates for the National Hockey League team, training in Victoria's Memorial Arena, an early change of pace by scheduling a golf tournament at Cedar Hill.

A "front-office" guy showed the players how golf should be played. Jim Anderson, former coach and now director of scouting for Springfield Indians, led gross scorers with a seven-over-par 72.

Runner-up was colorful Eddie Shack, whose round of 75 included an eagle two on a par-four hole. Mike Byers won low net honors, Ray Fortin claimed an accuracy prize, and burly Gilles Marotte won the driving contest with a 330-yard poke.

Elsewhere and otherwise . . .

Defenceman Ted Green of the Boston Bruins, who missed last season because of a head injury, skated briefly Friday as Boston opened its training camp at London, Ont.

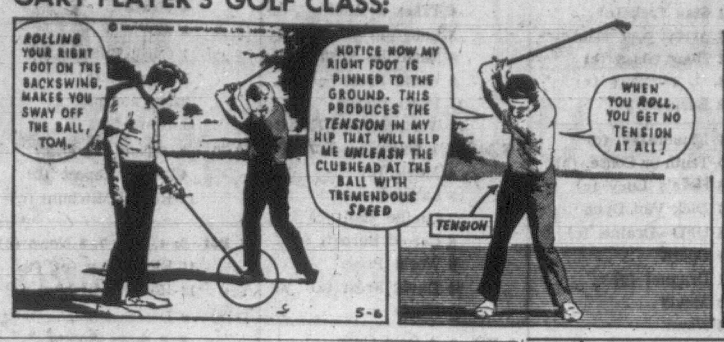

Green took the ice at noon and skated leisurely for about 10 minutes. It was the first time he had skated since his stick episode with Wayne Maki of the St. Louis Blues in an exhibition game at Ottawa Sept. 21, 1969.

He said he felt "great."

Minto Cup Triumph 'Too Easy'

PORT CREDIT, Ont. (CP) — Lakeshore Maple Leafs won the national Junior A lacrosse championship Friday night but the team's general manager said he is a bit disappointed.

"Taking the championship and the Minto Cup was too easy," Boyd Baragar said, because the rival Burnaby, B.C., team was no match for his players.

"Victory means more to you after a tough series," he said following Lakeshore's four-games sweep of a best-of-seven series. "We would rather play seven games against a tougher team."

The Leafs took title to the coveted silver cup with a 17-9 victory over their younger western rivals Friday. They won the Sunday opener 22-6 and followed with 25-13 and 14-8 wins Monday and Wednesday.

"The B.C. team was too slow," Baragar said, "and you can't beat us with a slow team."

WAS HIGH SCORER

Joe Simpson was high scorer of the Leafs Friday with four goals.

Brian McCutcheon, Charlie Henderson and Paul Suggate tallied two each and Dan Moher, Bill Coghill, Wayne Granger, Ron McNaughton, Bill Foote, Robbie Patten and Milton MacNeil shared the others.

McCutcheon, who scored 12 goals and 13 assists in the four games, was named most valuable player of the series.

Ted Aitchison scored three times for the western team and Rick Ornar twice. Other goals went to Dave Dearin, Steve Matheson, Bill Longman, Brian Bergum and Doug Hayes.

Clark Pulford, Leaf coach, said:

"The B.C. team would never have finished in the top five of our league. We have much stiffer competition."

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—Coquitlam Adanacs stormed from behind to edge New Westminster Salmonbellies, 22-21, in overtime Friday night to stave off elimination in the Western Lacrosse Association final.

Salmonbellies, winners of the first three games in the best-of-seven series, now are on top 3-2. Sixth game goes tonight in Coquitlam.

Bill Robinson scored the winning goal Friday, about seven minutes into the overtime period.

Winner of the series meets Peterborough Lakers in a best-of-seven series for the Canadian senior lacrosse championship and the Mann Cup.

Adanacs trailed 7-9 after one period and were down 13-18 after two but went on an eight-goal spree in the third period while holding New Westminster to three goals.

Robinson was the top scorer for the winners with four goals and four assists. Wayne Goss led the Salmonbellies with five goals and four assists.

WAKEHAM THREE SHOTS BEHIND NEWFIE LEADER

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Chuck Thorpe of Washington, D.C., fired an even par 67 Friday to take a one-stroke lead after the first round of the Newfoundland open golf championship. Dartmouth, N.S., pro Lawrence O'Hearn was second.

The second round of the 54-hole event is scheduled for today with the third round Sunday.

Stan Homenuik of Dauphin, Man.; Finn Sorenson of Edmonton and Bill Wakeham of Victoria shot first-round 70s and were in a six-way tie for fifth place.

Australian Bids For Tennis 'Slam'

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Margaret Court of Australia slammed into the women's final of the United States open championships Friday and faced only one more obstacle—Rosemary Casals of San Francisco—in her bid for a rare tennis grand slam.

Seldom venturing to the net but devastating from the back court, the 28-year-old housewife erased Nancy Richey of San Angelo, Tex., 6-1, 6-3.

Miss Casals, thwarted just short of the last round the previous two years, advanced through a 6-2, 6-7, 6-2 victory over Virginia Wade of Britain.

Mrs. Court and Miss Casals will play Sunday for the title and the $7,500 first prize.

Semi-finals in the men's division are scheduled for today with only Cliff Richey, Nancy's 23-year-old brother, standing in the way of a potential Australian monopoly of this $176,000 event.

Richey will face Tony Roche, the Australian left-hander who is seeded No. 4. In the other bracket, Wimbledon champion John Newcombe, seeded No. 2, plays Ken Rosewall, No. 3.

Nicola Pilic of Yugoslavia and Pierre Barthes of France won the men's doubles title by upsetting Rod Laver and Roy Emerson of Australia, 6-3, 7-5, 4-6, 7-6.

Esquimalt Squad Going to Kingston

The zone one Canadian Forces soccer championship was captured by CFB Esquimalt Friday after a 4-2 victory over HMC Ships at Naden Field.

The triumph advanced CFB Esquimalt to the nine-team national services' championship, to be played next month at Kingston, Ont. Esquimalt will represent B.C. at the tournament.

Al Ettinger and Dick Walker were marksmen for the winners in the first half, but Ships' John Ooms narrowed the margin to 2-1.

Gary Swan and Jim Shulz scored in the second half for Esquimalt, while Dusty Miller replied for Ships.

Lee Maye Goes To Chisox Squad

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago White Sox acquired outfielder Lee Maye from Washington Senators Friday at the $20,000 waiver price.

Maye played in 91 American games this year with the Senators driving in 30 runs and hitting seven home runs while hitting .267.

Seven More Released From Cougars' Camp

Coach Ron Maxwell released seven more players Friday morning from Victoria Cougars training camp, trimming the British Columbia Junior Hockey League team's roster to 38.

Among players cut by Maxwell were two Moose Jaw recruits—18-year-old Blaine Bechtold, a 20-goal scorer in the Saskatchewan Junior League last season, and 17-year-old Les Gould, captain of last season's Saskatchewan midget champions.

Reluctant to release either of the players, Maxwell explained that Bechtold was released because of the abundance of proven centremen. Gould faced the same situation on defence.

ICE CHIPS: Bob Merluk, a speedster who had it made but left the Cougars early last season, has turned out and is making a determined bid to win a berth with Victoria ... Winger Larry Quechuk, former Victoria winger who was expected to try out in Victoria, has decided to help New Westminster instead ... All-star winger Wayne Dye is being wooed by Regina Pats of the Western Canada League but is bound to stay in Vernon one more year ... He completes his Grade 12 education this year.

Vancouver appears ready to pour a lot of heat onto the Vancouver-Victoria rivalry ... Centennials' coach Ron Matthews had 150 players show up for the first day of Vancouver's camp ... Vancouver's biggest acquisition may be Brian Metka, a Moose Jaw forward who was one of the big scoring guns in the Saskatchewan League last winter ... Penticton appears to have lost all-star Dwayne Pentland ... He's almost certain to win a berth with Brandon Wheat Kings ... If freshman coach Wayne North gets the help he needs from Saskatoon Blades, look for Kelowna Buckaroos to ice a vastly-improved club.

Kay Tribe Captures Senior Title

Kay Tribe scored an 85 to capture the Mrs. A. Blair Paterson trophy and the Vancouver Island Senior Ladies' Golf Association championship.

Mike Price of Royal Colwood was runner-up with a 90 at Uplands while Linda McMaster, also from Colwood, won the Dolly Wilson Trophy for low net score — a 74. Nanaimo's Evelyn Jackson was runner-up.

Colwood's Helen Yoachim captured the Ethel M. Todd trophy for low net (grandmothers) division with Mavis Young of Uplands second.

The low net team trophy was captured by Uplands' Winn McGuire, Esther Barnes and Lucy Worth.

Other prize-winners were Betty McDougall, Teresa Todd, Barbara Glassford, Ursula Leaf and Merle Richmond.

Frazier Scores In Feature Race

VANCOUVER (CP) — Basil Frazier, the track's leading jockey, put Comax in front at the quarter and she stayed there all the way to win the $1,985 Princess Louise II allowance by two lengths at Exhibition Park Friday night.

Comax easily outdistanced second-place Nanahanna with her time of 1:17 4-5 for the six and one-half furlongs. She paid $10.40, $6 and $4.

A crowd of 6434 saw Frazier pick up his 62nd win of the meet.

Criticism of Eskimos Series of Half-Truths

EDMONTON (CP) — A series of columns by Wayne Overland, sport columnist for The Journal, were described Friday as being a series of "hilf-truths" by Jack Baker, president of Edmonton Eskimos.

The three-part series by Overland said the Western Football Conference team is on the verge of revolt and that morale is at an all-time low. Basically, Overland said, the problem with the club was interference in operation of the team by directors who were good businessmen, but who knew little of how to run a professional football team.

"He (Overland) has taken half-truths from two or three years and put them all together," Baker said. "As a rule I do not comment on such columns ....

"In situations such as this, a quote of the late John F. Kennedy most aptly describes my thinking: 'One of the greatest cancers at work in our society today are those persons who deal in half-truths and untruths'."

LABELLED FALSEHOOD

Overland, in his first column, said that after an Eskimo exhibition loss, 47-7 to Toronto Argonauts, Baker asked guest coach Rod Dowhower to meet director Jack Agrios for an evaluation of the situation. At the meeting Dowhower "launched an attack on the tactics and capabilities of Edmonton assistant coach Joe Zaleski."

Of that Baker said: "I must publicly state that the action attributed to me with respect to these gentlemen is a complete and utter falsehood."

In Friday's column, the last of the series, Overland said rookie head coach Ray Jauch of The Eskimos is being "dragged down" by circumstances beyond his control.

YOUNGEST COACH

The 38-year-old coach, youngest in the Canadian Football League, had made mistakes in his first year, but should be retained for another season.

"Half a season isn't enough to judge a coach, but eight and one-half seasons is enough time to evaluate an organization. Something is wrong with the Eskimo setup."

Overland said that since the Eskimos began a rebuilding program after hitting the skids in 1962, their record of 47 wins, 85 losses and four ties has been the worst in the WFC.

The Eskimos now are in fourth place in the five-team conference with two wins and six losses and are four points behind third-place British Columbia Lions who hold the last playoff spot with eight points.

The Eskimo coaching staff has weaknesses, says Overland, but "what Jauch learns from this season of discontent will undoubtedly make him a much improved coach next season."

World Cup Ski Format Redesigned

GENEVA (AP) — The International Ski Federation announced Tuesday changes in the rules of the Alpine World Cup competition to the benefit of downhill specialists.

At a meeting here the federation — known as FIS — decided to stage seven downhills, eight giant slaloms and nine special slaloms counting for the World Cup, men's and women's, in the forthcoming season starting at Sestriere, Italy, Dec. 12.

FIS also decided that in future downhills cancelled because of bad conditions will not be replaced by giant slaloms, as in the past.

Last season there were six downhills, 11 giant and 11 special slaloms for men and five, nine and 12, respectively for the women.

Marc Hodler, FIS president, said it was felt that past competitions were too favorable to the slalomers.

FIS even decided to have two World Cup events in December instead of one. The second, after Sestriere, will be at Val D'Isere, France, Dec. 16-20.

It was also decided that final World Cup races will no longer automatically take place in North America or Scandinavia. Next year the last race will be at Are, Sweden, but the following season it will be in the new French resort of Pralou.

O.C. CRICKET SCORES

Surrey 151 for 9 declared and 215 for 4; Kent 291 for 9 declared, draw.
Yorkshire beat MCC by 7 wickets. MCC 247 and 206; Yorkshire 316 for 6 declared and 136 for 3.

De De Plays Delightfully

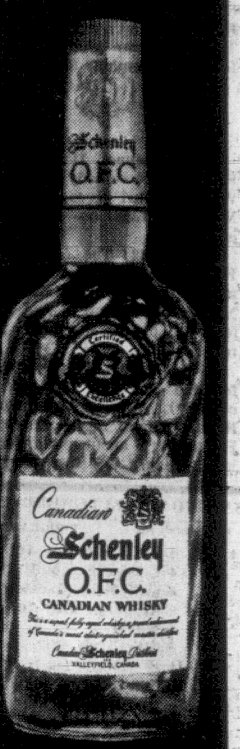

OCEAN SHORES, Wash. (AP) — Exuberant De De Owens played an almost flawless game from tee to green for a two-under-par 70 and a one-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the $40,000 Wendell-West Women's Invitational golf tournament.

The 24-year-old blonde missed only two greens during the day for a 36-hole total of 142 on the 6021-yard Ocean Shores Golf Club course.

Shirley Englehorn, Idaho, also had a 70 for a 143 total and second place.

First-round leader Jan Ferraris ballooned to an 81 and a 152 total.

WEEKEND'S TOP TV SHOWS

Tonight

RODEO SPECIAL. 6 p.m., Channel 6. The Calgary Stampede is featured in this hour-long special, which features Arthur Godfrey and Calgary's Gordon Kelly sharing the host's responsibilities. All the top events of the stampede are shown . . . a highlight is the chuckwagon races. The hour was filmed during this year's stampede.

MISS AMERICA. It's the Saturday after Labor Day, and most American TV set owners know that they'll be watching the proceedings from Atlantic City where the 1971 Miss America will be chosen. The decision will be made around midnight, the girl will be lovely and will probably cry as Bert Parks serenades her triumphal march down the runway . . . but we'll all be watching an American tradition which has managed to survive change, and prosper for 50 years. This 16th annual telecast of the proceedings will feature, in addition to the perennial Mr. Parks, former winners Debbie Bryant (1966) and Lee Meriwether (1955) as co-hostesses and Mary Ann Mobley (1959) and Vonda Kay Van Dyke (1965) in one of the many production numbers used to build up the suspense until that final envelope.

JACKIE GLEASON. 7 p.m., Channel 8; 7:30 p.m., Channels 7 and 12. Togetherness is too much for the Nortons and the Kramdens, who are sharing quarters to save money. Songs include Let's Consolidate, One Big Happy Family and Show Him That You Are a Man.

ALL-STAR CIRCUS. 9 p.m., Channel 5. A real treat for circus buffs as 11 of the biggest acts are paraded before the camera performing their breathtaking or death-defying feats — or a combination of both. Host Ed McMahon is ringmaster for the acts including the Great Alzanza on the high wire; the Flying Artons, Miss Liza and Miss Elizabeth, three of the better known trapeze acts; Charlotte Walsh and her leopards, Baudy's Siberian tigers and Hans Burger's trained pigs.

SPECIAL. 10 p.m., Channel 5, Joel Grey stars in this TV adaptation of the stage musical based on the life and music of George M. Cohan, which Mr. Grey created on Broadway and toured in all over the country. For those of you who think instantly of Cagney's characterization in the film, let us assure you that this production is not intended to make you forget it, but it's certainly a more honest presentation than the movie biography. Grey is a triple-threat performer and he handles the role skillfully aided by a first-rate supporting cast headed by Jack Cassidy, Nanette Fabray and Bernadette Peters as the Cohans; Anita Gillette and Blythe Danner as his wives; and Red Buttons as Cohan's producing partner, Sam Harris. The music, all Cohan's, is corny, dated, but still melodic, nostalgic, and capable of providing an excellent score for this special. Don't expect a big, brassy musical or another version of Cagney's film, and you'll find this an entertaining 90 minutes.

ONCE MORE WITH FELIX. 10:30 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Actor Robert Morley and the Los Paraguayos are guest performers. Julie sings Someday Soon, Buttermilk Hill and The Flower Lady. Los Paraguayos do A Mia Tierra and La Mosonera.

Sunday

INTERTEL. 4 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Who Speaks for Man? This film, representing the opinions of producer-director Arthur Zegart, deals with the limitations as he sees them of the United Nations. He interviews Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban, Carlos Romulo, Foreign Affairs Secretary of the Phillippines, and Nobel winner biologist George Wald.

PEANUTS SPECIAL. 7 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. It Was a Short Summer, Charlie Brown. Charlie and his tent mates at summer camp, including Snoopy the superdog, compete against the girls. They try baseball, swimming and a canoe race, and all three are disastrous. Just one, Charlie Brown, if you could win . . .

WILD KINGDOM. 7 p.m., Channel 5. (Season's Premiere) "Challenge of the Chettah — Part 1." Back for his ninth season on NBC, series host Marlin Perkins joins his associate Stan Brock in covering a graphic and dramatic conservation project — the relocation of cheetahs in southern Africa — due in great part to poachers who kill the animals to meet the demand for pelts. Taking advantage of a rare case of population explosion in one cheetah range, Marlin and Brock have been moving the animals to Kruger National Park in South Africa.

SPECIAL. 7 p.m., Channel 4, "Just Friends." Composer-singers Johnny Hartford and Mason Williams head the list of guests on this musical variety hour, full of appealing songs for the youngsers and some for their elders as well. Among the former, there's Mason Williams' award-winning "Classical Gas," and among the latter, there's "Gentle on My Mind," Johnny Hartford's winner. Other songs are performed by the rock group, Kenny Rogers and the First Edition, and Jennifer Warren, with Pat Paulson and Bob Einstein along to handle the comedy.

ED SULLIVAN. 8 p.m., Channels 7 and 12 (Repeat) Good show devoted to many of the wonderful songs composed by the Beatles. In addition to the Beatles themselves, tonight's array of stars features Eydie Gorme, Steve Lawrence, Dionne Warwick, Peggy Lee, Duke Ellington, Peter Gennaro, Edward Villella and the Muppets. Highlights include Edward Villella's special ballet to "Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds"; Peggy Lee's selections from the Beatles' album titled, "Abbey Road"; and Duke Ellington's new concerto based on Beatles' tunes.

THE BILL COSBY SHOW. (Season's Premiere) "Anytime You're Ready, C. K." Very funny opener. Bill launches his second season with good script which gives him ample opportunity to show off his ability to play the clown. As football coach, he is forced by the team to borrow a movie camera so that the boys may study their post-game errors. The result is hilarious — particularly when the team sees the film their cinematographer-coach has taken.

BONANZA. 9 p.m.,Challel 5 (Season's Premiere) "The Night Virginia City Died." The Cartwrights are back for their 12th year on TV, and Ben is still exerting his level-headed common sense not only on his family but on his city as well. Tonight, Virginia City finds itself in peril against a firebug, and although the viewer is really privy to the identity of the criminal almost at the outset, suspense and interest are generally maintained by the need to combat the ornery outcries of the hotheads among the residents.

'Boston Blackie' Dies At 69

NEW HOPE, Pa. (AP) — Actor Chester Morris, 69, who gained fame for his portrayal of the movie character Boston Blackie, died here Friday of an overdose of barbiturates, the Bucks County coroner said.

Dr. Samuel Willard, the coroner, did not say whether the overdose was accidental or otherwise.

Morris was appearing as Captain Queeg of The Caine Mutiny Court Martial on the stage of the Bucks County Playhouse here.

He opened in the show Monday after a week of rehearsals. A spokesman for the playhouse said Morris had been in good spirits and showed no sign of illness during his two weeks here.

NOT THE YEAR OF THE BOLD EXPERIMENT

U.S. Networks Maintain No-Risk Programming

WASHINGTON (WP) — This is not a year for bold experimentation in U.S. television.

The nation's recent economic difficulties have sent all three television networks scurrying for proved performers and non-risky series. scurrying for proved per- As a result, a lot of old faces will be back on the TV set, specials will be fewer, the number of hard news documentaries will be greatly reduced and there will be more of pro football with its sure-fire audience attraction.

Press releases have been filled with words about "new social consciousness" of television but the new schedule shows even more emphasis on the safest entertainment form — the situation comedy. Such shows consist of a parent, children, a pet and gales of canned laughter. The new year will provide 27 such programs, nearly one-third of the 83 programs in prime viewing time.

CBS, the network that was built on situation comedy and game shows, has 13 situation comedies and ABC-TV has 11. Only three situation comedies are on NBC and only one of these — "Nancy" — is new.

ABC-TV has made one major change, one that will extend the "weekend widow's" mourning period for an additional day. Traditionally, wives have lost husbands to collegiate football (Saturday) and professional football (Sunday). ABC-TV has added a set of Monday night football telecasts.

ABC-TV has promised, however, to make football more appealing to women.

If that doeosn't work, the network has prepared a set of Monday nightmovies, as soon as the football season has ended.

Feature films, made for theatres and produced for first showing on TV, will continue to be a major staple. A prime-time movie is available on six of seven nights, With Wednesday the sole exception. The made-for-TV movies serve a second, major purpose in that these are the plot or sample shows for next fall's regular series.

This represents a major saving, since a one-hour pilot can cost up to $1 million and, if network executives don't enthuse, the entire investment can be lost. If the movie fails a network has only one or two bad rating periods, not a financial disaster.

Just five years ago much attention was being given to "I spy," mainly because a Negro, Bill Cosby, had a starring role. Now, almost every program has at least one Negro in a featured or starring role. An all-black cast, headed by Scoffy Mitchell, Nipsey Russell and Thelma Carpenter, is set for a situation comedy version of "Barefoot in the Park" (ABC).

Roosevelt Grier, seen last season as a former slave helping "Daniel Boone" make Kentucky safe from marauding Indians, has moved into modern dress. He'll be the piano player for Danny Thomas.

Most promising of the new black stars is Lou Gossett, featured in "The Young Rebels" (ABC). This is best described as an 18th century version of "Mod Squad" with the young rebels determined to make the United States free of British domination.

If you were out of the country for the last 10 years and couldn't watch American television, there will be a familiar look about the schedule. You didn't really miss the 1960s, for the stars of that period have been stampeding back to TV after finding that the movie business is no place for an actor seeking work.

The familiar faces returning belong to such persons as Andy Griffith, Danny Thomas, Mary Tyler Moore, Don Knotts, Dennis Weaver and Walter Brennan.

What will be noticed by most viewers is a sharp reduction in the number of hard news documentaries. NBC is continuing "First Tuesday" and CBS is keeping its Tuesday schedule of "60 Minutes" and the "CBS News Hour."

All networks have cut back, sharply, on the controversial news documentaries that deal with current events. The documentaries that will be on display will be mostly nature studies, documenting the habits of birds and animals or tracing natural phenomena such as storms. These bring few complaints and frequently win huge ratings.

At the local level, so called "local" programming continues to consist mainly of syndicated, canned features, of locally produced new programs that rely heavily on network originated news film and of the locally film oriented talk or female program. Occasionally, a film documentary on a local program is offered, along with interview programs on Sunday morning. The result of all this is that a man can travel from the Atlantic to the Pacific, stopping from time to time to look at TV and rarely being able to tell — from television — the name of the city where he happens to be stopping.

Palance Sues Network For Injuries From Fall

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Jack Palance has filed suit for $500,000 damages for injuries he says he suffered in a fall during a television performance in a Toronto theatre three years ago.

Palance named as defendants the Dan Curtis Organization Ltd., and the CBC.

He alleged in the suit, filed in New York State Supreme Court, that he fell from a catwalk to a cement floor in a theatre at 354 Jarvis St., owned by CBC and leased to the Curtis firm, on Sept. 5, 1967.

The actor charged negligence and in court papers said the catwalk had no guards or barriers, constituting a "dangerous nuisance and trap." He said he had suffered serious internal injuries and shock to his nervous system.

The suit was revealed today when his lawyer sought a state Supreme Court order to compel the CBC to accept a copy of the complaint through its New York legal representative.

ANOTHER TEACUP GOES BANG!

LONDON (AP) — A cannonade of exploding teacups posed a new hazard to the British way of life today.

"We've had complaints from all over the country," announced a home office spokesman.

The trouble started in the kitchen of 71-year-old Victor Cull.

He was pouring his first cup of the day when the cup blew up in his face.

Said Victor: "I got a splinter in the arm. My dog got a splinter in her shoulder. Either of us could have been blinded."

A home office accident prevention expert explained: "This type of cup is made of glass under stress, and if the skin is in any way imperfect the cup is liable to explode when subjected to extremes of temperature.

"We have written to the manufacturers to get the trouble cured."

Della Reese Hospitalized

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Singer Della Reese walked through a plate glass door at her home this week and underwent several hours of surgery for severe lacerations, her manager said.

A spokesman at the University of California at Los Angeles Medical Centre said she was in satisfactory condition.

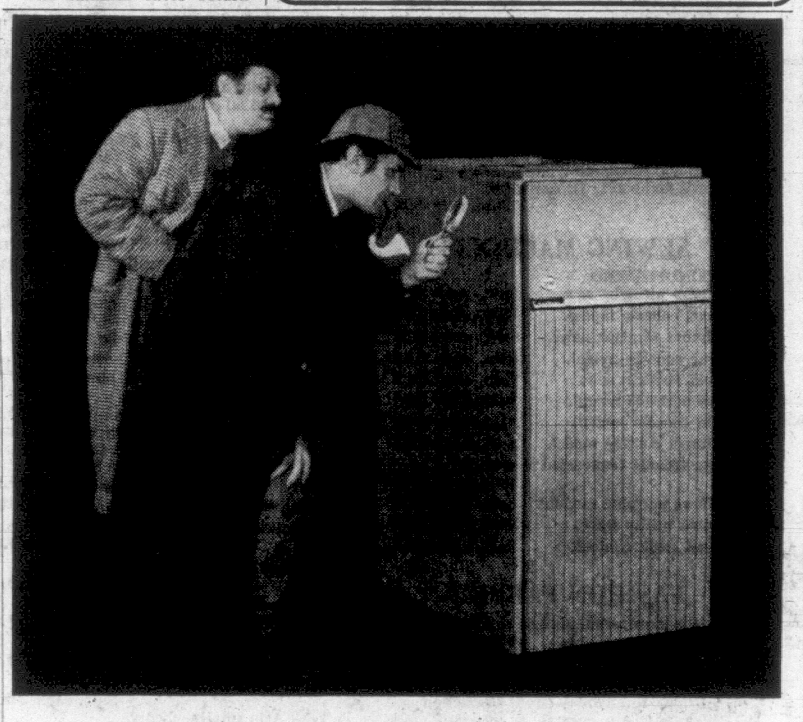

Her manager, Lee Magid, said Miss Reese was entertaining at her Bel-Air home at the time of the accident.

"Her face wasn't harmed," Magid said. "The cuts were on her legs and thighs."

High-powered growth funds are great—in theory. Royal Trust ABC and M Funds are great. Period.

Spectacular go-go funds with the promise of fast, overnight profits are great — if you can afford the risk. However, in the management of our ABC and M Funds, we rely on competence, experience, dependability and sound judgment. And, surprisingly, these qualities still pay off where it really matters — in performance. So if the idea of a well-balanced investment package appeals to you — one that offers maximum diversification and liquidity — and yet is custom-tailored to suit your own personal situation and requirements, give some serious thought to our ABC and M Funds. Better still, drop in at your local Royal Trust office for a few facts and figures. Or mail us the coupon.

Is Victoria Missing Le Bateau? (A Few Facts About the French Fact)

By DOUG MacRAE

As it does in so many other ways, Victoria sits serene and aloof above the French-English fuss troubling much of the rest of Canada.

There are no separatists here, no turmoil over bilingualism in the public service. There are no loud wailings about minority-language education. There is, in fact, no French Fact.

And almost to a man — government rednecks, militant Union Jack wavers, enlightened Canadian unity buffs, average citizens and even some Victorians of French Canadian origin — everybody would like to see things stay that way.

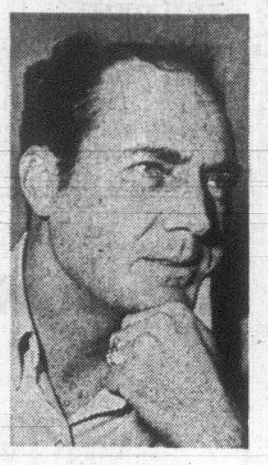

Well, not quite everybody.

There is a small enclave of Francophones in the city, working quietly for what they consider a just national unity through preservation of French culture, right here in the buckle on the country's English-speaking belt.

The group is centred around groups like the French-Canadian Federation of B.C., the French Life Council, Maison Francaise (annual summer immersion courses in French at the University of Victoria), and the tiny French-speaking St. Jean Baptiste Church in Fairfield.

Spokesman for French-speaking Victorians is Gerald Moreau, a professor of French at Uvic. Moreau is convinced that preservation of the French culture would be good for everybody, but sees little hope for long-term success.

MOREAU
. . . strangling

His pessimism is based on what he sees as indifference, on the part of both the provincial government and the French Canadians themselves.

"It is unfortunate for us that British Columbia is the only province which refuses to go along with federal efforts to make Canada a nation of two rich cultures," Moreau says.

He cites the Trudeau government's announcement Wednesday that Ottawa will be giving grants totalling $300 million to the provinces over the next four years to encourage bilingual education.. British Columbia's initial share will be only $602,000.

Moreau realizes that Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick, with the vast majority of Canada's French-speaking students, must be given most of the federal money. But should B.C. be virtually ignored?

"All we are asking is the same treatment for Francophones in this province that is afforded English-speaking residents in Quebec.

"Justice is not a matter of numbers. Ten people have the same right to eat as a million."

He thinks the government's position is unsympathetic. So few votes are involved that the political gain in helping French B.C. residents would be too small to make it worth the effort.

And although he says the Bennett adminstration is made up of sound business men, they are not culturally inclined. ("After all, Bennett is a storekeeper, isn't he?")

Moreau's other problem is that he is something of a cultural Messiah who finds himself shepherding a reluctant flock.

"It's a matter of assimilation. French-speaking people move here and are immediately immersed in a totally English environment.

"The men work in English, the women shop in English, all the children's friends speak English. Schools, television, newspapers, movies — all English.

"The French arrival reaches the point where he is so close to strangling that he says the heck with it and capitulates.

"The tragedy of this is that Victoria continues to lose the opportunity to take part in what is one of the best aspects of Canadian life — the coexistance of two of the world's richest cutures."

The government's position is clear-cut and firm. There is no school district in the province, says superintendent of education Frank Levirs, with a big enough concentration of French-speaking pupils to warrant setting up French-language schools.

Levirs points to a government-backed pilot project in Maillardville, near Coquitlam, in which one class is being taught in French beginning at kindergarten level.

He also claims B.C.'s program of teaching French as a second language is the best in the west, with 116,000 students taking French as a second language in the secondary school grades.

Even with more help and a more understanding provincial government, Moreau sees little hope for a pocket of French culture thriving in B.C. But he has been encouraged a little bit in some areas, notably Uvic's Maison Francaise program.

Every summer for the last six years, 50 to 100 persons from all walks of life — students, retirees, professional men, stenos — from B.C. and the American Northwest, study French under Quebec teachers for seven strenuous weeks.

The students achieve a solid fluency in French, opening the door for them to the culture that Moreau is so anxious to preserve. And there is a significant by-product.

The French teachers go back to Quebec shorn of any sympathies they may have had for separatism.

"They see eagerness on the part of this wide variety of people out here to share in the culture of which they are so proud themselves, and in that they see new hope for a viable, bicultural Canada.

"They are only a few people, a drop in the bucket. But the ocean is made of drops."

Shoe-Shiners Out to Raise Fast $8,000

Students from the University of Victoria and nurses from St. Joseph's and Royal Jubilee hospitals hope to raise $8,000 next Saturday by shining shoes.

Fifty-eight universities across the country will participate in the second annual Shinerama—organizers hope to raise $220,000 to aid cystic fibrosis research.

Shoe-shine teams will be located at all major shopping centres, downtown, the airport and the ferries from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Cystic fibrosis is a chronic lung disorder which affects one infant in every 1,000.

There is no cure yet for the ailment, but the symptoms, which include lung infection, difficult breathing, failure to gain weight and salt loss, can be treated.

It is thought children with cystic fibrosis are born lacking certain mucous gland functions, with the result that mucous glands secrete an abnormal, thick, gluey mucous.

Normal mucous is thin and slippery, helping to keep air passages clear and free of infection. However, the thick mucous clogs the bronchial tubes, causing lung infections, numerous attacks of pneumonia, shortness of breath and difficulty in exhaling air from the lungs.

A further complication is that the mucous also plugs the flow of digestive enzymes from the pancreas to the small intestine. Even if the child has a voracious appetite, food is only partially digested, and malnutrition can result.

Treatment of cystic fibrosis includes use of respiratory inhalation machines and mist tents, special diets to maintain nutrition, and addition of salt and digestive chemicals to the diet.

WOMAN KILLED IN CRASH

A 60-year-old Saanich woman is dead and a 79-year-old man is in satisfactory condition in hospital, the result of a two-car collision at Fifth and Henry in Sidney early Friday afternoon.

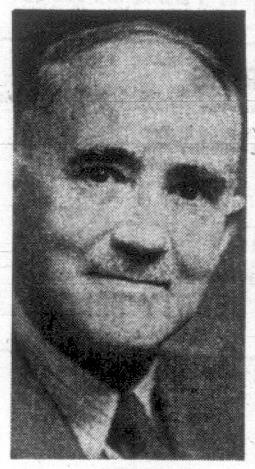

Sidney RCMP identified the woman as Mrs. Lillian Frates, 2581 Maynard. She was pronounced dead at Rest Haven Hospital in Sidney at 2:50 p.m., several hours after the crash.

Hospital officials report the condition of Ernest John Harwood, 79, of 3905 Hobbs, as satisfactory. He suffered unspecified injuries.

Police said Harwood was the driver of the car in which Mrs. Frates was the only passenger. He was returning from a trip to a summer home in the Sidney area.

The second car, police said, was driven by Roy Edward Tebo, 64, of 1480 Thurlow, who was treated at Rest Haven for bruises. Tebo's wife was a passenger in the vehicle and suffered two broken ribs. She was treated and released from hospital as well.

Police said an inquest was tentatively set for 8 p.m. Monday at McCall's chapel with Coroner D. G. Ashby officiating.

Q. Could you please tell me to what churchyard the poet Grey was referring in his An Elegy Written in an Country Churchyard? Where he was born and how he lived? L.S.

A. A native Londoner, Thomas Grey (1716-71) is believed to have been referring to the churchyard of St. Giles at Stoke Pages, where he is now buried.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send it to the "Ask the Times" editor.

Council 'Courting Disaster'

By PETER McNELLY

A former Victoria alderman and Chamber of Commerce president says city council is courting an environmental disaster by flirting with developer J. A. Reid's proposal for three high-rise towers on Wharf Street.

Aubrey Kent, 228 Douglas, said in an interview that council appears to be rushing Reid's waterfront complex without having fully considered the alternatives to Inner Harbor development.

He said this impression was reinforced this week when aldermen endorsed the principle of Reid's project on a "yes or no" vote put before an informal council meeting on Wednesday.

Mayor Courtney Haddock put the motion before the aldermen after Reid paid a surprise visit to see where council stood on his plans. Reid's tentative project includes a $25-million hotel-marina-shopping complex on Wharf Street next to the Ocean Cement Ltd. plant.

'OUT OF CHARACTER'

Kent said the Reid project is totally out of character with other buildings in the downtown core and will obscure views of the harbor and the Olympic Mountains.

He said other high-rises are sure to follow on Wharf Street if Reid's project goes through as planned.

"A high-rise is nothing to boast about and I doubt whether the waterfront is the place for them."

Kent said he can understand how council wants to increase tax revenues with high-density development on prime land. But in the long run, this kind of development would turn Victoria into a mirror of any other North American city.

Kent said some planning mistakes—like the swimming pool in Central Park—can be endured, but the harbor is too important to bungle.

"I am convinced time will prove our new swimming pool is badly located. This we can live with. But any blunder with our waterfront will really be disastrous."

Kent was an alderman from 1948 to 1952 and twice an unsuccessful mayoralty candidate. He was president of the chamber in the early 1960s. As an alderman, he said, he participated in a similar environmental mistake by voting for extended land and water rights for B.C. Forest Products.

Kent says if he looked at things then the way he sees them today, he'd have voted against extending the company's water and land rights.

He said all city councils since 1908—the year the Empress Hotel was opened—have permitted a "continuing desecration of the harbor for 60 years."

"Most of the cities I've been to except Paris and London are a hodge-podge of high-rises."

PREPARE FOR TAXES

Victorians should be prepared to pay higher property taxes, he says, if they want to keep the city from repeating the high-density mistakes other cities have made to keep taxes down.

Kent is not against commercial development on Wharf Street as long as it's not out of character with the rest of the downtown core.

If medium density development is not quite as profitable as high-rises, that's too bad for the developer, says Kent.

"This property is too important to fuss around with for a few dollars in taxes."

Kent does not think the city has to buy Reid out, a suggestion Ald. Peter Pollen recently asked council to consider. Reid should be asked to present an alternative design for his land which does not include 25-storey buildings.

"Let him sit there. We've waited three years on this thing and what the hell are three years when we're planning the city for the next 100. If Reid pulls out, someone else will come along. That's prime land, it can only increase in value."

CAR DEALERS READY FOR LAW

Victoria's car dealers are well-prepared for a provincial government order issued Friday that all new motor vehicles sold in B.C. after Jan. 1 must be equipped with anti-pollution devices.

Friday's cabinet order-in-council said the devices must control emissions from exhaust, crankcase and evaporation. The regulations do not cover vehicles made for industrial use such as mining and forestry.

Victoria dealers say all major manufacturers are aware of the new regulations and have been producing vehicles to comply with them for the market here.

Needed Now for People Crunch: MORE CITY PARKS

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Parks being eroded away. High-rises going up every year. People, more people pouring into Victoria to live. Cars, thousands more.

Feed the facts to a computer. You will get the reply: you have a problem. And a real big problem by the year 2000, says Herb Warren, newly-retired city parks administrator.

The 65-year-old park expert says there is no need to go to a computer for a solution — it's there for everyone to see.

It's obvious we need and will need much more space in 30 years," he said. "Every-time you see a low-cost housing development going up, ask yourself what play areas are being provided for children.

"And those high-rise apartments — the homes of thousands of people in the near future — what is being done to take care of their needs," he added.

If Warren had his way, land would be acquired now for future development into small parks of the character of Stadacona Park on Pandora.

This would provide space for apartment dwellers.

Warren, who was given a farewell party by city officials Thursday, says the city's environment is declining and will continue to decline.

During his 40-years service as parks administrator he has seen Beacon Hill Park eroded with roads, green fields which would have made excellent parks used for housing, and majestic trees cut down to widen thoroughfares.

Environmental decline can be expected as the population increases, he says.

"But we should take steps to slow down the decline — avoid mistakes we have made in the past," he said.

He has reason to be concerned. Capital region planners predict a population of 370,000 for the metropolitan area by the year 2001, mostly all concentrated in the city, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt.

In 1969 the population stood at 190,200.

One of Warren's pet subjects is the preservation of streams, creeks and lakes in the metropolitan area. He says the area lacks fresh water streams and visitors notice this.

He thinks the members of the regional district board responsible for acquiring land along creeks and improving them are sitting on their butts.

It seems they tried to convince him they were doing their best towards the rehabilitation of streams.

"I'm not personally convinced that they are giving high priority to this," he said. "They should get on with the job. The technical difficulties which prevented the board from undertaking such a program in the past have now been resolved."

He feels the board should step up the program for acquisition of land along Colquitz Creek, Craigflower Creek, the Bilston-Metchosin Creek, Millstream and Veitch Creek which flows into Sooke harbor.

The creeks are in poor shape, he points out. Craigflower Creek along the east boundary of Thetis Park is clogged with debris, making it difficult for salmon to make their way upstream.

Other creeks need cleaning out and are being polluted.

Warren, slight of build, and by nature a quiet man, is not inclined to reminscent on park problems. He was born in Ontario, but has lived most of his life in Victoria.

As a parks administrator, he excels in landscaping. He has a genuine feeling for flowers, and one of his regrets is that many species of wildflowers are no longer found in Beacon Hill Park.

"We have to cut the grass to prevent fires," he said. "This of course destroys the native flowers."

On the question of his experience in park development, he admits mistakes have been made.

"But many good things have been accomplished, too."

Warren never says harsh words against people opposing his park development policies, but he stands up to them and makes his views known.

While most of his work has involved formal landscaping, he loves nature — untamed wilderness — the forest — the wild rugged west coast — the silent alpine meadows — the snow-capped mountains.

His hobby is hiking and he has been to places on Vancouver Island visited by few.

Since his retirement, he hasn't lost time in getting back to the work he loves.

He is now working at Butchart's Gardens on a part-time basis which he says suits him well. He is also doing on the side some consulting on parks and gardens.

"Of course," he added. "I'm going to keep on fighting for more parks and to preserve existing ones."

Clothes to set a man apart . . .

We've never visited a nudist colony . . . but the mere thought of all that masculinity "au naturel" leaves us cold . . . Seems to us any man would look so much more "distingue" in one of the handsome new suits we saw at Wilson's this week! . . . Seriously though, it's highly important that our menfolk be well-clad for every occasion . . . makes life more enjoyable for everybody concerned . . . The Warren K. Cook suits at Wilson's are really beautiful . . . and can't fail to set a man apart . . . Colors are taken from the woods in the fall . . . lovely warm shades . . . many with a fine stripe in a contrasting color . . . like grey with a faint blue . . . green with red . . . very subtle checks . . . Materials are Devon Twists and English worsteds . . all pure wool (you'll never find synthetics in any of these fine clothes) . . . You'll notice too that there's a distinct difference in styling this fall . . . Lapels are slightly wider . . . Pocket flaps are bolder . . . Coats are shapelier . . . and if all this sounds slightly wild, please forgive us because actually these handsome, beautifully tailored suits are the sort of thing even the most conservative man would delight in . . . Why not drop in to Wilson's and look them over yourself? Then you can make suggestion to the man in your life! . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

When skirts go down, hair goes up. The old-fashoned bun and chignon are back in favor.

Here's a sale you won't want to miss . . .

We shouldn't be a bit surprised if . . . come Monday morning . . . there's isn't a lineup on Estevan Ave. . . . waiting to snap up what seems to us like incredible bargains in stretch and knit fabrics at . . . where else but Stretch & Sew Fabrics? . . . where they're starting a two-weeks only year-end inventory sale . . . What's more, there's a 9 a.m. special on Monday . . . For one hour only, S & S will be selling their best quality English Crimplene . . . regularly around $9 a yard . . . for a mere $4.95 . . . So be an early bird and get . . . not a worm . . . but a nice juicy plum! . . . More bargain bonanzas in this sale include: gorgeous polyester popcorn knit laces, which wash beautifully . . . 45" wide, marked down to $5.95 . . . Nylon and cotton striped terry in all colors and 60" wide . . . Really beautiful French antron crepe . . . regularly $7.95 for only $2.00 a yard! . . . Wool and nylon lace . . . great for sweaters $2.50 . . . There's pin dot Crimplene . . . a real special at $4.95 . . . Another outstanding bargain is 90" wide meshknit cotton for just $3.95 . . . and jacquard Crimplene in all colors for $5.95 . . . Stretch & Sew classes have already started . . . and for those who have already taken the course, Mrs. Harris will be starting lingerie classes on Sept. 16th . . . Stretch & Sew Fabrics, 2541 Estevan Ave., 592-9622.

Pant suits are the hottest selling items in U.S. clothing stores this fall.

Suits to walk out in all winter . . .

This is our year for a walking suit . . . just couldn't resist when we laid eyes on the handsome suits which have been arriving at Wilson's over the past week or so . . . with so many perfectly beautiful walking suits among them! . . . The thing we like about this type of suit . . . with its long jacket, slender skirt, and warm tweed fabric is that is can be worn without a coat all through the fall, and for the best part of the winter . . . gives one such a smart, well-put-together look! . . . Wilson's have a really good selection of these warm walking suits . . . in sizes from 8 to 18 . . . Some from Jack Clark of Dublin . . . others made by MacCallum here in Canada . . . The colors are absolutely gorgeous . . . especially in the Jack Clark hand-woven Irish tweeds . . . (as we've noted previously, you can spot a Jack Clark two blocks away!) . . . We're not going to attempt to describe all these suits, because we think you should see them for yourself . . . but we do want to mention that the styling is extremely good . . . they're cut slim and sleek to avoid any look or feel of bulk . . . Skirts, too, are a bit longer and this is all to the good because it provides balance for the longer jacket . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

We think the new disposable paper panties from England are terrific for women who travel.

Mobiles to amuse and fascinate you . . .

"Keep your eyes on the hands" . . .' Isn't that the way that Hawaiian hula goes? . . . Anyway that's what we thought of when we spied the fascinating new Japanese mobiles presently entrancing countless people in Montague Bridgman's . . . One consists of big, unblinking eyes . . . (be careful, Big Brother's watching!) . . . Another is made up of hands with pointing fingers . . . There are owls . . . signs of the zodiac . . . funny angels and devils playing musical instruments . . . silly fish that change color as they turn . . . concentric circles which have a downright hypnotic effect . . . (we'd like to try these out at a party sometime!) . . . All these Japanese mobiles are light as a zephyr . . . stir lazily to every breath of air . . . Real fun things . . . and certainly amazingly inexpensive, being tagged from $1 to $1.95 . . . Montague Bridgman also have a quite terrific selection of Danish mobiles . . . (36 different ones, not counting the Japanese!) . . . ranging in price from $1 to $8.50 . . . the latter consisting of delightful stylized fishes in different colored glass . . . There are popped out paper fishes . . . a wooden fish with big eyes . . . skeleton fish . . . 11 different types of ships . . . three different owls . . . Toucan birds . . . airplanes . . . sea horses . . . cats and monkeys . . . In short . . . a mobile to delight anyone you can think of! . . . Montague Bridgman Ltd. 811 Government St., 383-0821.

Lovely imported furniture less costly than domestic . . .

We've heard it said that the imported furniture in Home Furniture's Gallery is expensive . . . Well, it's all relative, of course . . . and how do you define "expensive"? . . . If you're looking for a $15 coffee table . . . forget about Home . . . but if you want really beautiful, high quality traditional furniture . . . whose value will increase over the years . . . furniture to be proud of, to love and to cherish . . . then The Gallery is the place to go in search of it . . . As a matter of fact, if we're going to be crass about it and talk money . . . a lot of Home's English imports cost considerably less than furniture produced in this country . . . Take, for example, nests of tables in mahogany or burl walnut . . . Home has imported ones priced from $79.30 to $99.50 . . . whereas similar tables made in Canada cost $119 . . . and the quality, we're told, is not as good . . . An extraordinary amount of stress is put on quality at The Gallery . . . Looks are not enough . . . Home searches the furniture marts of England and the U.S. for the very finest furniture made . . . and if you know your values, and do a bit of shopping around . . . you'll find that a lot of The Gallery's imported furniture is not much more expensive than Canadian-made furniture . . . yet it's three times the quality . . . Home Furniture Company, 825 Fort St., 382-5138.

Why Wash Bowls?

As unorthodox as it may seem, Wacky Chocolate Cake is a tasty way to a man's heart.

All the ingredients are thrown into the cake tin, stirred a couple of times and then tossed into the oven.

The recipe was culled from a farmer's wife who served the cake to the harvesters every fall. Needless to say, the farmer rarely had trouble hiring hands.

And the farmer's wife saved precious minutes. She advises one thing: don't worry about the directions, it WILL work.

WACKY CHOCOLATE CAKE

Sift the following ingredients into an ungreased 8x8 pan:

1½ cups flour (less 3 tbsp.)
1 cup white sugar
1 tsp. baking soda
3 tbsp. cocoa
salt

Make three holes in the flour mixture and put into separate holes:

1 tsp. vanilla
1 tbsp. vinegar
6 tbsp. melted shortening

Pour one cup water over this and mix well. Bake at 350-deg. F. for 35 minutes.

UNDERSEWING

If you've been sewing for any time at all you're no doubt familiar with the term understitching.

Understitching refers to a line of machine stitching applied to the facing along the seam line of a faced edge.

It's purpose is to hold the facing and seam allowance underneath in place and to keep the facing from rolling outward when the garment is worn.

UNDERSTITCHING IS DONE BEFORE FACING IS TURNED INSIDE

A line of understitching applied to the underside of facing of a collar is often recommended for the same purpose.

Now this is all very well. Machine understitching can be quite satisfactory when done on simple cottons or clothes for the youngsters. But machine stitching of this sort is never used in expensive high fashion clothes.

So states Anthony Blotta whose delectable fashions retail in the neighborhood of several hundred dollars — and that's quite a neighborhood.

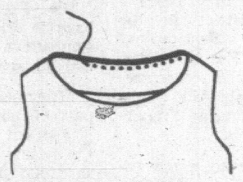

You can purchase tissue patterns of designs by this master of fashion, but to make your clothes conform with the designers' original concept is yet another thing—and one thing you won't do, if you want yours like the original is to understitch by machine.

You will however, undersew — but you'll do your undersewing by hand.

After the facing has been joined to neck edge and seam has been trimmed and clipped — here's how to proceed:

First pull facing away from seam and press seam allowance open. Then turn facing inside rolling finished edge slightly to inside to conceal seam and press again.

Now using a tiny back stitch, sew by hand along facing about ⅛" below finished edge. Catch through all seam allowances and underlining. Do not catch in outside fabric. Do not stretch edge while sewing. Only a tiny evenly spaced stitch will show on facing. The long stitch is underneath catching in seam allowances.

UNDERSEWING IS DONE AFTER FACING IS TURNED INSIDE

This not only gives a couture finish but positively prevents the seam from rolling outward.

To secure undercollar or collar facing, undersew ⅛" from outer finished edge in same manner.

U.S. Army Reserve Follows Fate of Yale and McSorley's

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just like men's colleges and stag bars, another male bastion is about to fall: The U.S. Army Reserve is going co-ed.

Before long, women will be doing about-faces during weekend reserve meetings.

"There may be some problems at first, but nothing we can't overcome," says an army spokesman, Lt.-Col. Robert Zion.

For example, in those armories lacking separate toilet facilities, Zion says a simple sign reading "Men" on one side and "Women" on the other will solve the problem. All the gals have to do is knock first and flip the sign when they want to use the bathroom.

During summer camp, off-base motels will serve as quarters for the girls when they go with the troops for their annual two-week training, usually at some army post.

The regular army has about 12,000 Women's Army Corps members on active duty now.

The army hopes to recruit WAC reservists to serve alongside 260,000 men in all types of units except combat or combat-support outfits.

"We don't want to make women into riflemen," says Maj. Rhoda Messer, a WAC information officer. But just about every other type of job except heavy construction is open, she said.

Open House

An open house will be held Saturday, Sept. 19, to honor Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Bent of No. 305, 1625 Richmond Road who recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary.

The open house will be held at the Salvation Army, 757 Pandora Avenue, at 7:30 p.m.

Mr. Bent was born in Victoria and worked in the automobile industry, retiring 3½ years ago from his own service station.

The couple have been active in Salvation Army work in Victoria. They have a duaghter, Mrs. Nelson Martin; a son, Ernie, and five grandchildren.

GREETING FALL IN STYLE

Models Kip Wallace and Penny Moyes are already in the know as far as fall fashions are concerned. The outfits they are wearing above are two of the many to be shown when the Business Ladies Division of the Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club hold its annual Fashion Flair show Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. in the clubhouse. Fashions will be by Eatons and all proceeds will go toward junior golf development. Tickets for the event are available at the club office. (Robin Clarke photo.)

Moon Feast

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

The 15th day of the eighth month on the Chinese lunar calendar has been celebrated with a moon festival since the calendar was devised, over 4,600 years ago.

This year, the date falls on the 15th day of the ninth month, gregorian calendar, and again the Chinese will be celebrate with the traditional family feast, comparable in many ways to Thanksgiving in North America.

On this day, when the moon is larger and brighter than at any time of the year, Chinese people visit each other to present gifts, especially the moon cakes which are served only at this time of year.

These are round pastries filled with a variety of fillings, including lotus nut paste — a bit like marzipan, though not as sweet. Others are filled with egg yoke mixtures, all seemingly rich and full of calories.

They are cut into wedges and served with tea.

The tea, Chinese hosts assure Canadian weight watchers, is not only "the cementer of friendship," but very useful in preventing the calories from doing any harm. Tannic acid takes care of them, they say.

All special foods served during the festival are prepared in circular shape, symbolic of the full moon.

When members of Victoria's Chinese community celebrate the festival next week, they will exchange other traditional gifts.

Little baskets (now made of plastic) are decorated with flowers and tassles. They hold pastries and sweets in the shape of pigs or fish, also symbolizing a plentiful harvest. Other candies are in the shape of pagodas or buddhas.

Chinese women recall that these presents were so pretty, "like Easter eggs," that they kept them as decorations and never ate them.

Moon festival time is as good a time as any to remind westerners what Chinese astrologers discovered thousands of years ago: There is no man on the moon.

According to Chinese legend, the moon is ruled by the moon goddess in her jade palaces.

Up there with her, although as yet unseen by astronauts and western astronomers, is a rabbit forever pounding his elixir of immortality, which does not contain green cheese.

Sampling a moon cake a few days before the Chinese moon festival Tuesday is seven-year-old Wendy Low, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustine Low, North Park Street. For her pre-festival taste test Wendy was dressed all in red, the color for good luck and happiness. Her hair, set in traditional Chinese style, is tied with scarlet velvet ribbons. Couple Marks Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Vincent celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary recently with a family dinner and a surprise party.

The dinner, attended by their sons-in law and daughter Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Holden and Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Page, preceeded the party which was held at the Pages' Hamilton Road home.

The couple has a third daughter, Mrs. Leslie Ott, in Calgary, Alta. There are 10 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Out-of-town guests at the party included a granddaughter, Mrs. R. B. Prior, of Duncan, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Daum of Vancouver.

The couple was married September 2, 1920, in St. Luke's Anglican Church, Winnipeg. They lived in Winnipeg for 19 years before moving to B.C.

Mrs. Vincent was born in Brimingham, England, and Mr. Vincent in Norfolk, England.

Course Starts Monday

The Victoria Citizens' Counselling Centre will begin its six-week course, More Joy In Your Marriage, Monday evening at the Metropolitan Church Annex.

The course is based on two books by Dr. Herbert Otto: More Joy In Your Marriage and Developing Human Potential. The course aims to give an individual an opportunity to work on his own growth and potential then relate it to his marriage.

Registration for the course is still open. To register, or obtain further information, call either Heather Nicol, 592-4709, or Mona Hundleby, 592-1566.

DEAR ABBY . . .

School Mom

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have just about had it with my mother. A year ago I was transferred to another city, so I started to write to her about every other week. Well, mother has a lot of time and she answers my letters the minute she gets them, but here is my complaint: She returns my last letter all marked up with corrections on my spelling, grammar, etc. (She "circles" the mistakes with red ink—like a school teacher).

Abby, I am a grown man, 29 years of age. I am also married, and these "corrected letters" make me look foolish before my wife. I can't tell my wife not to open my mother's letters because they come addressed to "Mr. and Mrs."

Don't tell me to ask my mother to stop it because she thinks she is "helping" me by pointing out my mistakes. I am a salesman and have been making steady progress for several years with the same firm, and I don't plan on teaching English anyplace, so please print this in your column and maybe she'll get off my back.—Seeing Red in Lousiville.

DEAR SEEING: You didn't ask for advice: you asked only that I print your letter. If you want to make sure your mother doesn't miss this, circle it in red, and mail it to her. She might get the hint.

DEAR ABBY: I have a wonderful wife, but she is a nut when it comes to her figure. She looks through the fashion magazines and thinks if she doesn't look like those scrawny, underfed beanpoles, she's too fat. She's a tall woman and could carry a lot more meat on her bones than she does, but she counts every calorie she puts in her mouth.

Before we were married (15 years ago) we used to enjoy ice cream sundaes, popcorn and hot dogs. Now it's different. If I reach for a peanut she raps my knuckles and says "Darling, you don't need that."

Be a pal, Abby, and tell me (in your column) how much you think a woman who is 5 feet 6 should weigh in at.—Skinny's Husband.

DEAR HUSBAND: She should weigh in at the weight her husband thinks is "way out."

DEAR ABBY: I am an average man, 33 years of age, and am so ashamed of my problem I could never tell anyone about it because I realize how childish it is. If I am out somewhere and somebody orders fish—just the sight of it—if it has the head on, makes me sick and I have to leave the table. (This goes for sardines too). Most fish come without the head, thank heavens, but occasionally they will serve fish with the head, and that is where I can't take it.

I suppose it started when I was small and used to go fishing with my uncle. I hated to see the poor fish flopping around in the boat, or on the hook fighting for their lives. And now every dead fish with a head makes me sick. Is there a way to overcome this feeling? I have tried to force myself to look, but my stomach turns over. Thank you.—No Fish Story.

DEAR NO FISH: Psychotherapy could probably help you overcome this phobia, but if that's your most serious problem, you're a lucky man.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell NEAT, the man who shaved the hair off his legs and chest because he was teased about it to let it grow again. Hairy-chested men are masculine and sexy looking. Anyone who would tease a hairy man is just jealous. I think deep down, every man wants a hairy body. Why, men are even buying wigs for their chests!

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

'Lady in the Box' Makes Learning Fun

PALO ALTO, Calif. (UPI) — A new generation of elementary school students is taking computers in stride.

At Willow School in East Palo Alto, Calif., six and seven-year-old youngsters are so enthusiastic about computers used for teaching mathematics that the biggest problem is getting them to leave when the period ends.

"As soon as classes are dismissed at the end of the day, the kids come back to use the computer," Ronald Weaver, principal at Willow, said.

The Ravenswood City School District, in which "CAI"—computer assisted instruction—has been used for more than five years, has had more experience in the field than any other school system.

"At first," says Bill Rybensky, director of the program, "some of the younger students were concerned about the 'lady in the box,' but we explained what was really happening."

A new low-price CAI system has been installed at Willow School this year. It is a computer education set-up developed by Hewlett-Packard Co. It costs less than $150,000, a price within range of many school districts.

"Results are what count in this business," says Rybensky. Tests are now being conducted to see whether the computer can really teach children.

Willow School has 32 teletype terminals in its computer lab. Students from the first six grades use the computer for mathematics drill and practice about 10 minutes a day, with each pupil progressing at his own rate.

A typical lesson begins like this:

Computer: "What is your ID number and first name?"

Pupil: "12345 Jimmy."

Computer: "Is your last name Schmidt?"

Pupil: "Yes."

Computer: "Hello, Jimmy. We hope you enjoy today's problems. Here we go."

What follows is a fascinating 10-minute exchange between Jimmy and the computer, which stands in a room adjacent to the lab where the teletypes are located.

At the completion of the lesson the computer might say: "Lesson over. You answered 11 out of 16 questions correctly. Goodby, Jimmy. Please tear off the paper at the dotted line."

'South's Mistakes Can Teach North'

By KEN POLE

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Northern Canadians were told Friday night they can benefit by mistakes made in the development of southern Canada.

Allan Gotlieb, deputy minister of communication, was addressing a banquet at the end of the first northern communications on behalf of Communications Minister Eric Kierans.

"Change and development are not always for the long-range good of a region or territory," Mr. Gotlieb said. "This is the sad lesson that we are only now beginning to learn from the history of the development of the southernmost part of this continent.

"You in the North have a chance to learn from the human and ecological tragedies and atrocities of the past."

The three-day conference was attended by 200 delegates from universities across Canada and all levels of government as well as residents of northern Canada.

Mr. Gotlieb described the conference as an "augury of change and development" but said "change and development are not always for the long-range good of a region."

He also said:

NEED IMPROVE

"The people of the North . . . too often in the past and even in the present have been deprived of the most basic aids to communications which are readily available to their compatriots in the South.

The concensus of the delegates after a series of workshops Thursday and Friday was that drastic revision of the North's communications facilities is urgent.

Mr. Gotlieb said his department had played a role in development of Telesat Canada—a program that will launch a multi-million dollar satellite described as the western world's first domestic communications satellite on a commercial basis.

"One of the main social purposes of this action on the part of the Canadian government . . . was to provide more reliable communications services in the Canadian North.

"Despite the opinions expressed by critics—mainly in the South—I am firmly convinced that this was a necessary social objective.

" . . . I certainly don't believe that having the world's first domestic satellite system is a waste of money and I put even less credence in the proposition that access to better communications . . . will destroy the diverse cultures of Canada."

MUST INTEGRATE

Some delegates to the conference had suggested live television was not needed by northern natives, that it would damage their cultures and destroy their uniqueness.

"I accept as legitimate the concern that calls for planning of systems to meet the real social and cultural needs of a community as well as its commercial and industrial needs," Mr. Gotlieb said.

He said Northerners must play a major part in determining their communications priorities because the day will come when important industrial centres will grow in the most remote parts of Canada.

"Even without these possible future developments there will be significant improvements in northern communications when the system goes into operation."

Two dozen northern communities will be linked to network television when the satellite—called Anik, Eskimo for "Little Brother"—soars into orbit from Cape Kennedy in 1972 atop a Thor Delta launch vehicle. Two others will be provided with ground stations to widen two-way radio telephone facilities in the Arctic.

Mr. Gotlieb said extension of high-quality telecommunications will give northern Canada access to a myriad of services now considered commonplace in the narrow population belt north of the 49th parallel.

"What I hope for is that these new communications links will serve to provide the North and northern residents with a sense of identity and a means of self-expression. . . . They are a powerful tool in community development."

Nine Arrested In Rochdale Raid

TORONTO (CP) — Nine persons were arrested and at least five persons suffered minor injuries Friday night during a police drug squad raid on Rochdale College, an experimental free college in the downtown area.

Police said those arrested had been charged with various offences, including drug offences. One policeman suffered minor injuries as bottles and other debris were hurled from the windows of the residential college.

Five members of the college's security force—made up of college residents—said they had been struck by police officers.

One man was treated for undetermined injuries by a doctor in the building and an unidentified 22-year-old man was treated at Toronto Western Hospital. Hospital officials did not reveal the nature of his injuries.

Witnesses said about 40 policemen equipped with crowbars and axe handles entered the building about 9:45 p.m. and proceeded to the sixth floor where they broke down the doors of four apartments and made a thorough search.

A Rochdale security guard who called himself Little John said the police ignored previous arrangements whereby they would ask members of the security force to escort them to the apartments they wished to search.

Witnesses said the police pushed past security guards, who dress in distinctive black shirts with their names printed in white on the front, and initially failed to show search warrants when requested to do so.

Little John said he asked the officers several times to show search warrants but these were not produced until after the apartments had been broken into.

College Management Blasted

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — A researcher for the presidential commission on campus unrest has hinted that the commission's final report may place much of the blame for college violence on school administrators.

"I'm afraid, frankly, that management is making too damn many mistakes," Roland D. Patzer, dean of students at the University of Vermont, said in an interview Friday.

"The lack of planning is incredible," Patzer added. "The problem is that there is an unwillingness on the part of institutions to address themselves to this particular problem."

Patzer indicated that those colleges with constantly changing administrations or leaders unwilling to confront problems head-on seem more susceptible to violence.

Campuses "where the leadership is open, candid and consistent" appear far less prone to violence, he said.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

A World of Applauders

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

Applause has become a significant force in our way of life. In the entertainment industry, and in politics too, careers are made and broken by applause.

Our applause is sometimes measured by machines. And we are often manipulated into offering applause. Persons in groups can be led to applaud things which very few of them as individuals would even clap one hand at.

Canned applause, along with canned laughter, is often dubbed on to the sound-tracks of filmed television programs and used as background support on radio shows. And so we sit in our easy chairs, beguiled by artificial applause into accepting what we really know to be utter tripe as the fine flower of man's creativity.

How else can you account for the phenomenal success of, say, The Beverly Hillbillies?

We often applaud simply as an act of conformity. We do not wish to be thought odd, insensitive, puritanical, by not applauding what everyone else is applauding. Applause is sometimes the surrender by a person of his right and duty to exercise mature judgment.

Today the mass media of communication seem to be producing conformities of response and attitude without people being fully aware of the extent to which they are being manipulated.

Fortunately, human nature has a strain of sheer cussedness in it, and this keeps society from becoming thoroughly homogenized with respect to major issues and concerns. But how many of us, really, bring individual judgment to bear on literary and artistic matters, on entertainments, in politics in religion or in anti-religion?

We readily applaud anything applauded by the "in-group" we associate with or wish to associate with. We easily go along with the opinion of individuals and groups of which we stand in awe for some peculiar reason.

And the hippie is as prone to being self-victimized by this sort of thing as is his Chamber-of-Commerce father — and vice versa.

Queen Victoria is reported to have said when someone was trying to amuse her and not succeeding, "We are not amused," She was, of course, a very stuffy person — such a typical Victorian! But in her stuffy response there is a hint of wisdom.

How many of us have the courage not to feign amusement when we are not really amused? Victoria may have been stuffy, even discourteous — but she was expressing her own judgment and not that of others.

We tend to be rather free-and-easy with our applause probably because we feel that willingness to applaud promiscously is a sign of tolerance.

You wouldn't want people to think that you are intolerant and narrow-minded with respect to, say, the so-called "new permissiveness" in films and on the stage and in books, would you?

Artistic integrity is not necessarily authenticated by four-letter words, bared female bosoms, and explicit sex. We must recognize that broadmindedness can have its own subversively built-in narrowness, that easy tolerance can have its own undertones of rigid intolerance.

The real issue here is not in broad-mindedness versus narrow-mindedness, for both can carry heavy loads of the bogus and the evasive. The issue here is in mature integrity, in being your own man or woman in making your own judgments.

St. Paul once prayed that some of his friends would have "the gift of true discrimination." (Philippians 1:10. New English Bible) I like that expression. "True discrimination" is essential to authentic maturity.

It is something which goes beyond mere conformity and mere nonconformity, goes right to the heart of personal identity and fulfilment.

Gospel Quartet To Sing in City

A well-known gospel music quartet will visit Victoria next week.

The Imperials, one of United States' most versatile vocal groups, will be heard Friday at Victoria High, starting at 8 p.m.

Since the group's inception in 1963, it has held concerts from coast to coast in major auditorium gospel concerts, college and university programs, fair and trade shows.

PEARL KING

Retreat Set For City

Mrs. Pearl A. King, national director for Winning Women Inc., is to be featured speaker at a city inter-denominational women's retreat Sept. 18.

Mrs. King, of Seattle, is prominent in the United States and Canada as a leader of women's and young people's religious groups and as a conference speaker.

The retreat is to be held in the St. John's Ambulance hall, 941 Pandora, with registration and morning session starting at 9:30 a.m. The afternoon session begins at 1:30 p.m.

Alcoholism Meet Set

The Greater Victoria Association on Alcoholism will hold its first meeting of the year Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. in the social suite, First United Church, 932 Balmoral Street.

Guest speaker will be city physician Dr. Jack Patterson.

The association, established four years ago, deals with the social, medical and economic problems caused by alcoholism.

Vancouver's Hare Krishna Sect Given Green Light to Campaign

VANCOUVER (CP) — This city's saffron-robed Hare Krishna monks can do their chanting unrestrained by a municipal anti-noise bylaw, County Court Judge Graham Darling ruled this week.

The judge set aside a Provincial Court conviction and $25 fine imposed earlier on sect leader Clay Harrold, 29, and ruled that because freedom of religion is under federal control, any further prosecution must be launched under provisions of the Criminal Code.

Harrold appealed his conviction citing the Canadian Bill of Rights and saying that no crime had been committed.

The appeal took the form of a new trial in which some witnesses testified that the chanting and drumming of the Krishnas was like the "constant tapping of a pencil on a table" or of someone "constantly tapping on a wall."

The monks wonder around downtown Vancouver with shaven heads, wearing orange robes and running shoes. They collect donations and distribute pamphlets to the beat of little drums and chants.

The judge noted that Harrold was a bona fide religious practitioner honestly pursuing his faith but said that the well-intended message does not communicate to some members of the public.

Judge Darling ruled that the anti-noise bylaw cannot be used to prohibit Harrold from carrying on his bona fide religious activities and that if Harrold must be restrained, the restraint must come from federal law.

Can't Read

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new study shows 18.5 million Americans can't read well enough to fill out a routine application for a loan, driver's licence, welfare benefits or medical aid.

The National Reading Council says the study brought out for the first time that millions may be deprived of necessary services simply because they lack reading ability.

KY TO RETURN TO TALKS

Saigon Ending Paris Boycott

SAIGON (AP) — Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky, supervisor of the South Vietnamese delegation to the Paris peace talks, said today he plans to return to the negotiations after a nearly 18-month boycott.

Meanwhile, the United States command announced the first withdrawals of infantry units from the U.S. 1st Marine Corps Division and said the initial deployment would cut American strength in South Vietnam by 1,400 men.

Informed sources said the entire 20,000-man division will be withdrawn from Vietnam by next May 1 as part of President Nixon's plans to cut the authorized American troop strength to 284,000 by next spring. Current U.S. strength is slightly less than 400,000.

President Nguyen Van Thieu's office and other independent sources left the impression that Ky would not be carrying back any new proposals to end the war in Vietnam.

The official sources said that if there were any dramatic new initiatives to be made, Thieu likely would make such an announcement in Saigon.

"I don't know of any significance at all in Ky returning except to upgrade the talks," said one source.

There was speculation that Ky would use the trip to Paris as a diplomatic way of getting out of a promised appearance at a March for Victory in Washington Oct. 3.

But a spokesman for Ky said he will definitely appear at the rally, organized by radio evangelist Rev. Carl T. McIntire.

FIGHTING CONTINUES

On the battlefields of Indochina, fighting continued on three fronts.

Communist command troops launched their third ground assault this week against South Vietnamese infantrymen about a mile southwest of Fire Base O'Reilly in the northern quarter of South Vietnam near Laos.

Field reports said the attack was driven back. North Vietnamese and Viet Cong soldiers cut a highway linking Cambodia with South Vietnam and launched mortar attacks on Cambodian troops attempting to clear out the area 30 miles south of Phnom Penh.

The U.S. 7th Fleet destroyer Lloyd Thomas steamed for Subic Bay naval base in the Philippines for repairs after an explosion in a forward gun mount killed three crew members and injured 10.

A navy spokesman said a defective shell apparently caused the explosion. He said that as a result, all five-inch ammunition of the same type has been "temporarily suspended" from use by all 7th Fleet ships.

The 3,500-ton destroyer was firing from off South Vietnam in support of Australian ground troops 45 miles southeast of Saigon when the explosion occurred Friday.

Hurricane Ella Closing In On East Mexico

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Winds mounted to more than 125 miles an hour as Hurricane Ella powered almost to the east coast of Mexico today.

Although the weather bureau said earlier that the storm's westward movement at less than 10 miles an hour made its course "very erratic," it reported early today that Ella still was pointed toward Soto la Marina, Mexico, and continued to gain strength.

Tides up to eight feet and rains of 10 inches were expected as the hurricane battered across the Gulf of Mexico coastline about 135 miles south of Brownsville.

Rain already was falling in torrents and spreading inland over southern Texas and northeastern Mexico.

Sustained winds near the centre increased to 125 miles an hour with stronger gusts, the weather bureau said.

With high winds extending from the hurricane's centre outward 50 miles, Brownsville and much of the Texas coast to the north expected hammering gales.

The weather bureau advised all persons to vacate Gulf of Mexico beaches and said small craft should stay ashore.

The storm was then centred about 135 miles south of Brownsville and 25 miles off the Mexican coast east of Soto la Marina. It was crawling westward at about 10 miles an hour or less.

As Ella moved closer Friday night, storm shelters began to fill with coastal residents fleeing before the winds and tides.

Ella moved across the Yucatan Peninsula of Mexico Thursday with winds of 75 miles an hour.

Manson Lawyer Jailed For Contempt in Trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Charles M. Manson's lawyer has been jailed for the weekend for contempt of court after interrupting testimony at the Sharon Tate murder trial. He said the testimony would "tend to crucify Mr. Manson."

The trial judge sentenced Irving Kanarek to three nights in jail Friday after Kanarek's constant objections all but halted testimony about Manson by Danny DeCarlo, a former motorcycle gang leader, now a gunsmith.

DeCarlo, once a member of Manson's hippie-style "family," was testifying that Manson wanted to start a black-white war in which black people "would have their throats cut and be hung up by their feet."

He said Manson "didn't like the idea that black people were fooling around with the white girls. He was dead set against that."

Kanarek made dozens of objections before Superior Court Judge Charles Older told him: "I find you in direct contempt of court for interrupting the testimony of Mr. DeCarlo."

Kanarek told the judge: "These are very important matters that are coming out. They tend to crucify Mr. Manson."

It was Kanarek's second contempt sentence of the trial. He was jailed for a night July 29 after he was cited for interrupting chief state witness Linda Kasabian.

Manson, 35, and three women followers—Patricia Krenwinkel, 22; Leslie Van Houten, 20, and Susan Atkins, 21—are on trial for murder-conspiracy in the slayings of the blonde actress and six others in August, 1969.

New Pension Plan Bared

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian National Railway announced Friday an amendment to their pension plan which will permit qualified employees to retire at age 60 with full pension benefits.

The amendment, effective Sept. 30, provides early retirement for all employees whose age and allowable years of service total 85 or more.

Employees may retire at age 55, with a pension reduction based on the number of years short of 60 at retirement date. The previous retirement age will full benefits was 65.

DOG GETS SIGNALS CROSSED

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A beagle got its signals crossed here, ignoring the would-be burgler and biting the policeman.

The hound, owned by James R. Walden, sank its teeth into the left ankle of the patrolman who went to the Walden home to investigate an attempted break-in.

The dog apparently had ignored the prowler, who had tried to pry open a window.

148 Killed In Fighting

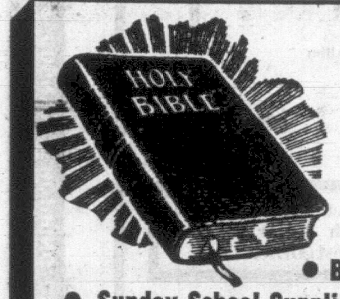

AMMAN (Reuters) — Total casualties among soldiers, guerrillas and civilians in 11 days of fighting in Jordan, from Aug. 31 to Sept. 10, were 148 killed and 521 wounded.

The biweekly newspaper Al-Sharara, published by the Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, released the figures today.

The fighting ended Thursday with a ceasefire implemented as part of an agreement between King Hussein's government and the commandos.

Sands Exclusive service for those who travel . . .
A collect call to Sands, at a time of emergency, brings one of our service vehicles (or charter aircraft) out to you anywhere in the Pacific Northwest.
You are spared the distress of having an unfamiliar funeral director in another city arrange for removal to Victoria, and at a cost which far exceeds our special service. Sands relieve you of all anxiety at a time when it is comforting to have friends attending to your needs rather than strangers.
Sands gives forethought to funeral costs . . .
A service of dignity and beauty can be arranged regardless of financial circumstances. The selection of casket to suit every financial need is made possible through Sands' economical practice of car-load purchasing . . . savings which are shared with those we serve.

Castles of Ireland Intriguing

By MARGARET NESS

DUBLIN (CP) — Ireland is the country for those who are castle-minded. As well as viewing several famous castles, travellers can do a five-day driving tour from Dublin and stay at two of them, as well as a manor house.

Once the North American gets used to the left-hand drive, the chore becomes easy as the rural roads are uncrowded. Dublin's city traffic can be avoided by ordering delivery of the car at the airport and going by airport bus to pick it up.

First overnight stop is Kilkea Castle, now a modern hotel and less than two hours from Dublin. This leaves most of the afternoon to explore the castle and relax in the gardens.

Kilkea claims to be the oldest inhabited castle in Ireland, built in 1180 for a left-handed warrior. Consequently one staircase spirals uniquely in the wrong direction, which allowed him to wield his sword and defend the staircase without hitting the wall.

In 1244 the castle passed to the Fitzgeralds, a great Irish family, and remained in their possession until 1956.

There's even a ghost. In Room 222, one of the 16th century Fitzgeralds practised black magic and vanished mysteriously. He's supposed to return every seven years.

BATHROOM UNIQUE

To reach the top tower room (No. 215), guests have to climb—no elevator. But they are overcome by its circular bathroom, with the bath smack in the middle and slit apertures for shooting arrows through. All this for about $12.50 each in a twin-bedded room.

The second day's journey requires an early start to proceed to Waterford via Carlow, Enniscorthy and New Ross. There isn't a castle hotel in Waterford but the Tower Hotel is opposite the 1,000-year-old Reginald's Tower, now a museum.

The Waterford glass factory is worth a visit, but this must be arranged in advance by telephone since only a few visitors can go through at a time.

Travellers can leave Waterford after lunch for the next leg—Shanagarry via Dungarvan and Cappoquin, where a short detour brings into view Lismore Castle, the Irish home of the Duke of Devonshire.

At Shanagarry the stop is at the Ballymaloe House on the Ballycotton Road, a rambling old manor house with a reputation for excellent food. A dinner of avocado, cheese fondue, seafood and a gooseberry tart costs about $4.

For those who feel they can't go to Ireland without kissing the Blarney Stone, the Ballymaloe stop can be substituted with a run to Cork for the night and nearby Blarney next morning.

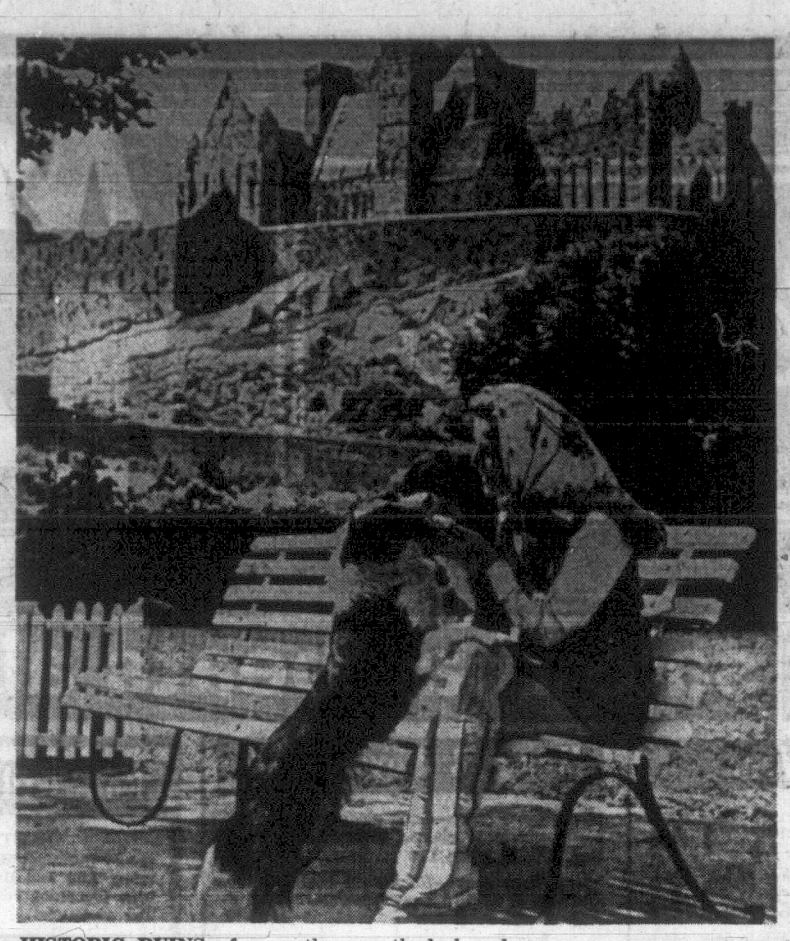

SCENERY CHANGES

In either case, the route goes back to Lismore and crosses the Knockmealdown Mountains (highest elevation 1,114 feet) on what is called the Vee. This is a zig-zag road going into completely different scenery: black peat-moss downs. At Cahir (pronounced Care) a splendid old castle, now undergoing restoration, can be seen.

For the last night it's Cashel, with Ireland's famous Rock of Cashel that includes the ruins of the castle, cathedral and churches, situated on a limestone outcrop. The stay here is at the Cashel Palace, built in the 18th century for an archbishop. The elegant lounge and breakfast room are period-decorated.

Room with bath and breakfast here comes to $8 to $13 each. Rooms facing the rock, which is floodlit at night, have a spectacular view.

The route back to Dublin passes Kilkenny Castle, with much of its original 13th century structure still remaining.

HISTORIC RUINS of a castle, a cathedral and churches sit atop Ireland's famous Rock of Cashel, a limestone outcrop. The rock is illuminated at night, providing a spectacular sight for tourists at the nearby Cashel Palace, built in the 18th century for an archbishop and now used as a hotel. (CP Photo)

LITTLE CRABS A NO-NO

Two Victorians pleaded guilty Tuesday before Judge E. Murphy at Sooke to charges of possessing undersized crabs.

Wah Louie, 2535 Prior Street, and Peter Evanechko, 1255 Stancil Lane, were each fined $15.

Both of the offences took place at Sooke.

Britain's Polytechs Boon to Dropouts

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

LONDON — The term "dropout" is fast disappearing in Britain.

The country's technical schools (better known there as polytechnics) are now awarding their own degrees. And this means new hope for more than 50,000 teenagers who failed to get university entrance on their summer examinations.

In some industries, polytechnic graduates are actually preferred to university graduates because of their greater practical experience.

"We prefer men from technical schools because, in many cases, the fully-qualified electronics engineer is useless to us," said John Coleman, head of the $12 million Gresham Electronics Group.

Twenty-six of the new polytechnic schools have recenly come into being, notably the giant Northeast London Polytechnic, which, it is forecast, will be bigger than Oxford and Cambridge universities by 1980.

"We are certainly not the dustbins of the university world," says Dr. George Brosan, director of Northeast "Poly." "We are relatively unknown in the schools, but I believe we shall soon show that our graduates do as well, if not better than, university graduates in practical careers.

"At a polytechnic young people get firsthand experience on a shop floor and they learn the technicalities of business life. Many industrialists are beginning to doubt the wisdom of employing a university graduate just because he is a university graduate."

China Mobilizing for National Day Celebrations

By NORMAN WEBSTER
Special to the Times

PEKING — The artist in the imperial heavenly vault was a study in concentration. Sitting atop a ladder, he was absorbed in touching up the left eyebrow on a huge color portrait of Communist party chairman Mao Tse-Tung.

From the temple of heaven to the humblest of hutungs, cleanup time is here again as Peking steps up the pace of preparations for China's 21st National Day on October 1.

Paint is being liberally applied — to store fronts, to walls, to portraits of the chairman and to the billboards that carry his sayings on brilliant red backgrounds.

The city's countless trees are being pruned and the brush dragged away by children. Other youngsters are pulling up the grass which has dared to grow on the hard-packed earth beside streets and in vacant lots.

Teenagers and adults are working hard in central sections of the city to clear away mounds thrown up by the digging of air raid shelters and tunnels. Trucks and pedicarts cart the dirt away.

Rehearsals for the big day and its mammoth parade are well under way. In parks and open space all over the city, groups march, drums beat and dancers practice their routines.

Thousands of young people went through their paces in Tien an Men square on the weekend. In front of them as they drilled was the Gate of Heavenly Peace (Tien An Men), renovated this past winter, where chairman Mao will appear to the multitudes on National Day.

Overseas Chinese are in town in greater numbers. They can usually be picked out by their tailored trousers.

Author Han Suyin, who was born in Peking, has returned again this year. Edgar Snow, the American writer who first told the story of Chinese Communism and its leaders to the western world, arrived in China last month and will undoubtedly attend National Day celebrations in the capital.

Peking's diplomats are following this year's preparations with more than usual interest. Many believe the marchers, dancers and drummers may find themselves out in the streets before October 1 — celebrating the convening of the long-awaited National People's Congress.

A congress brings together representatives from the masses as a whole, not just the Communist party, and is technically the highest organ of state power. Real power, however, is exercised by the party.

CHOU EN-LAI
. . . possible choice

LIN PIAO
. . . more likely

In fact, the last full meeting of the National People's Congress ended in January, 1965, and the last reported meeting of its standing committee was in April, 1966. Its constitution says the congress should meet annually and be re-elected every four years.

A congress is needed to clear up some of the unfinished business of the cultural revolution. A prime task will be to sanction the removal of Liu Shao-Chi as chairman of the People's Republic and to name a new head of state. Liu, Mao's main target during the cultural revolution, was stripped of all posts by the party in October, 1968.

The congress would also approve new appointments to the Country's state council, which is headed by Premier Chou En-Lai. Many important departments of government are without known leaders. Indeed only a quarter of the officials of ministerial and vice-ministerial rank have appeared in public since the turmoil of the cultural revolution, although this does not necessarily mean all the rest have been purged.

The new head of state may well be the 76-year-old Mao himself. He was first chairman of the People's Republic, relinquishing the office to Liu in 1959. Other strong possibilities are party vice-chairman Lin Piao, 63, and Premier Chou, 72, if the position is to remain one with political clout.

If it is to become just a ceremonial post, a possible nominee is Tung Pi-Wu, 84, a vice-chairman of the republic who has been carrying out many head of state duties. More likely would be Kuo Mo-Jo, 79, vice-chairman of the standing committee of the previous congress.

Among other probable tasks for the next congress, whenever it is held, are adoption of a new constitution and approval of a new five-year economic plan presented by Premier Chou. The cultural revolution disrupted the previous plan, which was supposedly set for the years 1966 to 1970.

Convening of a National People's Congress has been awaited since the ninth congress of the Communist party in April, 1969. Many predicted it would be held at this time last year.

Certainly a period close to National Day is best for the holding of such a meeting. Many of the country's key figures not resident in the capital come here for the October festivities.

Observers note other possible pointers to an imminent congress. Freshly painted desks for the 10,000-seat plenary hall have been seen in the great hall of the people.

Provincial congresses of "Mao Tse-Tung thought activists" have been held in many provinces this spring and summer, and delegates to the congress could have been selected at them.

The press has been referring more frequently to members of the congress standing committee in recent months, and both Tung Pi-Wu and Kuo Mo-Jo have been kept in the public eye.

FIRST CARS OFF NEW ASSEMBLY LINE

Soviets Make Automotive Gains

MOWCOW (WP) — The first, long-awaited cars have come off the assembly line at Russia's Fiat-assisted plant in Togliatti, Pravda said this week.

The Volga Automobile Factory is expected to turn out 20,000 to 30,000 cars this year. It is scheduled to produce 660,000 a year when it reaches full production. Total automobile production in the Soviet Union this year is planned for 328,000.

Full production at Toglaitti was originally scheduled for 1972. Early in 1969 Soviet officials said full production would not be achieved until 1975.

Pravda did not set a date, but criticized ministries responsible for past and present delays. The first cars should have been completed in April.

The new cars, known officially as Vaz-2101 from the Russian initials for Volga Automobile Factory, will be called Zhiguli after the hills across the Volga from Toglaitti.

The one automobile store in Moscow recently put up a notice that the thousands of people on the waiting list for Volgas — the most numerous Soviet cars — would be allowed to choose Zhigulis as their turns come up and the cars become available.

The Zhiguli will cost a Soviet citizen 5,500 rubles ($6,112 at the official rate). The Volga Gaz-21, which went out of production in July but is still reaching buyers, was priced at 5,600 rubles; the new Volga Gaz-24 is selling for 9,000 rubles.

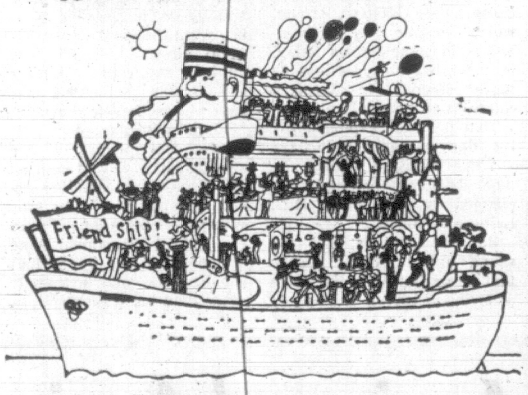

The Zhiguli is modeled on the Fiat-124, already going into obsolescence in the west. It will have higher ground clearance, a help on bad Soviet roads, and special features to cope with icy Soviet winters. Among them are a sealed radiator with antifreeze, a starter intended to work at temperatures of minus 25 degrees Centigrade, and heated door handles.

The Zhiguli represents a significant technological gain for the Soviets in more basic ways. One example of this can be seen from figures Pravda did not publish.

Cars here have been a prime example of wasted metal, according to the journal "Problems of Economics." In 1965, the Soviet engineering industries used 25 per cent more materials than foreign countries for a given volume of production. The old Volga therefore weighed 52.5 pounds per horsepower. The Zhiguli will weigh 31.5 pounds per horsepower, a significant gain. "Problems of Economics" said western cars in the Volga class weigh about 22 pounds per horsepower.

The Togliatti plant is also key to new style Soviet co-operation with foreign industry. Several hundred Italians, Germans and other foreigners have been working and living at the site. Observers here expect their experience to be exploited at the huge new truck plant planned for Naberezhny Chelny on the Kama River, which the Soviets hope to see built with help from a European consortium headed by Daimler-Benz with Fiat co-operation.

Before setting out to see the world...
. . . there are a few things you should know.
Most of us develop the urge to get away from it all at one time or another. To cross new horizons; to meet people, and experience their culture. Despite the dazzling advances in the world of transportation, the lot of the aspirant traveler is not yet as simple as just packing a bag and leaving home on a dream. The very task of selecting the most advantageous air fare can be a mind boggling affair before starting on transfers, accommodations and sightseeing.
Many an experienced traveler has found that the surest and most enjoyable way to travel is on an American Express Escorted or Independent tour. Tours that cover Great Britain, Ireland, the Continent, South America, the Pacific, the Orient, Hawaii and the Caribbean plus the major tourist areas of the United States as well as a splendid "Around the World" program. When you travel with American Express you can be sure that you are getting the best possible value for your money on a vacation planned by a company experienced in every facet of travel and able to meet all its commitments.
So, before you leave home, visit your travel agent and ask for an American Express brochure on the destination that you are planning to visit. An American Express tour booked through a travel agent costs no more and you get the services of a man who's probably been down that road before.

Rediscovering Heart of the English

By HILARY BUTLER

"The oldest continuous column in British journalism" is the claim made by Sir Arthur Bryant for the page named "Our Note Book" in the Illustrated London News. Begun in the reign of Edward VII by G. K. Chesterton, the column was continued after the latter's death in 1936 by the author of this book.

Under the title of "The Lion and the Unicorn" Arthur Bryant has anthologized his choicest contributions to "Our Note Book" with a very definite purpose in view. He wants to bring Britain back to her senses.

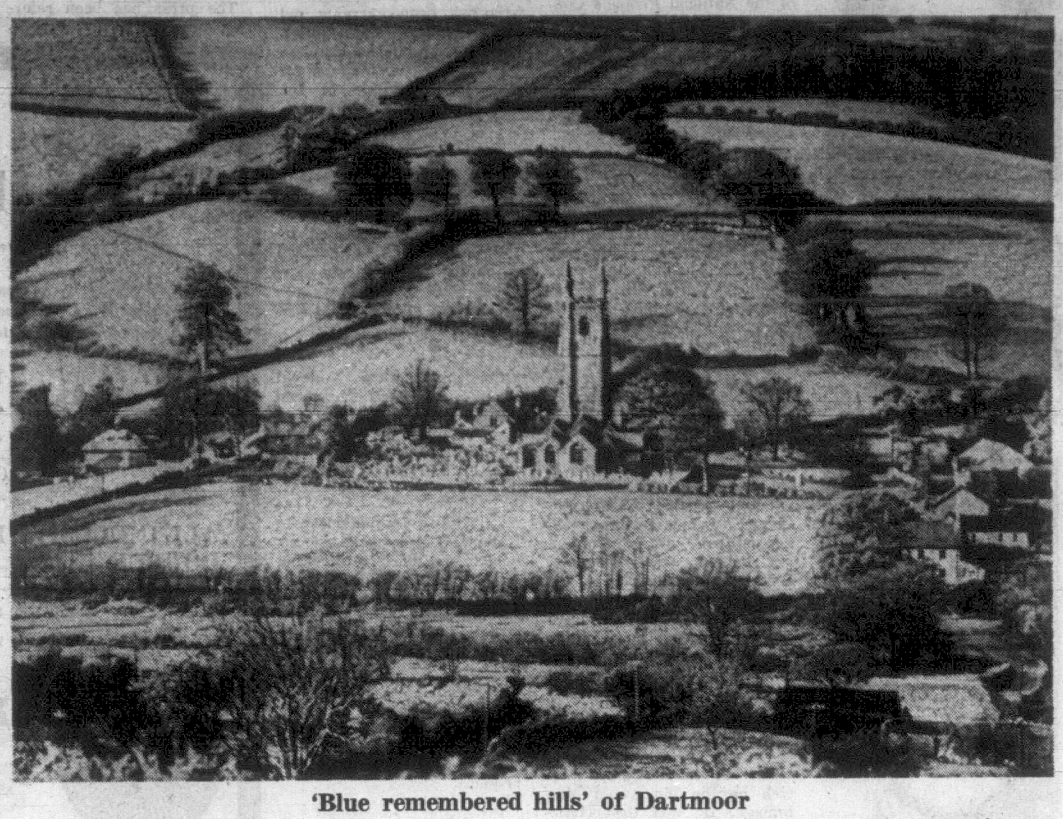

The heraldic animals of the British royal coat-of-arms represent two elements in the

THE LION AND THE UNICORN, by Arthur Bryant. Collins. $8.95.

British make-up. The lion is the strong-hearted adventurousness that transformed an island race into the greatest and most liberal empire known to history; the unicorn represents that eccentricity or mere silliness which is never far from the surface of British life and which sometimes quite obscures the lion.

Both these animals are rather lovable creatures; but while the lion is seldom perverse, the unicorn often is. Bryant's contention is that during the four decades covered by this collection of his contemporary comments the unicorn has had more than his fair share of the plum-cake. The magnificent exception was the Second World War when the British lion saved European civilization during the days he withstood alone the onrush of Nazi barbarism.

Since then Britain has been mainly silly. She has allowed the finest international alliance of all time—the British Commonwealth of Nations—to collapse (at least temporarily) into political impotence. She has allowed the grace and style of English life to be eroded by foreign manners, or the lack of them.

'Blue remembered hills' of Dartmoor

Meanwhile the colored counties of England's green and pleasant lands have become, through commercial greed on the one hand and stupid indifference on the other, desecrated by pollutants much less eradicable than the brass bedsteads of Flanders and Swann renown.

Most of us are content to explain the decline and desecration of Britain and of the English countryside on economic grounds. What chance has a nation of fifty millions on a small archipelago in a world of vast power-blocs like the U.S., the U.S.S.R. and the ECM?

Bryant's position, which is more of a hunch than an argument (and perhaps none the worse for that), is that the British Commonwealth could have been a comparable power. However, the old lion is still there in the British heart, as the events of 1940 proved. It only requires another Churchill to bring that lion roaring back on behalf of the liberties of man against the blandishments of mammon.

The inherent strength of the British is couched in the continuous existence, over many centuries, of institutions that have taught the world what democracy is. Those institutions, from the parish pump to parliament, are animated and protected by a whole mystique of tradition.

To preserve those traditions is to preserve the values they enshrine. To erode those traditions will endanger the institutions and the liberties they embody.

Also, to erode the countryside is not only an aesthetic offence, but is bound to mar the sensitivity and local patriotisms that have made the British what they were, and what, under the surface, they still are.

Arthur Bryant is one of England's greatest historians. That he writes for the public rather than for scholars does not detract from his quality which ranks him, as a stylist, with Gibbon and Macaulay and, as a scholar, with Trevelyan.

He really knows, from original research and from personal contact with the great and little people of his day, the things he here writes about with such sublime lucidity.

But "The Lion and the Unicorn" is not a book to sit down, as this reviewer did, and read from beginning to end. For an Anglophil and an Anglican the impact is too moving, altogether. Who that knew them intimately in their pre-war loveliness, can read about his "blue remembered hills" without an agony of nostalgia?

And what Anglican could read the last section of the book, "The Faith Within Us," with its wonderful words about the creed of creative love, without mourning again the too early demise of Archbishop William Temple and his solid, common sense theology and his deep English mysticism.

It has been said that "anthologies are sickly things." So, if you are, like Elizabeth I, "mere English," read this book in fairly small doses. You will rediscover the heart of the English—lion-hearted, a little silly, but still fighting for the crown.

If you are not English at all (poor thing!) peep into these pages as if they were some other family's private correspondence. You will find out what a very intelligent, informed and articulate Englishman thinks about his own very peculiar people. It may help you to understand them a little better, if not love them more.

KAWABATA

Haunting Imagery By Japanese Master

By DAVID DUNSMUIR

Kawabata's dreamscapes should be approached with caution.

Snow Country, his first novel to have been translated from the Japanese, is still the best introduction to his haunting and elusive imagery. Western readers can apply reassuringly familiar concepts of plot and characterization to this story of doomed love, enhanced in rich counterpoint by haunting descriptions of its setting.

Following Kawabata's selection as Nobel Prize-winner in literature for 1968, two new translations have been added to the small sampling available from 45 productive years.

The Sound of the Mountain does not offer the instant rewards of the two shorter novels that appeared in the 1950s. The reader must act as co-creator, generating a spark that leaps from individual concerns to the uncaring round of nature. Like the haiku, a tantalizing Japanese verse form that compresses experience at both levels into 17 syllables, the work is deceptively simple on the surface; its artistry lies in its overtones.

Simply — and deceptively—the novel can be described as a study of domestic anguish.

At its centre is the father of a Tokyo family, an old man

THE SOUND OF THE MOUNTAIN, by Yasunari Kawabata. Random House. $8.50.

THE HOUSE OF THE SLEEPING BEAUTIES and other stories, by Yasunari Kawabata. Ballantine. Paperback. $1.

plagued by dreams, regrets, and forebodings of death. Emotionally, he is already dead in the eyes of his wife and children, though there is still a flicker in his ambiguous relationship with his daughter-in-law, "a window looking out of a gloomy house."

His attempts at kindness lead to self-doubt, to distrust of his own motives and their outcome. The cherry blossoms flourish under his care, but his life is a wasteland. Is there any truth in his dreadful judgment that he "contributed to no one's happiness"? The answer cannot be found in pages of laconic dialogue. It lies in what is left unsaid, or dimly perceived in fantasies and retreats into the past.

The title story in The House of the Sleeping Beauties spins a web of fantasy that is almost stifling.

Age and lost sexual power drive the main character headlong into nightmare. Time after time, he seeks comfort in a bedroom of a very special inn, beside a succession of drugged girls provided by the management. They cannot be awakened to mock his lust, but their presence is a kind of death.

Reliving former conquests, he becomes obsessed by the need to make his strange partners aware of his existence—if only to prove that he does exist. They remain dead to him, as unattainable sexually as his earlier partners were in every other way.

The prose is lean and infinitely suggestive. It hints at a Buddhist pilgrim's progress where the self yearns to be united with the not-self. Its lyrical descriptions of the sleeping girls, viewed with an old dispassion, could be recruiting material for the Women's Liberation Front. Here indeed are women being treated as objects, but in that fact lies the man's tragedy rather than his triumph.

Books

Historical Novels Have a Wide Range

By ANTHONY JENKINS

Historical novels have the benefit of being not quite fiction (and so, not simply entertainment) and not quite fact (and therefore, not simply instructive). In addition, as these three books show, they can cover quite a range of approaches to factual material. But, perhaps more than in any other type of novel, a lot can go wrong in the writing since they are notoriously treacherous things to manage.

Robin Maugham's new book takes its plot from the general outline of the famous Tichborne Case. A great many writers have gone over the ground before, sometimes updating the story of the heir to a large estate who suddenly comes back "from the dead" to claim it and fobs off any awkward questions about his identity by saying he is suffering from a loss of memory due to some accident. It's a story that has been done to near-death on the stage, on radio and in the movies, so it comes as a surprise that Lord Maugham is able to re-cast the tale in a new and ingenious way.

THE LINK, by Robin Maugham. Collins. $6.50.

THE SEIGE, by Maria Lodi. Collins. $7.75.

THE REBEL PRINCESS, by Doris Leslie. Collins. $6.75.

Whereas other versions have hinged upon whether or not the claimant is the genuine article, Maugham is concerned with why the heir (whom he calls James Steede) should have disappeared in the first place, and why he should then have chosen to return. The suspense then is of a totally different kind, and although the story is set in the mid-nineteenth century it is really a modern psychological study of the characters involved.

Not that the historical background is unimportant; these characters are what they are because of the times they live in. We get a telling glimpse of a Victorian public school and its effect on Steede's psyche, while the ethics that governed the lives of the ruling classes of the time play a crucial part in the way events turn out. There is also a lively sketch of the way Australia must have been in the last century.

But the real meat of the book lurks under the surface of the story, as the reasons for the behavior of the heir and the claimant are made clear, and as the reactions of James Steede's mother and his former fiancee are seen to be dictated by their own particular needs.

The total achievement of the book is an enormous clarity. Maugham's disarmingly simple style drives one into the minds of his characters, which he then illuminates with great sympathy. Even though one knows all along what is going to happen, one is lured on to find out why it all happened.

Maria Lodi's The Seige, now translated from the French by Anne Carter, is the third in a series of novels about Charlotte Morel, a fictional character who "lived" in France in the second half of the nineteenth century. The seige of the title is primarily the Prussian assault on Paris in 1870, but it is also paralleled by love's attack on the heroine herself.

Not having read the previous two novels, I found things rather bewildering at first. But once the details fell into place, the book began to have a distinctive flavor about it; its romanticism conjures up the passion of Chopin and the comic mockery of Offenbach.

The story could really begin or end at any point, and it is not surprising that there are to be more books about Charlotte. We follow her life and loves in a leisurely and expansive way. All the action seems bound up with the bourgeois world of money, social prestige and esteem. Although the heroine is ruled by these values, her passions make her toss propriety and caution to the winds. Hers is the world Balzac described.

In fact, there are certain character-types who seem to belong to a particular age, and one can see why Miss Lodi has chosen the nineteenth century with its horse-carriages and exotic Polish exiles for her semi-respectable heroine. This minutely drawn diary of the heart would not have the space to develop in the modern world of telephones and jet travel.

Doris Leslie's The Rebel Princess is a more usual approach to history. She has taken the facts about Sophia Dorothea, the wife of the Duke of Hanover, later to become George I of England, and has fleshed the story out with dialogue and scenery. There is plenty to write about here, since George was a drunken sot and his wife was a giddy ninny who fell head over heels for the charms of the Swedish chevalier, Philip Konigsmark. But there is not much more to say about the book, except that it is, in my opinion, excruciatingly bad.

The story is true, but the characters are not: they remain stuck in cardboard romantic attitudes. There is singularly little insight into the way these people must have thought, and what insight there is is fuzzed by cloying style which seems to have come out of a do-it-yourself kit for romance writers.

The dialogue in each love-scene seems to work in exactly the same way each time, and the narrative is loaded with such unfortunate phrases as "eldritch laughter," "unholy rites" and "frequent imbibition." It's not the princess but the reader who "rebels" against such fustian stuff.

Journey of Exploration Into Real Inner Being

By PETER MURRAY

There can be few writers around these days who could bare their inner selves to the extent that Aubrey Menen does in this engrossing little autobiographical book without either boring or embarrassing their readers.

But Menen pulls it off with wit and dignity. This urbanity has always been evident in his writings from the delightful novel of some years back, The Prevalance of Witches, to a succession of works since including other novels and essays, New Yorker articles, and the controversial text for Roloff Beny's recent picture book on India.

THE SPACE WITHIN THE HEART, by Aubrey Menen. McGraw-Hill. $6.95.

Few would have suspected the inner doubts these light and sophisticated writings shielded. He lets them all hang out here — the conflicts created by his mixed English and Indian parentage, a difficult relationship with an over-attentive mother, his homosexuality.

Finally, at advanced middle age, Menen decided to confront himself head-on, to find his real self, "the space within the heart." It takes a certain kind of courage to reach such a decision — most of us avoid it — and carry it out as resolutely as Menen.

He isolated himself as far as possible from the world in a tucked-away room in Rome and began the process of reviewing his life. The Hindu works, the Upanishads, served as his guide on this inner journey.

Naturally, he took notes along the way and this book is the result. As they say about travelling, getting there is half the fun and here is no exception. We have to take Menen's word for it that he reached his final destination, but it is at least enjoyable tagging along with him up to the last portal.

MENEN

Along the way there are fascinating glimpses of the young Krishna Menon, later to become a terrible-tempered Indian diplomat, novelist Virginia Woolf, and other members of the Bloomsbury set which Menen observed from the fringes.

There are also a few typically acid Menen comments on the contributions of St. Augustine, Christianity and other foundations of our "advanced" civilization.

Menen obviously meant this deeply personal book to help others in the common search for a sense of meaning or tranquillity in a mad world. Because of his ancestry he chose the Eastern route, which despite its fashionability in some circles today, is not always accessible to those steeped in Western culture and material values.

That probably explains why it's more common these days to find someone taking the inner drug route, or the paths charted by psychiatrist R.D. Laing and others.

But the goal is still the same, and it would appear that Menen's way is the more pleasant to travel.

Gutsy Sergeant Defied Captors... Again and Again

By GORDON FORBES

Infractions of the rules, said the grotesque commandant, will be met by a spell in the castle dungeon.

"It is very deep and very damp and you wouldn't like it there. So meine Herren! I advise you to co-operate.

"One more thing," said the king of the castle, "the guards have orders to fire without warning if they see anyone attempting to escape."

P.O.W., by Douglas Collins. Pocket Books. $1.25.

In the face of such threats Doug Collins escaped Nazi prisoner-of-war camps an astonishing 10 times — and lived to tell the gut-tearing tale in a book P.O.W., now out in paperback after its original publication two years ago.

What drives a man — even a desperate man — to risk a hot chunk of lead in the back so many times?

"For myself the motivation was hatred and a desire to get back in the fight, overdramatic and out of date though it may now sound," says Collins, the former Vancouver television newsman now in Ottawa.

The author was a sergeant — the backbone of the sharp end troops in any nation's army — when taken prisoner at Dunkirk during the British Army's retreat.

In the early days of captivity there was little talk of escape. The barrack-room bull sessions centred around how they all might have sailed from Dunkirk with the rest of the shattered army if . . .

And, of course, the endless talk of food . . . "after the war everyone was going to be a cook . . . recipe maniacs abounded."

But as the months of stultifying captivity wore on, escape talk mounted.

Relates Collins: "It became a salve, something with which to cream our wounds of dejection, and we became conspirators, complete with meaningful glances and gravid silence whenever the subject was mentioned by anyone else."

None of the inanities of Hogan's Heroes here. Collins tells his story in a straightforward, no nonsense style from the first escape (on his 20th birthday) when he hid in the bowels of the camp latrine until the coast was clear.

In four years he and various hell-bent-for-escape buddies eased themselves down prison walls on makeshift ropes (sometimes ending in crash landings), dug tunnels and hid the dirt between walls and in attics, crawled on their shrunken bellies past sleepy guards, cut through barbed wire (and once had to sneak back in) and even took refuge with a colony of pop-eyed dwarfs in the Carpathian Mountains.

COLLINS

He foot-slogged through Germany, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Romania on his various escape routes and came agonizingly close to freedom many times, only to be returned to the inevitable solitary confinement.

He heard Churchill on a clandestine radio and wept, blundered into jumping a train heading for Auschwitz, had a violent argument with two Aussies over the correct length of time to boil an egg, and spent the lonely hours teaching himself German, a useful tool while loose and trying to melt into the countryside.

Every escape is a story in itself and a tribute to the scrappiness of Collins and his cronies who defied the odds.

Collins finally made his way to Romania where he was repatriated after that nation defected to the Allies as the Russians approached.

But his hatred for the Germans endured and it all seemed justified when in 1945 with the Intelligence Corps he held in his hands two captured documents.

One, "Operation Sea-Lion," was the German plan for the invasion of Britain; the other a companion piece, "The Military Administration of England."

"And there it all was, clear as a gallows on a bright day: children over 10 years of age to be liable to the death penalty; men between 17 and 45 to be transported to Eastern Europe."

Collins—whose pugnacity is written all over his face—says he's mellowed "somewhat" since the days he considered it necessary to bawl rude words at passing German troop trains.

If the unwinding took a little longer than for most blokes, it's understandable.

Bob Hope: The Comedian as Politician

By LEROY E. AARONS

NORTH HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — Like many of his neighbors in this quiet bedroom community above Los Angeles, Leslie Towns Hope thinks we should have really zapped Hanoi when we had the chance. He thinks campus violence is largely a communist plot. And he's crazy about Spiro Agnew.

There's nothing particularly unusual about this, especially in Southern California, where in some circles Curtis Lemay is considered a liberal. But Leslie Towns is also known as Bob Hope, the fellow who for more than 30 years has been the country's best known and probably best loved entertainer. When Hope speaks, 50 million people listen.

And of late, Hope has been publicly speaking his mind about his views on the war in Vietnam, on domestic woes, and even politics. More and more often he departs from the role of the nonpartisan political wisecracker and satirist and assumes the role of spokesman.

Thus in recent months, in personal appearances on campuses, state fairs and at news conferences, he has openly declared his support for President Nixon's Southeast Asia policies.

Nation Undermined

He has for the first time in his career made personal appearances and tapings for political friends — including Sen. George Murphy, Lenore Romney, Ohio Gov. James Rhodes and the Los Angeles county sheriff, and he intends to do more. And, everyone remembers his leading role in putting together the massive Honor America Day in Washington, July 4.

Hope has taken up the cudgel because he has the feeling the United States is being undermined. Undermined by the press, by malcontents and left-wingers and nuts. And he firmly believes he's got to do somthing about it.

"I just hated to get involved in politics," he said, relaxed in golf shirt and trousers at his comfortably unostentatious estate recently. "It used to be considered corny to be too patriotic . . . like you are almost commercializing on patriotism. There was that danger. I stayed away from it until this past year, when I figured that it had to be pretty important.

"I got a very negative feeling that the country was getting very little support from the news media. And I felt that they were being unfair.

Public Adulation

"What bothers me was I go to do a show for our kids overseas. I've been doing it since '41. The majority of the kids know what they are fighting for over there. They know that they are trying to save this country. Maybe save all Southeast Asia from an aggressor.

"There were so many problems in the country because I played all the colleges and I would talk to all kinds of people. About the way I felt about the Vietnam war, the sacrifice . . . I have been emotionally involved with the troops. Been in hospitals, in burn wards. So you become affected by this. You look at it from a little different angle."

It is not the first time an entertainment figure has gotten into politics and other public issues. But probably no other individual in the business enjoys the massive public adulation Hope receives from all classes, races, ages and political persuasions.

This immense potential influence has raised liberal hackles and exposed Hope to criticism from people who think he should keep his famous nose out of public affairs. (Hope himself is annoyed by a recent cartoon which speculated that if the president really ended the war in Vietnam Bob Hope would have no place to go.)

50 million listen

The big question, unanswered and likely to remain so, is how much of an impact Hope is having. There are some guesses, however.

"You have to start from the premise that Hope is alone in the history of the entertainment business," said Thomas W. Sarnoff, NBC's west coast chief, who handles Hope's long business association with the network. "If anybody has risen to an institution, it's Hope."

Added Nathaniel Lande, Hope's son-in-law: "I think Bob is a very powerful man. Anyone who has this sort of exposure at 50 million at a crack, who listen to him and adore him, any man who has this sustaining power is a phenomenon."

There is probably no other way to describe Hope than as a "phenomenon." He is in perpetual motion, a man driven to action. Besides his vast show business interests, his friendships with the leading figures of public life, he is a phenominal businessman.

Over the years, he has acquired 15,000 acres of real estate, much of it considered worthless at the time he bought it.

Now, he is probably the richest man in show business and one of the wealthiest in the country, with a gross worth of anywhere from 50 million (his own estimate) up to the hundreds of millions.

With that kind of success story, America looks pretty good to the 67-year-old son of a British stonemason who emigrated with his parents to the United States in 1907. A visitor to his home on Moorpark St. is given a tour of several showcases full of mementoes of a long career: golf trophies, Emmy statues, a sheet of Hitler's personal stationary, given him by the 82nd airborne; a ring from Dachau, inscribed "H. Himmler. 21.6.43"; rifles, machine guns, keys to several dozen cities, including his hometown Cleveland.

Museum Planned

"I've got four or five vaults full," he said. "Every stop, they give you something, you know. We're actually planning to build a museum, proceeds to the USO."

Elsewhere there are dozens of photos of Hope with the famous. Eleanor Roosevelt, several presidents, Neil Armstrong, an old shot with Francis Langford, a picture of Gen. George Patton urinating in the Rhine.

Hope displayed all of it with the unselfconscious pride of the individual who has been everywhere, and known everyone. He has become slightly paunchy, but is remarkably fit for his age (golf every day, no smoking, little drinking), except for a persistently troublesome hemorrhage in his left eye.

Settled in an easy chair overlooking the swimming pool and a one-hole minigolf course, Hope talked about himself, his view of America. He was serious, affable, and earnest, but never confiding or deep. Even his closest friends have difficulty penetrating that surface. ("Bob hasn't had the time to develop a close relationship with any other human being in the world, including his wife," one of them said. "He comes as close to being an island entire unto himself as any man I know.")

"Campus violence is a ridiculous thing," Hope was saying. "When you take our place of learning and deny an education to the kids. Because I travel around and see so many of the campuses where there is no violence. And why should a majority be denied an education for a few?

"I played (the University of) Maryland on May 8, I think it was the same days as the Moratorium. There was a hell of a lot of violence.

"But I walked in and did a show that night. I said I thought the Cambodian thing was right and I got a boo from one kid. That's the way it goes. Let them boo.

"I don't think those kids know what they are doing — half of them. I think they're in it for the kick. I'm sure of it."

Does he feel the public outcry about the war and other issues is justified?

"Oh, a lot of them are. I'm only convinced where the outside forces get in and try to upset. . . ."

Did he think there is some kind of Communist conspiracy going on?

"I think so. There's a help. You know, right after Maryland I was supposed to be in Nashville and they found a bomb right in the college. Now who would put a bomb in . . . one of our kids?"

Hope's view of America is the view from the middle — from places like Montana and Indiana; he insists, as the news of internal turmoil grows more and more frightening, that out there somewhere the country is whole and thriving. The bearers of bad tidings anger him.

Hope now calls himself a "dove chicken" or a "chicken-owl." A year ago he favored doing anything, including saturation bombings and blockading Haiphong ("we can't stand around like a big impotent giant"), but now he supports the president's withdrawal policy. His attitudes, he admits, were shaped by his long exposure to the military, his overseas tours of GI bases and his friendships with generals from Eisenhower, to Bradley, to Westmoreland.

High-Up Buddies

"Bob's not an intellectual," said a close friend. "He picks all this stuff up with his eyes and ears. He talks on the highest levels to Laird, Nixon; he listens to them and his high-up buddies in the military establishment. With that kind of an intake, I'd end up the same way."

Hope sometimes seemed so out of touch that one wondered if it were a put-on. He likened the youth rebellion today to the traditional uppityness of adolescents.

"It's happened in all generations. When we yelled for Rudy Vallee or Russ Columbo . . . our folks were still going for some other guy. They say you don't know what you are talking about." His idea of today's youth symbols was Tom Jones and Rod McKuen.

His most earnest pleas was for the press to feature fewer "provocative" stories and more "about good things that are happening," adding with a totally straight face, "a taffy-pull or something."

'Leather' Fun But It's Corny

A Film Review

By PETER McNELLY

Rebecca keeps a black Harley-Davidson in the garage and a black leather riding outfit in the closet.

Two or three times a month she wakes before daybreak, drops her buff body into the outfit, zips up, hitches black boots to her feet and jerks the bike to life.

Like a crash-helmeted valkyrie she vaults down the highway from Alsace to Germany in ecstasy. Birds rise frightened out of the mist before her. Bridges and sleeping cities vanish in the rush of her wheels.

She makes Heidelberg by 8 a.m. Daniel, her lover, is finishing breakfast. He takes her. Her husband will be on his way to teach school.

These opening scenes from Naked Under Leather, now playing at the Coronet, are alternately beautiful, trite, suggestive with cheap imagery, thrilling, lyrical and unbelievably corny.

This potboiler is probably best described as a pop-art comedy about adultery. Take it too seriously and you'll hate yourself the next day. But take it anyway if you want something different and are willing to pay the price of the great gobs of bad taste which punctuate its erratic visual and emotional charm.

Naked Under Leather is the kind of movie you go to see just to find out what the title is all about. It's accurately based on a French novel called The Motorcycle written by Andre Pieyre de Mandiargues.

Mandiargues is said to be the person who wrote the notorious "underground" novel The Story of O.

Naked Under Leather is far more interesting than The Motorcycle. Like the book, its slight pot unravels elliptically. The film is a cycle of narrated episodes.

Jack Cardiff's direction and photography is quick, clean and frequently imaginative. Some of the scenes are surreal: a red-suited gas station attendant emerging from a bleak glass and steel station; motorcycles bounding through a window by the sea.

Sometimes the imagery is psychedelic like Richard Avedon's Beatle photographs in Look magazine. Sometimes Cardiff deliberately superimposes Rebecca over a rushing landscape so she looks like she's riding even though her hair is motionless.

The visual tricks don't add up to anything coherent, but many of them are fun to watch. The plot doesn't add up either, but sometimes it threatens to become poignant.

Marianne Faithful plays Rebecca. She doesn't act really. But bigger draws like Katherine Ross (Butch Cassidy, Willie Boy) act far worse. Miss Faithful plays Rebecca with obvious pleasure. Her eyes, hands and mouth weave a silky longing over her childishly rebellious temperament.

Alain Delon—he can act—plays Daniel, a bitter philosophy professor. The trouble is, all he has to do is be alternately surly and intelligent.

Many of the bike-riding scenes deliver a real wind-and-speed sensation that is much better than the self-conscious photography in Easy Rider.

If you see this movie, try not to pay too much attention to the script. It's deadly. Rebecca's monologue is so bad it's funny.

And never forget that the visual lyricism is deliberately disarming. For Rebecca is hardly a person at all, but a fool who can't quit a loveless affair.

Cardiff has painted her a tragic victim of passion in order to have a few laughs at audiences who miss the joke. And it's a poor joke at that.

GUEST ARTISTS in the first concert of the fall season sponsored by the Musical Arts Society is the piano-violin duo of Mary and Thomas Mancini, of Palm Springs, Calif., who also appeared here a year ago. They will give a sonata recital on Sunday, September 20 at 2:30 p.m. in McPherson Playhouse.

'Bird Lives' for New Jazz Generation

CHARLIE PARKER

By HOLLIE I. WEST

People don't speak of Charlie Parker much now. His name is rarely seen in print. It is almost an event of great magnitude when his music is heard on the radio and it is an unusual privilege to find his work in record shops.

Many young people never have heard of Parker and many of his contemporaries have forgotten him. It is astonishing how quickly the memory of a great artist can be neglected in the fury of commercialism.

Parker, whose music was the model for a generation of jazzmen and whose personal habits were copied by a legion of hipsters, has been slighted by business interests that have focused entirely on the currently popular.

If Parker had lived, he would have been 50 on August 29. There were no formal commemorations planned. Memorial concerts are held in New York and Chicago each year around the anniversary of his death.

When Parker died in 1955, many of his followers scribbled the epigram "Bird Lives" on subway and building walls all over New York (Parker's nickname "Yardbird" was often shortened to Bird). This same aphorism can be seen occasionally in odd places and it is not wishful thinking in one sense. Indeed, Bird lives on in the work of every modern jazzman and many other jazzmen from previous eras.

He was the dominant figure in jazz from 1945 to his death, and even afterward the strength of his influence was not lessened until the advent of Ornette Coleman in 1960. Parker was a founder of the modern jazz movement, sometimes called bebop in its early stages.

Although he was an alto saxophonist, the impact of his music touched all instrumentalists. Louis Armstrong is the only other jazz soloist who can be mentioned in the same category as Parker.

Pianist Lennie Tristano once said: "If Charlie Parker wanted to invoke plagiarism laws, he could sue almost everybody who's made a record in the last 10 years."

In the beginning, Parker drew on the rich musical tradition of Kansas City, Mo., where he grew up. He began his study of music in the city's public schools and began playing professionally at age 15.

Parker played in several Kansas City-based bands, also hoboed around the country. In 1940, he joined the Jay McShann orchestra and made his first recordings. In the early 1940s, he took part in jam sessions at Minton's Playhouse in Harlem with Dizzy Gillespie, Thelonious Monk, Kenny Clarke and Charlie Christian. These sessions were a seminal source for the development of modern jazz.

In 1943, he joined the Earl Hines orchestra of which trumpeter Gillespie was a member. The two, largely associated with the creation of modern jazz in the public eye, were thus able to assimilate each other's ideas.

By 1945, Parker and Gillespie had their own group and the radical changes they advocated were having widespread effect. Many older musicians resisted. Billy Eckstine tells the story of how the great tenor saxophonist, Ben Webster, snatched a tenor out of Parker's hands one night on a band stand and exclaimed, "that horn ain't s'posed to sound that fast."

Not only did Parker continue to play fast, but he went on to turn jazz around rhythmically, harmonically and melodically. He made the music more complex and at the same time he made it more emotionally direct than it had been in the 1930s.

Parker was a virtuoso who used his technique expediently and not to dazzle. He had seemingly endless invention. It is startling to see how vastly different he could improvise within minutes on the same composition.

Parker was also a man with voracious appetites driven by the wildest demons. His drug addiction started when he was 16. In addition, he later became an alcoholic. Parker was known to consume huge quantities of food and his sexual life was reported to be beyond believable frequency.

He had several nervous breakdowns, attempted suicide after his two-year-old daughter died from pneumonia, was considered a supreme con artist, constantly appeared late or not at all for engagements and reportedly treated most people, including his fellow musicians, worse than animals.

Conversely, there are many stories about his generosity and graciousness that some remember him carrying to absurdity. He was a family man to others. Some musicians recall his fatherly attitude and desire to help them.

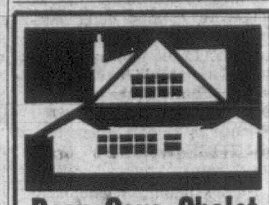

This contradictory figure was emulated by the young who wanted to do the hippest things. If Bird shot horse (heroin), then it was all right. Parker was a culture hero who personified the apolitical posture and torrential pleasure seeking of the post-war beat generation.

When he first visited the U.S. in the early 1950s, French jazz pianist Henri Renaud was surprised that no statue of Parker stood on Fifth Avenue in New York. He did not know we erect most of our statues to military men. Maybe we would do the memory of Charlie Parker some justice if we accorded more respect to those who carry on his work.

The most accessible Parker records are those on verve, which includes superb and disappointing work after 1948. The best discs he ever cut over a consistent period were made for Savoy and Dial in 1947 and 1948. The Savoy discs, invaluable because they contain all the alternate recording takes Parker made of many compositions, can be obtained from Savoy records in Newark, N.J.

The Dial records, no longer available in the U.S. are being re-issued in England on the Spotlite label by discographer Tony Williams. He is releasing all available takes and even some rare air-shots by Parker.

Some Rich Memories Provided By Saturday Opera Broadcasts

By PAUL HUME

The Saturday afternoon performances of the Metropolitan Opera have been broadcast for 38 years. Since Christmas Day, 1931, when a complete "Hansel and Gretel" was heard from the stage of the venerable old house that no longer exists, an unending stream of operas and their singers has been a vital part of America's musical life.

The sponsorship of these broadcasts, by the Texaco Company, for the greater part of those nearly four decades is one of the outstanding public service contributions to the arts by any corporation.

No one can hazard the flimsiest of guesses at the measureless meaning these operatic afternoons have given to the lives of millions of listeners. That they have aired poor, botched performances alongside some of the grand moments in musical history means only that they have been a complete week-to-week history of a great repertoire music theatre.

While the earlier performances have faded from the memory of many people, nothing could be more tantalizing than to be told that there do exist, in various hideouts and private collections, chiefly in New York City, complete recordings of almost every single one of these broadcasts.

Now don't get your hopes all fired up. All kinds of barriers exist that seem to prevent any widescale publication of these records. And yet — it is hard to think that if these discs are in existence they might not some day become available to those who would be willing to pay the costs of having them put into playable shape.

I have heard two such sets, one of Rosa Ponselle's "Traviata," and the other her famous "Carmen." Since these were made in the middle 1930's, I presume that the rest would be of similar quality. And believe me, this is easily sufficient to give a full and enjoyable version of the entire performance.

Teased by the memory of some of those afternoons, I asked one of those hypothetical questions that can lead to a furious game of desert island: "If you could have recordings of all the broadcasts from the Met for any one of the nearly four decades of its broadcasts, which ten years would you choose?" and the answer came back like a shaft of lightning: "The first ten!"

Let me call to mind what those years brought to regular Saturday afternoon listeners:

In the initial 31-32 season: Ponselle's "Norma," with Swarthout and Pinza, came right after "Hansel and Gretel." During the following weeks, Ponselle was heard again in "Trovatore." Lily Pons, in her second Metropolitan season, sang Rosina and Lakme. In the "Barber," she had De Luca and Pinza for partners.

The Wagnerian wing, not yet in its great heyday, had the young Melchior, with Gertrude Kappel, Friedrich Schorr, Gota Ljungberg, and Elisabeth Rethberg, whom it shared with the Italian and French departments. The Wagner broadcasts that first year included "Lohengrin," "Walkuere," and "Tannhauser."

The great trio of Martinelli, Pinza, and Tibbett sang in "Simone Boccanegra," and Rethberg, with her tri-lingual virtuosity, was the unforgettable Aida, Marguerite, Selika in "l'Aricaine," and Elizabeth in the "Tannhauser."

From Lucrezia Bori that first huge audience heard Violitta, and Mary in Deems Taylor's "Peter Ibbetson." Grace Moore sang Juliet to Gigli's Romeo, and Manon to his Desgrieux. For unusual glamor there was a "Sadko," by Rimsky-Korsakoff, with George Thill in the title role, while Jeritza created a sensation in "Donna Juanita," by Von Suppe.

The second year on the air was even more gala. The cast for "Don Giovanni" was spectacular, headed by Pinza, Ponselle, Tito Schipa, Maria Muller, Editha Fleischer and Leon Rothier. That would be one of my chief requests if these recordings ever materialize. That was also the year when Lawrence Tibbett made single-handed history as Emperior Jones in the opera by Louis Gruenberg.

In spite of the deepening effects of the depression the seasons of 33-34 brought the Metropolitan still more riches resulting from the demise of the Chicago Civic Opera. Claudia Muzio returned to the house she had sung in two decades earlier, and Lotte Lehmann made her Met debut, singing Elizabeth to Melchior's Tannhauser and Olszewska's Venus.

In the following season, Rosa Ponselle's Violetta was broadcast, revealing one of the few total embodiments of the entire role in the history of the house, as her recording with Tibbett and Jagel proves.

In the midst of the 34-35 season, occurred one of the historic bombshells that come to an opera house only rarely. A little-known soprano made her debut as Sieglinde, singing with Kappel, Olszewska, Emanuel List, Schorr, and Paul Althouse. Her name was Kirsten Glagstad and she reshaped the history of the Metropolitan for the next decade by making the operas of Wagner the most "in-demand" items on Broadway.

Before the season was over, the radio audience had also heard her Isolde as she began the phenomenal series of performances with Melchior that made history in many opera houses.

The first Saturday afternoon in the season of 35-36 went to a "Lohengrin" in which Lehmann showed how to make Elsa utterly believable, something few other sopranos have ever been able to do. With Marjorie Lawrence's powerful Ortrud and the matchless company of Melchior and Schorr, it was an uncommon affair.

John Charles Thomas, Gertrude Wettergren, and Chase Baromeo were other singers who strengthened the New York house after the Insull House in Chicago closed down. Thomas brought his superb Amonasro to "Aida," Figaro to the "Barber," and Germont to enrich Ponselle's "Traviata."

Ponselle's last role at the Met was the Carmen that stirred up such a tumult among her friends and admirers. It was first broadcast on New Year's Day, 1936, when she had Pinza for her Escamillo and Charles Kullmann as Don Jose. A year later she sang it in her final broadcast.

MELCHIOR

Two months later she closed her career at the house where her debut had been with Caruso as she sang, at a Sunday night concert, "When I have sung my songs to you, I'll sing no more."

Conductors had come and gone during the Met's early radio years: Tullio Serafin, having prepared so many of the greatest Italian performances, had given way to the able Ettore Panizza. Late in the decade, Arthur Bodanzky's death suddenly catapulted the very young Erich Leinsdorf into the busy Wagnerian seat. And Louis Hasselmans' strong hand on the French reins was replaced by that of Maurice Abravanel.

In the final year of that first decade of Saturday afternoons, there were still plenty of new names to create more magic over the air: Jussi Bjoerling was heard as Manrico, Alexander Kipnis sang King Marke with Flagstad and Melchior, and Bruno Walter conducted a "Fidelio," in which Maison's Florestan joined Janssen, Kipnis, and Flagstad in a towering realization.

It was, like any ten years out of the past, a time that will never come again. It has been followed by years of glory with Bjoerling and Warren, Tebaldi, Callas, Schwarzkopf, London, and Nilsson, Sutherland and Price, Bergonzi and Del Monaco, Szell, Beecham, Reiner, and Mitropoulos. But these we have on glorious recordings. It is the thought that somewhere there do exist records of practically all that is listed here that tantalizes and will not go away. Perhaps some day, somehow, if you wish hard enough, maybe they just might make their way to public enjoyment. So wish.

Eric Burdon Back on Track

By RITCHIE YORKE

The first big comeback story of the super Seventies must be that of Eric Burdon. The outspoken Burdon scored heavily in the mid-Sixties with a series of pseudo Negro records, including the classic House of the Rising Sun, I'm Crying, Don't Let Me Be Misunderstood, and returned to the scene a couple of years ago with Sky Pilot and Monterey.

Now he's back again—with a sound that is completely different. Burdon's current hit of Spill the Wine, which looks like it may go to number one, is what Eric himself describes as "a bit of Spanish rhythm and some jazz, a lot of Latin influence, a great horn section, and some blues."

Burdon has dropped the Animals — the fine group which launched his career —and has a new band called War . . . which is a strange name, but not so weird when you consider that Eric is a pretty strange cat anyway.

It's a seven-piece group, six of the musicians being Negro. All of the players come from the San Francisco area, where Burdon has been living for the past couple of years.

"I'm still getting the band together," Eric comments, "We'll always be getting it together and learning new things. Once you've got it together, you've got nothing more to do.

"The band said to me: 'Don't get paranoid because you can't play as well as us because we'll teach you.' And I said, 'Why me?' and they replied, 'Because you came to us'."

When Eric and the Animals first toured the U.S., there were reports that Eric did all he could to soak up the soul atmosphere. When he was down south, he'd slip across to the wrong side of the tracks and have his picture taken standing next to dirty old freight trains. He even had some publicity pictures sitting on the railway lines, just like the old blues album covers. It was not surprising, therefore, that he decided to semi-emigrate to the States.

"America is an amalgam of all that is good and bad in the world," he observes, with rather accurate perception. "I see things a lot more now. I can set people as they are. We've got an office in California where everyone communicates with everyone else."

But despite his success with Spill the Wine and the excellent Eric Burdon Declares War album which has just been released, Eric is more concerned with other areas of communication.

"Music isn't my game," he says. "I want to get into movies. When we get the movies together, I want people to share my experiences in life and see what's what.

"But I'm not going to say, 'Do this because this is right and that is wrong.' That is just what the authorities are doing."

Low-Key Prints From Around World

Looking at Art
. . . With Gordon Rice

Alfred Carlsen is a local craftsman who has been making unusual sculpture, and perhaps even more unusual jewelry, for some time now. His work should be better known, and probably will be, with his current show at the Print Gallery.

Actually this is a double show (it runs through October 3) featuring as well a selection of international prints and drawings from the private collection of Denis Bowen.

Bowen, who now lectures at the University of Victoria, was for some time the owner of a major gallery in London, the New Vision Centre. These are signed prints, hand made by the artists or made directly under their supervision. They are considered as original and expression of an artist's ideas as his painting or sculpture.

Only, as Bowen wishes to show here, they are much easier to collect. Prints are lightweight, obviously not bulky, and are much cheaper than other original art work as they generally are made in editions of ten to even a hundred or more.

The collection here presents prints and other graphics made around the globe during the fifties and sixties original work from places as diverse as Kuwait, New Zealand, Switzerland, Yugoslavia, India, and Canada.

Now these pictures do not generally evoke a sense of locale. That is, one could be conned into believing they were all made in Seattle, for instance. This is because the influence of art centres like Paris and New York has been so pervasive, and communication of ideas so instantaneous, that one almost has to be born and remain a hermit to escape such influence.

And if you see the show you may reflect that such internationalism is perhaps not so bad a condition, in that so many possibilities in art have become widespread. Dreamy surrealism, precise "op" techniques, violent expressionist styles, and so on, have naw become "International Waters", so to speak, the depths of which can be plumbed by artists everywhere.

The Indian artist Ravi Kumar has a print here, "Kshetra Yantra", which although fresh and colorful, perhaps is not as strong as the older Indian painting it recalls. But the Pakistani artist, Ahmud Parvez, in choosing a more international style, has produced monoprints of considerable strength and originality.

Both artists are, however, daring and admirable, one in attempting to revitalize a great artistic tradition, the ather is striking out into a new international style, and leaving such impressive traditions behind. (It is worth noting though that such international styles as cubism and expressionism have roots not just in Western art but also African and Asian art).

Vaserely (the best known of the "op" artists) and Serge Poliakoff are perhaps the biggest "names" in the collection. Some of the lesser known stuff is just as good or better, though. The Canadian water-colorist, William Newcombe, is represented by three amazingly spacious and fluid abstract landscapes.

The color etching by the Yugoslavian, Zvest Apollonio, is typical of the many low-keyed but fine works here. Its combination of abstract handwriting, smudges, leaf forms, and squares of color sparingly placed seems like pure accident at first, but all these forms coalesce with a sense of rightness and care which may hide at first the subtlety of thought behind the print.

Likewise the watercolor by the New Zealander James Boswell seems at first just a fast splash when actually it is made of many carefully mixed and graded colors. It is as immediate and intense and fresh as a sunrise.

Of his sculptural pieces Alfred Carlsen's larger items seem to be the more successful. The large cedar urn, and the "Construction in Right Triangles" are not quite like anything you've seen before. They are rough, isolated, and powerful, coming out of a special fascination of the artist's for the unique visual qualites of wood, and the kinds of marks tools can make on it.

His jewelry is here in plenty, and many of these smaller pieces might be considered as sculpture in themselves, rather than just "decorative" items. Carlsen works in stone, bone, cow and deer horn, cocoanut, plastic, copper, brass, and silver and seems fascinated by the qualities of each material.

He describes his style as a combination of sophisticated and primitive qualities.

One might also say that he has tried to retain the natural character of each material, while still intensely examining it for artistic possibilities.

More importantly the things he makes are refreshing, as if in being absorbed in his own ideas he had little time to find out what was "modish" and get involved with following other people's ideas.

The jewelry is small, diverse, and abundant, and unfortunately it just can't be described here piece by piece. But let me strongly recommend that you take time to see it. Things this far from the ordinary, and this pleasant as art, are an experience to see.

Park Planned

ROME (Reuters) — The island of Monte Cristo off Italy's Mediterranean coast, made famous by Alexandre Dumas's novel The Count of Monte Cristo, is to become a national park, the finance ministry announced.

'Writing Songs Is Easy Part'

TORONTO — Gene McLellan is a Canadian folksinger whose career is coincidentally occurring when there is a drive in the entertainment field to bring Canadian culture to the forefront.

McLellan's stage presence is marked and heightened by the eye patch he has worn since an automobile accident several years ago.

He is not a singer telling stories of people he has never known. Gene says that the 31 years he has lived were like a series of planned accidents.

Born in Quebec, he left home at 18 to wander around te country. He drifted down to Rhode Island where he eventually found himself hooked up with a travelling evangelist.

Then he went to Prince Edward Island, and it had a heavy influence on the music recorded on his first record album. "Most of the songs on the LP were the ones I wrote in P.E.I.," he said in an interview. "In fact, they stretch back to the first one I wrote called Pages of Time, done about four years ago."

When he was in Prince Edward Island his life was not easy. "For about four years I worked as an attendant in a mental hospital . . . Of course, I occasionally had to do other things, like pick potatoes. But that was okay too."

Sining has always been, he believes, the place where he belongs. "Writing songs is the only thing that has ever come easily. Getting all the rest of my life together has been a bit more difficult."

Gene played back-up, to various groups, both rock and country and Western. Then he was offered the possibility of appearing on CTV's Sing-Along Jubilee and after that came the record album.

"It really all happened within one year. And since then I've lost all my privacy, man. I've never been a very extroverted person, and this last year the pressure's really been on."

He's been called another Gordon Lightfoot or the Canadian Glen Campbell. It distracts him from his singing which is done in a clear and high tenor that is carried with a natural phrasing.

"I hear a lot of people are divided on what I am," he concluded, "or how good I am."

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

New record minimum temperatures were again established this morning at several widely separated locations across B.C. as cool dry Arctic air blankets the province. Strong winds are continuing in coastal valleys as this dense air rushes seaward and little change in the weather pattern is expected through Sunday.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Weather can sometimes bring on illness, as most of us seem to know, but did you know that excessively high relative humidity, combined with an increase in the atmospheric pressure, can sometimes help to cause some people to suffer from coronary thrombosis?

That means some types of change in the weather can be blamed for precipitating a heart attack.

Your heart muscle depends on your blood for its sustenance. When it doesn't get enough blood, when the arteries supplying blood to the heart are plugged by clots, the heart muscle dies. Higher humidity places a greater stress on the circulatory system that supplies blood to the heart. That's when those who have heart ailments should take it easy and try not to overtax the circulatory system.

Police Court

"Well, for a first time you certainly went all out," Judge William Ostler told Zoa Mae Dickson, 48, of 1791 Rockland, when she appeared in provincial court on a charge of shoplifting.

Court was told she stole $40.15 in merchandise from The Bay Sept. 10, putting most of it into a shopping bag.

"She must have been fairly bristling with articles," Ostler said, imposing a $350 fine.

"I'm glad I was caught the first time," she said.

Gwendolyn Dunstall, 23, of 1250 Alderman, was fined $250 for shoplifting Sept. 10.

"Everybody else who is honest has to pay more because of people like you," Ostler said.

Vivian Edwards, also known as Vivian Passmore, 29, of 837 Bay, was given a suspended sentence and ordered to serve 18 months probation on a charge of possession of stolen goods under $50.

"You don't really deserve that," Ostler said, "your record is bad."

He said she has never had a period of continued stability in her life.

"Nobody wants to hit a person when they are down.

"It's now time for you to decide to be a decent person. I'm going to give you a chance on probation."

He noted she was five months pregnant in passing sentence.

Richard Burns, 25, of 1421 Finlayson, was fined a total of $600 on charges of failing to remain at the scene of an accident and driving without insurance.

He pleaded guilty.

Court was told Burns was in an accident Sept. 11 and fled the scene despite a warning from the other party involved.

He was fined $350 for failing to remain and $250 on the insurance violation.

John Stevens, 20, of no fixed address, was sentenced to three months in jail for theft under $50, even though Ostler said a stiffer penalty was warranted.

He said he was giving Stevens a chance to take a Canada Manpower course to upgrade his education and teach him a trade when he got out of prison in January.

Dwight Gordon Grieve, 26, of HMCS Rainbow, was fined $300 on a charge of impaired driving.

He was arrested July 13 with a blood-alcohol reading of .21 per cent.

Break-Ins Admitted

A 15-year-old boy appeared in juvenile court Friday charged with 15 house break-ins in the city.

Police said the boy admitted to a total 35 to 40 such crimes in Victoria plus about eight more in Oak Bay, Saanich and Duncan.

Police officials said all the break-ins occurred in the past six months, most in the past eight weeks, and entry in all the Victoria cases was through insecure doors and windows.

Legal Clinic Scheduled For Mondays

Starting Monday, Sept. 14, Victoria's free clinic for legal and medical help will move to meetings on Monday nights instead of Tuesdays.

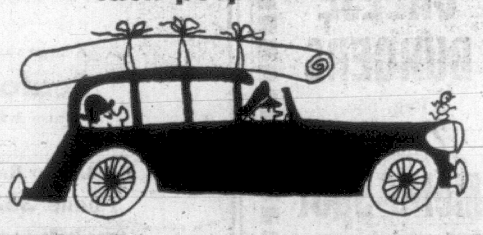

The clinic began in August as a youth project with the assistance of funds from the YM-YWCA. Meetings have been and will continue to be held at the First United Church hall at Quadra and Balmoral at 8 p.m.

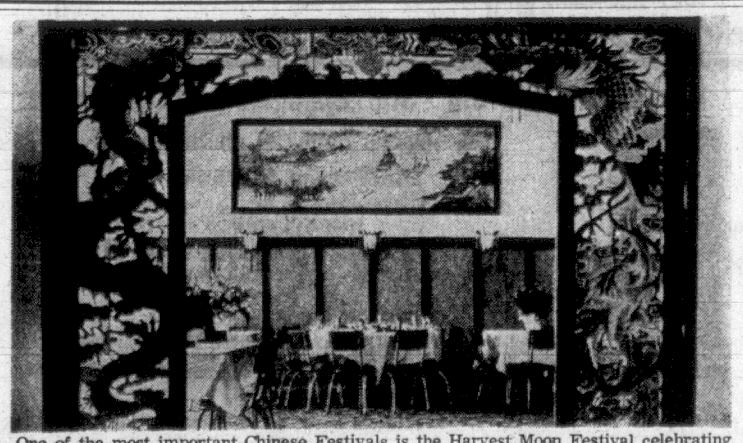

Clinic worker Greg Welsh said he hopes to be able to keep the project operating on a weekly basis throughout the fall and winter. The clinic is open to persons who need legal or medical assistance and are unable to obtain it anywhere else.

The clinic draws support from Victoria doctors and lawyers, Cool-Aid, St. Joseph's Hospital and the Victoria Medical Society.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

As the weather begins to simmer down, your "mobile home" reptile will begin pondering a prolonged siesta. It's a cinch he will want to hibernate if he is an outdoor pet, and probably will even indoors unless he is kept particularly warm in the winter months. Hibernation should be a happy time for the turtle (at least carefree) if he is prepared for it. Unfortunately, many turtles who hibernate never wake up again. Most of the dreamland disasters can be traced to malnutrition.

Unless the turtle has been adequately nourished in the weeks and months prior to his deep sleep, he won't have sufficient stamina to count sheep or to wake up again later on. If your pet reptile isn't in good shape now, don't allow him to hibernate. His best chance for survival is to stay up and eating through the winter. So make plans to keep him inside and warm and active.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Herc, our Dalmatian, is three years old. Over the last year, he has had a lot of trouble with his anal glands. They have often become infected. We keep pretty close track and he's never had any sex life. My husband thinks this may be a factor. Could this be? — L.O.

DEAR L.O.: Yes, it could. Dogs without sexual experience are much more prone to anal gland problems. Unfortunately for Herc, however, it's a little late. Even if his love life improved considerably, you couldn't necessarily expect the same for the anal glands. They've been through too much. Medical therapy or, as is necessary on rare occasions, surgical removal of those glands is the answer now.

DEAR DR. MILLER: What's the best way to cure a year-old dog from running away from home? In the process, he has been incarcerated three different times and we have had to bail him out. He's been struck by cars twice and we have had to bail him out of the hospital on those occasions. He has been completely lost once and we had to post a reward for him to get him back. — K.C.

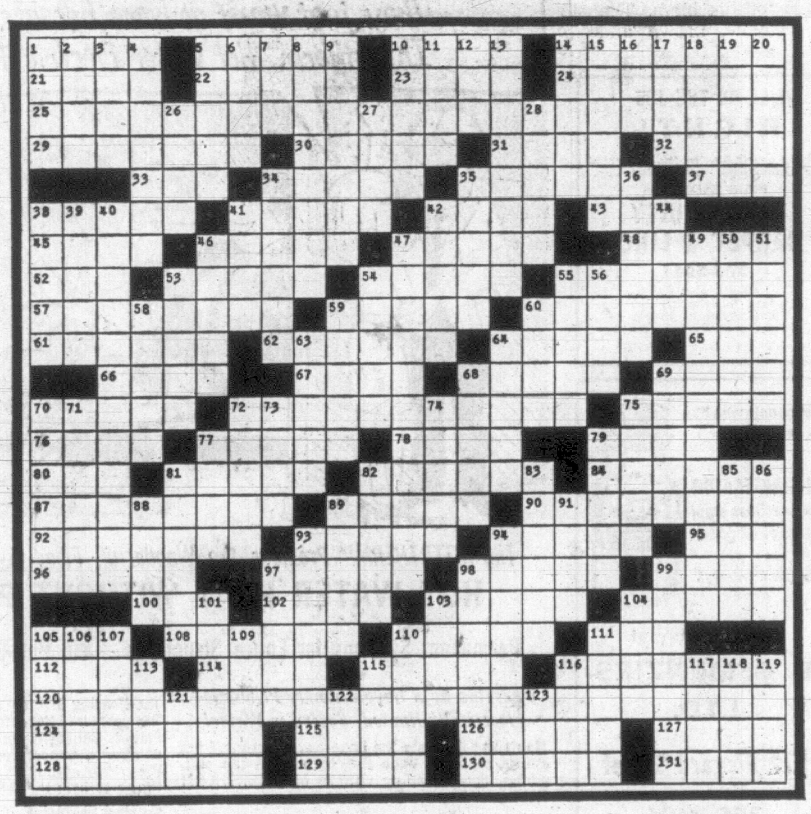

DEAR K.C.: A lot of people would be grateful for a simple answer to this problem. Unfortunately, there isn't one. The least complex answer, though, and the most effective one is to plan at the outset to keep Jake confined from here on to yard or leash. The only exception would be for you to train him to return to call under any and all circumstances, and then to transport him to an area where he can run free safely. (Unfortunately, the availability of such areas is dwindling rapidly.) For the comparatively few dog owners who live in the "sticks," it's feasible to simply train a dog to stay home, provided the training is started early.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is it safe to worm a pregnant bitch? — R.G.

DEAR R.G.: This would depend on her stage of pregnancy, her general condition, the type of worms she is being treated for, and the type of worm medication

Answers to Previous Puzzle

Plant Moving Time Depends Upon Soil Type

By JACK BEASTALL

From the beginning of September, through October and into November is plant moving time in West Coast gardens.

Jack

Most of the work listed in gardening books for early spring is done here in the fall.

The actual number of weeks during which plants can be moved depends entirely on the weather and the kind of soil within the garden.

In sandy soils which are well drained there is no particular rush because the work can go on in any suitable period throughout winter.

Clay soils are different. Rain is slow to penetrate. The surface can become slippery and unworkable in a couple of days.

Digging a wet clay ruins its texture. Pressure of soil against the spade squeezes out the air and forces the fine particles together to form lumps.

Such lumps are useless to put around roots of plants. Feeding roots die when they enter the air spaces betwen lumps, and the whole mass settles into something resembling concrete. Plants don't grow in concrete.

Therefore, the gardener with a soil composed mainly of clay cannot dally. With one eye on the weather and the other on his planting schedule he has to take advantage of every opportunity.

The old fable of the ant and grasshopper is worth recalling. While the ant was busy through fall putting its house in shape for winter and gathering supplies, the grasshopper languished in the warm sun, contemplating and enjoying the beauties of fall.

Winter came; the ant was snug and warm while the grasshopper was "out in the cold."

Fall is such a beautiful period here on the coast we are apt to relax instead of getting on with the chores.

We procrastinate, putting off until next week the gardening jobs that should be done today. The "winter" comes, suddenly and positively.

Already it is mid-September. There is no time to lose.

The jobs to be done vary from garden to garden. While a basic schedule is needed, each gardener has to adopt and adapt to his own conditions.

Beginning on Labor Day weekend, we lift, divide, and replant those herbaceous perennials which flower in early spring.

WEEK'S WORK

Plant out all biennials raised from seed or purchased: Canterbury-bells, Brompton stock, wallflowers and sweet williams.

In a coldframe which can be glass-covered in hard weather, many hardy shrub cuttings can be inserted now into sandy peat. Try: aucuba, choisya, laurustinus, laurel, escallonia, privet, lavender.

Lift gladiolus corms after leaves have yellowed. Cut off tops, dry corms quickly in warm room for three days before storing.

Move, or plant new peonies during the next four weeks. Sunny location in fertile soil, bonemeal and only two inches soil over crowns.

As apples ripen, pick carefully to avoid bruising. Fallers and those with insect damage should be used soon.

Prune peach tree as fruits are picked, by cutting off the twig bearing fruit.

Seed new lawns without delay. If left for even a week or two at this time of year, the soil and the air temperatures will prevent germination and the seed will rot instead of growing.

Differences between trees, shrubs, conifers, broadleaf evergreens and herbaceous perennials were explained in last week's column. It is important to understand which are which so that the different kinds are not disturbed at the wrong time.

From middle to end of September is the time for planting spring flowering narcissus bulbs. These include the daffodils.

Don't delay because a few leftover annuals are in the beds. These plants have served their purpose and owe us nothing. Discard them.

Tips For Home Gardeners

Tulip bulbs follow, preferably at the beginning of October.

Finally, Dutch bulbous iris around mid October. But these times must be adjusted to soil conditions. Better too early than late.

More of the late spring flowering herbaceous perennials can be divided as September progresses, then those which flower in early summer and high summer.

Fall blooming herbaceous perennials will be at their best during September into October and work on them has to wait until their beauty is past. But preparations can be started, such as making new beds, and spaces marked for the late comers.

New shrubs to be added to the garden can go in right away if purchased in containers. The soil is now perfect for working around the roots with the fingers.

Don't forget the bucket or two of water that goes into the hole when half filled with soil. Water drives out air and settles soil closely around the fine feeding roots.

Shrubs already in the garden that need to be moved to another location would be better left until the soil has a little more moisture, but don't leave it too long.

Coniferous trees (Ellwoods, Fletchers, and so forth) move best in early October if soil is moist. The same with broadleaved evergreens. Here again, weather and soil conditions will determine the ideal date. This group has no truly dormant period, therefore require greater consideration when moved.

Roses and trees should be available in late September through October. Some are available now in containers.

An old and true saying is that a one-dollar plant needs a five-dollar hole to succeed. It is wise to prepare holes while soil is dry and easily worked.

The excavated soil can be mixed easily with the necessary compost or peatmoss (according to type of plant) and the heap covered with plastic film to keep it from becoming too wet for handling by October.

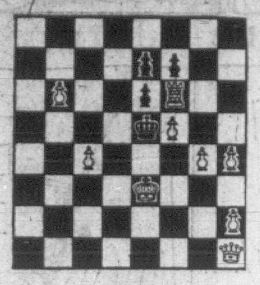

All trees and shrubs should be firmly staked for their first winter, especially in exposed gardens. Make these stakes now and have suitable material ready for tying.

Fall days are wonderful; days to spend in the open. They are the best days of the year for moving plants. Let's make the most of them. Let's enjoy them, and make a garden to enjoy at the same time.

PROBLEM
By Elios Camponova
Switzerland
BLACK: 4

WHITE: 9

White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

Nothing excites the spectators at a tournament more than watching a game in which both players are in extreme time-trouble ("Zeitnot"). The expressions on the faces of the contestants involved are something to behold. Most suffer agony, but some get a real thrill from being in time difficulty. Some have been known to lean over the board to see how many seconds there are left for, say, ten moves . . . thereby obstructing their opponent's view of the board . . . Others will lift the chess clock to see the time. This is NOT permitted under any circumstance. As tournament director, I will be at such a board to see that the right number of moves have been made before adjournment time. I usually check the number of moves written down and count the moves made in time trouble; once I am convinced the right number of moves or over has been made, I leave the scene of battle.

Time trouble can shake the most experienced. Witness one match in which both masters in the same time predicament were hunched, sweating, over the board. Finally, one looked up at me and said in a strangled voice: "Please, George, tell me, is it his move or mine?"

SOMETIMES IT'S EASY
By Grandmaster
Bent Larsen

After my victory in Sousse, in 1967, chess magazines wanted to publish my best game but, sad to say, I did not play any remarkable games there. I played three or four good endgames, but the public wants to see brilliant attacks with sacrifices and combinations. Sorry, friends, not this time. I made use of my opponents' mistakes, but I didn't do anything brilliant or profound. I just wanted to qualify for the Candidates' Tournament, and suddenly I found myself ahead of everybody, and nobody trying very hard to catch me. Erfim Geller and Svetozar Gligoric were in a position where they could have harbored thoughts of winning the tournament, but oh, no, they played it safe, satisfied to place among the first six.

But my best game? Well, there was the 77-mover against Milan Matulovic, a fine ending, but who likes to see such long games? So I tell everybody that my game against Aivar Gipslis was the best. It had the charm of getting me a positive score against the Russians — and started a streak of six wins.

LISMER'S 'ISLES OF SPRUCE' CHOSEN

Stamp to Honor Group of Seven

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

The 50th anniversary of the founding of the renowned Canadian association of painters called the Group of Seven will be observed by a 6-cent multicolor to be issued by Canada Sept. 18. "Isles of Spruce" is represented, and it was painted by one of the Group's members, Arthur Lismer (1885-1969).

The other charter members of the Group of Seven were: Lawren Harris, J. E. H. MacDonald, A. Y. Jackson, F. H. Varley, Franklin Carmichael and Frank Johnston. The latter withdrew in 1922, but Alfred Casson, Edwin H. Holgate and Lemione FitzGerald joined in 1926, 1931 and 1932, respectively.

The Algonquin School, a precursor of the Group of Seven, was comprised of five of the group's original members, and Tom Thomson (1877-1917).

A colorful souvenir brochure (containing a mounted, mint block of four of the Group of Seven stamp, a portrait of Lismer, a short history of the Group, and a description of the stamp) may be obtained from the Canada Post Office, Philatelic Service, Confederation Heights, Ottawa 8. The cost is $1. (Remit by postal money order or bank draft, made payable to the Receiver-General of Canada).

Ashton-Potter Ltd. of Toronto lithographed the Group of Seven adhesive in blue, bronze-green, red, yellow and black. Each stamp measured 3mm by 36mm. A marginal inscription on each of the four corners of the panes of 50 available from the Philatelic Service consists of the names of the painter and the painting.

Four multicolors issued late last month by Dominica portray: 6c, a giant green turtle; 24c, two flying fish; 38c, the anthurium lily; and 60c, a red-necked parrot, and an imperial parrot.

The date of release for Gibraltar's "military uniforms" set was pushed ahead from Aug. 10 to Aug. 28.

Likewise Malawi's "moths" quartet and souvenir sheet have been moved forward from Sept. 2 to Sept. 30.

On Sept. 8, St. Pierre and Miquelon released a pair for Expo '70.

Today, the United States issued a 6-cent multicolor in Charleston, South Carolina. It commemorates the 300th anniversary of the first permanent English settlement in what is now South Carolina, founded in April 1760 near the present-day city of Charleston.

Shown are: the state's flag, two barrels, three tobacco leaves, the granite State House in Columbia, a cotton boll, Carolina jessamine, a ship, a palmetto, a woman and a man in 17th century attire, a Fort Sumter cannon, and the steeple of St. Philip's Church, which is in Charleston.

A one-shilling "art" stamp issued by the Republic of Ireland Sept. 1 depicts the painting "Madonna of Eire" by the Irish artist Mainie Jellett (1896-1943).

On Sept. 7, Israel placed on sale five stamps intended for use on their mail sent during Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur, the High Holidays. Pictured are: 12a, the Stara Synagogue in Cracow, Poland; 15a, the Great Synagogue in Tunis, Tunisia; 35a, the Portuguese Synagogue in Amsterdam; 40a, the Great Synagogue in Moscow; and 60a, the Shearith Israel Synagogue in New York City.

LAST SPIKE in the CP Rail line was driven by Sir Donald Alexander Smith, better known as Lord Strathcona, who will be honored by a stamp marking the 150th anniversary of his birth. The six-cent stamp is printed in yellow, brown and green. It is set for release Nov. 4.

Chamber Starts Looking For Good Citizen

The annual hunt for a civic paragon was launched today by Victoria Chamber of Commerce in order to crown its citizen of the year Oct. 21. Nominees for the title must be qualified by their unstinting contribution to the community during the past 12 months.

Names must be in the hands of the chamber, 1020 Government Street, by Oct. 15.

Citizen of the year — man or woman — will be recognized for his support to civic betterment at the chamber's business of the year dinner, to be held at the Empress Hotel.

They just won't go home because of our Intertherm™ Hot Water Electric Heating!

The INTERTHERM™ Provides the Wonderful, Floor-to-Ceiling Warmth of HOT WATER HEAT WITHOUT PLUMBING
Permanent Systems for Entire Structures — and Portable Plug-in Models

Operates by a Revolutionary Principle— Electrically-Heated, Sealed-in Water!

No matter how late the hour — you just can't get guests to leave, once they've enjoyed the soft, gentle, floor-to-ceiling warmth of INTERTHERM Hot Water Electric Baseboard Heating.

Both Permanently-Installed and Portable Model INTERTHERMS produce the most comfortable, healthful, economical, cleanest, safest heat possible today. For entire homes, apartments, vacation lodges, hotels, motels, schools, commercial buildings — and hard-to-heat single rooms, offices and other small areas.

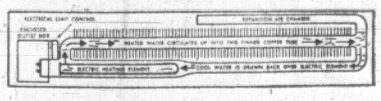

The INTERTHERM Can Provide Hot Water Heat Without Plumbing because of the heater's inner works, shown in the diagram at the right. This consists of a copper tube inside of which an electric heating element and a water and anti-freeze solution — which never needs replenishing — are permanently, hermetically sealed. The electric element heats the water. And the water heats the room.

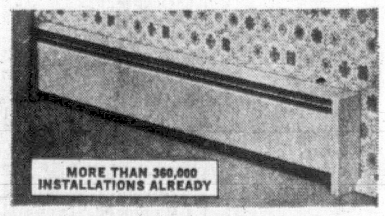

A Permanent INTERTHERM System Can Be Installed in an Entire Home at Much Lower Installation Cost than Any Conventional Central Heating System. That's because it requires no furnace, boiler, pipes, ducts, flues, chimney, fuel tank and other costly components of a properly-installed, heat-wasting central heating system.

The Portable INTERTHERM plugs into any 115-volt outlet. And is easy to carry anywhere.

The Heating Solution is Maintained at Exactly the Temperature Necessary for Perfectly-Balanced, Floor-to-Ceiling Warmth at All Times — regardless of outside temperature — by Thermostat control. When the current is shut off the solution continues to heat the room.

No Heat is Wasted at the Ceiling. Floors are kept warm. No chilling drafts. No alternating too-hot and too-cold periods. No overheating to carbonize lint and dust particles that irritate nose and throat; smudge walls, drapes and furniture. Can't cause a fire hazard. Can't burn child or pet — can't scorch furniture or drapes — if they come in contact. Many more advantages.

CULTURE SHOCK DEVASTATING NATIVES

White Civilization's Juggernaut Hits Inuvik

By DENNIS BELL

INUVIK, N.W.T. (CP) — Culture shock among Indians and Eskimos in the Mackenzie delta is calculated in empty beer cartons stacked on the weatherbeaten porch of a tavern known locally as The Zoo.

It is here that the human casualties of the relentless northward juggernaut of white civilization gather six days a week to drink, fight and, in some cases, to prostitute themselves.

Almost all of The Zoo's patrons come from the half of Inuvik's 3,000 residents who are of Eskimo, Indian or Metis extraction. The whites gave the tavern its name, but few are brave enough to drink there alone on a Saturday night.

The Indians, Eskimos and Metis have adopted the name as they have the tavern. In a town where native arts are for sale at a souvenir counter in the white-owned Hudson's Bay Co. store, The Zoo is one of the few truly native institutions.

Inuvik is rich but the natives by and large are poor. A dozen oil companies are spending $50 million in the western Arctic this year looking for black gold. The oil boom and the proliferation of white-oriented institutions are having a serious impact on the native population.

SPENT HIS ROLL

Archie, a huge, muscular Indian from Fort McPherson up the Mackenzie River, had been in town nine days, spending a $450 bankroll he had earned with a construction crew.

He was exceedingly drunk. "Guess I started drinking about a week ago," he said in an interview at The Zoo. "I got into a card game with some friends, lost a big pile of money.

"Been doing a lot of partying, buying liquor and beer for everybody, all my friends. When I haven't been partying, been sitting in here. Down to $40 now, don't know where it's all gone."

Archie said he has been drinking like this since he was 17 or 18—almost 10 years. He goes into the bush, earns a roll, quits and heads straight for the nearest town, where he stays drunk until all the money is gone.

"I don't hold no jobs. I only went to Grade 6, so the only thing I know how to do is dig holes. I don't like digging holes, so I quit when I get tired of it."

Archie said he has been in and out of jail a number of times for crimes relating to drinking, mainly minor theft charges and assault counts arising from a razor-thin temper, honed by liquor.

TRAPS, RIFLE GONE

"Maybe I'd like to go trapping again," he said wistfully, trying to focus on happier days. "I used to trap once but I don't have no traps any more. Don't know what happened to 'em. Maybe I sold 'em, or gave 'em away or just lost 'em.

"I used to own a rifle once. A real beauty. It was a .303. It's gone too, and I think maybe that's a good thing."

His mood changed and so did the subject. "You like my jacket? Got a crest from Fort McPherson on the back with my name on it. Pretty nice. Maybe Archie sell it to you, my friend. Twenty-five, thirty dollars."

No sale. Archie stood up, dishevelled, weaving, trying to tuck in his shirt. His sleeve caught an empty beer glass on the table and sent it shattering on the floor. "Maybe you don't like Archie, my friend."

A waiter half his size came up behind Archie. "Okay man, that's it. Get the hell out of here and don't come back till you dry out." Archie looked hurt, but he had heard the voice of white authority and he obeyed.

Gathering up his cigarettes, he shambled out the door headed for the territorial liquor store and a bottle of cheap wine.

SODDEN WITH WINE

A few minutes after closing time at The Zoo, some friends found Archie unconscious under one of the aluminum-shielded utilidors, above ground umbilical cords that pump heat, water and electricity into the white homes and businesses.

Archie's jacket was sodden with wine from the half-finished bottle that had rolled off his chest and soaked into the grass. A swarm of angry mosquitoes raised ugly welts on his face and hands.

The friends loaded Archie into a ramshackle car with no muffler and headed for Happy Valley, the name the whites have coined for the native end of town. The native leaders call it a ghetto. The utilidors stop at the edge of Happy Valley.

Rev. Joseph Adam, a 62-year-old Oblate missionary whose igloo-shaped Our Lady of Victory Church stands across the street from The Zoo, estimates there are 50 hard-core alcoholics in the town, and says the rest of the native population drink far too much.

"The Indians and Eskimos drink because they want to be something and when they don't drink they have an inferiority complex," said the bearded priest, who came to the Arctic from Belgium 36 years ago.

"When they drink they feel strong and on top of the world. But the next day they feel nobody cares for them."

PART OF SYNDROME

A lot of the money that gets converted into beer at 75 cents a bottle in The Zoo comes from welfare cheques. Mayor Dick Hill, a white, said the territorial government spends $219,000 a year here on social assistance.

Wally Firth, a field worker with the Indian-Eskimo Association of Canada, said the heavy drinking is part of a syndrome of social annihilation that plagues much of the native population of the Northwest Territories.

"People in their late 20s and older have very little education because the big push in schooling didn't start in the North until 10 years ago," said Mr. Firth, an Indian who is also from Fort McPherson. "These people live from odd job to odd job.

"A man comes back from a job with a jingle in his jeans. He gets a room and heads straight for The Zoo. He drinks up all his pay and is unable to support his family. He goes on welfare. This makes him feel inferior. He drinks more to get rid of the feeling.

"He runs out of money and does something stupid relating to booze, winds up in the calaboose for a couple of months. He gets out, gets a job if he's lucky, and the cycle starts all over again."

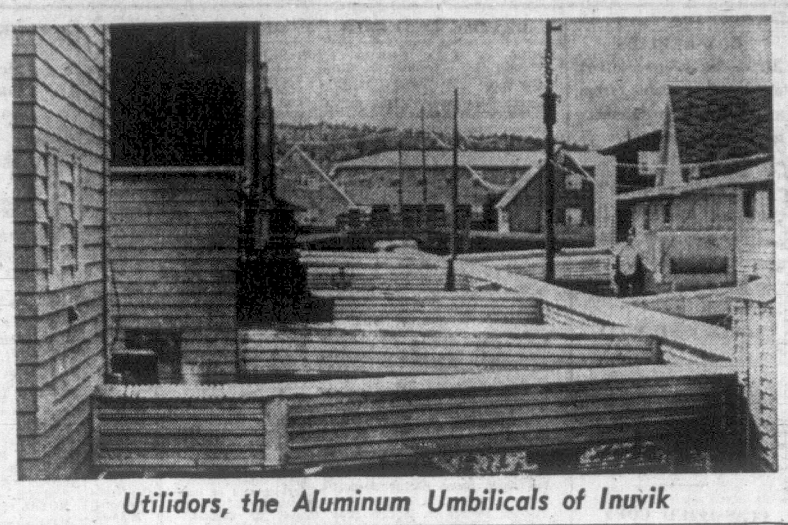

MET THE QUEEN

The Queen passed through Inuvik during the summer on a royal tour marking the Northwest Territories Centennial. The whites donned their business suits and ties, the Eskimos dug out their sealskin finery and did a dance to the drums — those that could remember how it went.

Back in The Zoo, weeks later, they were still talking about it. An ancient wrinkled Eskimo woman in a parka and baggy blue ski slacks lurched to her feet in a corner of the tavern clutching a glass of beer.

"I met the Queen!" she wailed in a reedy voice, tears streaming down her cheeks from almond eyes. "God help me, I met the Queen!"

Nobody was listening.

DEPARTURE OF BELLS HURTS HELL

HELL, Mich. (AP) — Because of Hell's Bells, the population of Hell declined in the 1970 census.

The census showed that the southeastern Michigan community's population dipped to 48 from 52. The Hell Chamber of commerce said it was due largely to the drafting of brothers George and Charles Bell into military service.

The chamber said the two were not counted in the census, and added the village "is proud of its contribution to the armed forces, but like most everyone, we will be happy when Hell's Bells are back in Hell, Mich."

Weddings

McCormick — Grant

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized on September 5, 1970, at 3:00 p.m. in St. Michaels and All Angels Church, West Saanich Road, when Patsy Jean, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Grant of 114 Beach Drive, exchanged marriage vows with Mr. Donald Ross McCormick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack McCormick, of 1250 Union Road.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a short white dress of French silk organza with long full sleeves, low waisted and accordion pleated skirt. The neckline was high and studded with pearls. A small coronet studded with matching pearls held her fine silk headdress. She carried a crescent style bouquet of pale blue Cymbidium orchids. Floral standards of white chrysanthemums and pink carnations decorated the church.

Matron of honor Mrs. Larry McDonald, sister of the bride, wore a short dress of light blue silk pique, empie style, and gathered in soft folds. She carried a hand bouquet of pale blue carnations. Mr. Dan Holmes was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Larry McDonald and Mr. Bob Stoddard.

The bride's mother was attired in a shell pink sheath dress of fine wool, a centre panel from round neck to hemline was hand embroidered with crystal beads and small pearls. She wore white accessories and her corsage was a white orchid. The mother of the groom chose a pale pink ensemble with slim dress, lace coat and matching accessories. She wore a corsage of pale pink sweetheart roses.

"We are One" was sung by Miss Kathy Birch, accompanied by Mr. Bernie Cote on his guitar.

After the wedding a reception was held in the home of the bride's parents where Mr. William J. Snider proposed the toast to the bride.

For her going-away outfit, the bride chose a sheath dress of aqua blue, with matching coat. Her picture hat was of matching blue and white brasided silk. White accessories and a white cymbidium orchid completed her ensemble.

Walpert — Lort

Miss Susan Lort of New York, daughter of Mr. R. A. H. Lort and the late Mrs. Lort of Victoria, and granddaughter of Mrs. Ross A. Lort and the late Mr. Lort and of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Benson of Vancouver, was married on August 26, in Miami Beach, Florida, to Mr. H. Ed Walpert of Philadelphia, son of Mr. G. J. Walpert of Roanoke, Virginia, and Mrs. Helen Walpert of Miami Beach.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and her matron of honor was Mrs. Theodore Rinehat of Philadelphia.

After a honeymoon in the Bahamas, Mr. and Mrs. Walpert will reside in Cherry Hill, New Jersey.

Vickers — Toffey

Yellow gladiolus and white chrysanthemums formed a pretty setting in First Baptist Church at 7:30 p.m. on August 22, 1970, for the double-ring ceremony when Lynne Shirley, daughter of Mrs. F. A. Toffey, and Mr. Glenn Gibson Vickers, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Vickers, exchanged their wedding vows. Reverend H. Pike performed the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her eldest brother Ted, was lovely in a traditionally styled gown of silk corded faille. Guipuire lace trimmed the bodice and hem, which flowed into a full cathedral bell train. The sabrina neckline was accented by a silver locket, a gift from the groom. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses, stephanotis and ivy. Her attendants, maid of honor Miss Carol Hiscock and bridesmaid Miss Judy Murray, were gowned in apple green sparkling tergal over yellow taffeta styled in a softly gathered empire waistline and short puffed sleeves. They carried crescent bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums, stephanotis and ivy. Mr. Rex Vickers, brother of the groom, was best man, and Messrs. Delas Batters and Malcolm Branter were ushers.

During the signing of the register, the Hawaiian Wedding Song was beautifully sung by Mrs. P. Wicks. Mr. J. Tunstall was organist and played Purcell's Trumpet Voluntary for the recessional.

At the reception held in the Ingraham Hotel, the bride's uncle, Mr. Jack Whitby, proposed the toast to the bride.

For her going-away outfit the bride chose an ensemble of raspberry wool with a matching broad-brimmed hat and navy accessories.

Following a honeymoon cruise to Alaska, the happy couple are residing in Victoria.

Anderson — Colwell

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Colwell have pleasure in announcing the marriage of their daughter Eleanor Jean, to Mr. John Edgar Anderson, of London, England. The marriage took place on July 4, 1970, at Cremona, Alberta.

The couple will reside in London.

Francis — Spruyt

A pretty double-ring ceremony took place August 22, 1970, at 7 o'clock in Sacred Heart Church, when Reverend P. Quigley united in marriage Ann Marie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Spruyt, 3345 Quadra Street, Victoria, to Mr. Robert Charles Francis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Francis, of Sidney.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. The matron of honor was Mrs. Joanne Derrick and the bride's sister Miss Boudien Spruyt was her bridesmaid. Mr. Earl Francis, brother of the groom, was the best man, and Messrs. John Derrick, John Ozard and Neil Duckworth were the ushers.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the Red Lion Motor Inn. The bride and groom left on their honeymoon for Banff and Jasper. On their return they will reside in Victoria.

Barker — Boyd

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur James Boyd, 473 Lampson, are pleased to announce the marriage of their only daughter, Susan, to Mr. David Barker, eldest son of Mr. Robert Arthur Barker, New Westminster, B.C.

The wedding was held in the Hanson's home at Woss Camp. The maid of honor Gladys Shuster designed and made the bride's gown. Rosilla Martens was the bridesmaid. Best men were Mr. Douglas World and Mr. Duane Sandmeyer.

This was the first wedding at Woss Camp, 50 miles north of Gold River. Most of the community attended the reception in the hall.

The bride is on teaching staff and the groom is in the forestry department. The couple will make their home at Woss Camp.

Cessford — Shenkenfelder

Mr. and Mrs. C. Shenkenfelder, 3460 Veteran Street, Victoria, B.C., take pleasure in announcing the marriage of their daughter, Marie Anne, to Mr. Brian Wayne Cessford, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Cessford, of Courtenay, B.C.

The quiet wedding took place September 5, 1970, at St. Aidan's United Church, Victoria, with Reverend J. Rae Allan officiating.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Cessford are now residing in Victoria.

Manning — MacDougall

Mr. Norman B. Manning and Mrs. Isobel V. MacDougall were united in marriage on August 24, 1970. The quiet ceremony took place at Shaughnessy Heights United Church, Vancouver, with Reverend Stanley Edgecombe officiating.

Mathewson — Coles

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Coles, 1161 Hampshire Road, Victoria, are happy to announce the marriage of their only daughter, Donna Marie, to Dr. Ross Mathewson, only son of Dr. and Mrs. N. Mathewson, of Christchurch, New Zealand.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

Our heartfelt thanks to all, who have in the past, extended their helping hand, their understanding and many kindnesses to our late brother, Nicholas Lammie, during all the years of his ill health, to Dr. W. A. Fleming and the Royal Jubilee Hospital Staff and Nurses for their excellent care and sympathetic friendship. Especially grateful are we to Mr. Watson, the Manager of the Hotel Yates and to his outstanding staff of men and women for their constant concern and patient services rendered in such a gracious manner. It is difficult to find such a calibre of personnel in this day and age. —Lydia A. Arsens, sisters and brothers

The family of the late Mrs. Euphemia Mortimer would like to express our heartfelt thanks for all the kind thoughts, cards, and beautiful floral tributes from friends and neighbors during our sad loss of a dear Mother and Grandmother. Our thanks to Rev. Alan Beaton for his kind words and to the Women's Afternoon Group at Knox Presbyterian Church. We also wish to thank the many nurses at Glenwarren and St. Joseph's Hospital with special thanks to Dr. Sutherland and his associates.

I wish to thank the Esquimalt Police for their prompt attention given to me in my time of need.—Frank Davis

9 IN MEMORIAM

PAINTER — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Frederick Painter, who passed away Sept. 12, 1968; and a dear mother and grandmother, Ettie Painter, who passed away Sept. 12, 1959.
The rolling stream of life rolls on,
But still the vacant chairs
Recalls the love, the voice, the smile
Of the ones who once sat there.
—Sadly missed by their loving daughter, Myrtle, son-in-law Jack and grandchildren Sandy and Dale.

A CRUISE TO FRIENDLY COVE

This interesting water trip takes place every Wednesday and Saturday afternoon up to September 12th.

MV. UCHUCK III leaves the Gold River Dock at 1:15 p.m. and journeys to Friendly Cove in Nootka Sound. She returns to Gold River at approximately 7:00 p.m.

The ship lies at the Friendly Cove Dock for one hour and you have the opportunity of setting foot on the same land that Captain Cook did in 1784.

You will enjoy the scenery during the voyage and much of the view looks exactly as it did when H.M.S. "Resolution" made her land-fall in the area.

There is a coffee shop on board and you are welcome to visit any part of the ship.

American Terrier Wins Top Dog Prize

A Yorkshire Terrier from Los Angeles was judged best of about 220 dogs Friday at the first of two championship shows presented by the Vancolver Island Dog Fanciers' Association.

Starfire Mitey Model, a Canadian and American champion owned by Margery May and handled by Mitchell Wooten Jr., was awarded the top rozette by judge A. M. Fitzgerald of Kingston, Ont.

Judge Reg Sparkes of Thornhill, Ont., will pick today's best-in-show. Both shows are being held at the Esquimalt Sports Arena.

They will be followed Sunday through Tuesday by three championship shows conducted by the Shoreline Kennel Club at Sanscha Hall in Sidney.

OTHER WINNERS

Other winners at Friday's show:

Best Canadian-bred in show: a Boxer, Ch. Rodonna's El-Segundo, owned by Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Cole of Burnaby.

Best Canadian-bred puppy in show: a Chihuahua, Wisherwoods Wee Jock, owned by Jean Westwood of West Vancouver.

Group winners:

Airlines Sign Agreement

Air Canada and Pacific Western Airlines signed an agreement Friday on joint use of Air Canada's ground handling operation at Victoria International Airport.

Terms of the agreement were not disclosed but they end a recent argument between the two carriers in which PWA claimed it could provide its own ground services cheaper than Air Canada was ready to sell them for.

Bennett's Needs Few: Ottawa Cash

Premier Bennett doesn't mind Canada's other provinces getting federal aid in large amounts from Ottawa. All he wants is cash to make up for the assistance given other provinces but not B.C.

The premier will carry his demand to the three-day federal-provincial conference opening in Ottawa Monday.

Bennett told a press conference Friday he thought it unfair that the province's biggest industry, forestry, was the only one in Canada to receive no federal aid. The government railway, Pacific Great Eastern, is the only line not getting money from Ottawa.

In addition, the premier said, B.C. gets no equalization grants, has no special areas which get federal aid for services, and has the smallest "designated area" which qualifies for federal assistance for new industry.

Despite its problems — Ottawa's reluctance to help, labor unrest, rapid growth and tight money — the province is headed for a good year, Bennett said.

"All other governments, in these circumstances resort to borrowing money or raising taxes. These two things British Columbia doesn't intend to do."

Professors Promoted

Three University of Victoria faculty members have received promotions to the rank of full professor, President Bruce Partridge announced Friday.

The three are Ralph Allen, chairman of the theatre department, Charles Forward, acting chairman of the geography department, and Reginald Roy of the history department.

Allen came to Uvic from the University of Pittsburgh in 1968. He directed plays in Victoria Fair's 1969 and 1970 seasons.

Forward joined the Victoria College faculty in 1959 as a lecturer. He became an assistant professor in 1960, associate professor in 1963, and was elected acting head in 1969.

Roy taught evening and summer session classes at Victoria College from 1954-58, spent 1958-59 as an instructor at Royal Roads, then returned to Victoria College as an assistant professor in 1959. He received the title of associate professor of military history and strategic studies in 1968.

Union Seeks Approval

The province's Labor Relations branch is considering an application from Local 180 of the Hospital Employees' Union for certification at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

If granted, the certification would replace that held by the Royal Jubilee Hospital Employees' Association, which has about 900 members outside of administration, nurses and tradesmen.

A labor relations branch officer will report to the Labor Relations Board on the Local 180 application. The local is certified at most B.C. hospitals.

Guerrillas Blow Up 3 Planes

'Hussein Must Yield'

By The Associated Press

Palestinian guerrillas warring on the one hand with Jordan and on the other with Israel say King Hussein of Jordan must yield his power to a "national authority" if a new ceasefire is to continue between the commandos and the Amman government.

The central committee of the Palestine Liberation Organization, which generally speaks for all 11 commando groups, said in a broadcast Friday the authority would "run the country and purge anti-guerrilla elements from the army, the state and police." It would represent "the forces of the people," said the broadcast from Baghdad, Iraq.

When it takes over, the broadcast continued, the ruling authority should pull Jordan's armed forces from Jordan's cities and redeploy them along the ceasefire line with Israel.

Jordan, Egypt and Israel agreed to a ceasefire Aug. 7, and the guerrillas charge that Hussein has brought most of the army from the front into Amman and other towns to defend against the guerrillas.

HINT AT CONCESSIONS

The guerrilla broadcast said both sides had agreed to "remove the causes" of civil strife in Jordan. Observers read this as an indication that Hussein might have accepted some of the conditions of the broadcast.

Egypt's government radio in Cairo said the United States committed "an act of war against the Arabs" by promising Phantom jets to Israel.

DIDN'T EVEN GET OFF THE GROUND

NEW YORK (UPI) — Off-duty patrolman Melvin Lasky was on his way home in Brooklyn early today when a man jumped on his back, pointed a knife at his neck and shouted, "Take me to Cuba."

Lasky, 22, subdued the man with the help of bystanders and police. The man, identified as Donald Gordon, 22, of Brooklyn, was charged with felonious assault and possession of a dangerous weapon.

Leila To Be Released

LONDON (UPI) — Britain announced today it would release Leila Khaled, the female guerrilla, as part of the ransom for freeing hostages from three jetliners hijacked to Jordan.

The decision to release Miss Khaled was taken at an emergency cabinet meeting today only hours after Arab guerrillas blew up the three jetliners on a dusty airstrip north of Amman.

Fighting Flares Inside Amman

AMMAN (Reuters) — Fresh fighting flared in Amman today, two days after a ceasefire ended two weeks of clashes between Jordanian troops and Arab guerrilla commandos.

Automatic fire was heard in various parts of the city during the early afternoon. Stores were shut and traffic thinned rapidly in the streets.

Firms Busy

LONDON (AP) — A British insurance company has tapped brisk revenue with a policy giving individual cover against the danger of being held captive on a hijacked airplane.

Hostages Safe In Amman Hotel

AMMAN (Reuters) — The three hijacked Western airliners have been blown up at the desert airstrip, it was officially announced here.

Radio Amman said all passengers were safe and none had been hurt in the dynamiting of the aircraft today.

A spokesman for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine said the planes — valued at $25 million for all three — were destroyed a few hours after the 240 hostages were removed from them to Amman and other undisclosed areas.

Palestinian guerrillas who hijacked a Pan American World Airways 747 jumbo jet last Sunday also blew that one up soon after they removed the passengers and crew in Cairo. That loss was put at $24.5 million.

The Popular Front spokesman said the blowing up of the planes "is the first step of our warning following the delay of the three Western governments to concede to our terms."

He said the fate of the passengers still held by the Front will be decided upon depending on the reaction of the three governments.

Sixty men were kept aboard the dynamite-laden planes until the last possible moment.

One group of 124 hostages arrived in Amman this morning in a convoy of eight Jordanian army buses.

Tonight the remaining male passengers arrived in two heavily guarded convoys, apparently the last of the refugees.

In Nicosia, Cyprus, the first group of 66 hostages freed by the guerrillas left aboard a chartered Swissair jet for Zurich after spending their first night of freedom in Nicosia hotels.

The passengers, 44 from the Swissair plane and 22 from the TWA plane, had been in an Amman hotel since Monday after being transferred from the aircraft, which Palestinian guerrillas hijacked to a desert airstrip in Jordan last Sunday.

The three jetliners — a Trans World Airlines Boeing 707, A Swissair DC-8 and a British Overseas Airways Corp. VC-10 — were blown up at 3:15 p.m. Jordan time, a spokesman for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine said. This was 9:15 a.m. EDT.

Witnesses reporting on the blast in Jordan said it was greeted by shouting and shots fired in the air by the guerrillas.

Smoke from the airstrip, heavy and black in the clear blue sky, was visible 20 miles away.

Jordanian troops had pulled back 15 miles from the airstrip, which was sealed off after removal of the last passengers.

Guerrilla sources stated categorically that there was no loss of life in the explosion.

About 240 passengers were believed to have been aboard the three planes Friday night. Originally there had been 400 persons — passengers and crew. From time to time various parties were removed.

The International Red Cross has been negotiating since early in the week with the guerrilla leaders for release of all hijacked hostages in exchange for seven Arabs held in three European countries.

Storm Winds Blow B.C. Ferry Aground on Galiano Island

The British Columbia government ferry Queen of Sidney ran aground at the eastern entrance to Active Pass during a storm Friday night.

A B.C. Ferries spokesman at Swartz Bay said the 310-foot vessel was blown off course while entering Sturdies Bay on Galiano Island.

The grounding occurred about 9:30 p.m. as the Queen of Sidney made a regular run from the Tsawwassen terminal to Swartz Bay through the Gulf Islands.

TOW LINE SNAPS

The tug Island Mariner, after breaking its towline twice, pulled the ferry free about three hours after it went aground.

Rescue vessels, which included the Queen of Esquimalt, a Coast Guard cutter and a rescue coordination centre hovercraft, stood by during the operation.

The ferry carried 200 passengers and 30 cars bound for Galiano, Mayne and Pender Islands.

The weather office in Vancouver issued a gale warning for Georgia Strait at 11 p.m. Friday as northeasterly winds rose to about 58 miles an hour over the strait.

CRUISER SINKS

At Sidney, breakup of the government wharf resulted in minor damage to several pleasure craft, including the sinking of the 40-foot cruiser Dream Girl.

Sidney RCMP reported floats making up the wharf broke away during the high winds. Some craft were pounded against the floats, while others were driven up on adjacent rocks.

Gonzales weather station had winds of up to 53 miles an hour overnight, while the weather office at Victoria International Airport had

San Diego to L.A. Hit by Quakes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A strong rolling earthquake and two smaller ones shook southern California this morning, swaying tall buildings and awakening residents. There were no immediate reports of major damage.

Police departments throughout southern California were flooded with telephone calls.

The largest tremor, at 7:31 a.m., lasted about 15 seconds and was felt from Los Angeles to San Diego, 120 miles to the south.

It was one of the strongest felt recently in the area, which is often rattled by minor quakes.

"It really shook us here and we're on the bottom floor," said Sheriff's Sgt. Bob Ryan of San Diego County. "We sure felt it."

The quake was believed centred in the San Gabriel mountains along the San Jacinto fault, not far from the huge San Andreas fault.

Mebbe we need a ferry godmother.

Cabinet Muffling Objectors To Mine Waste Dump—SPEC

By DOUG MacRAE

Members of the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control will try to crash a controversial pollution hearing at Port Hardy Wednesday.

Charging "deliberate government attempts to muffle objections" to an application to dump mine wastes, the militant Cowichan-Malahat branch of SPEC plan to attend the hearing despite rejection of their request to appear.

The Pollution Control Branch hearing concerns an application by Utah Construction and Mining Ltd. to pump 9.3 million gallons of mine effluent daily into Rupert Inlet.

Utah has been working almost a year on a $74-million mine-refinery complex and residential development in the Port Hardy area on north Vancouver Island.

Of 140 original objectors to the Utah application, William Venables, the province's director of pollution control, has said he will hear four briefs at the hearing — not including SPEC's.

Cowichan-Malahat branch president Kurt Horn said today he and three pollution experts would try to attend the hearing to present the SPEC brief, already prepared, and to offer technical advice to the lay appellants.

Horn said he was "out-

CHLORINE CLOUD CLEARS HOTEL

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A cloud of chlorine gas sent more than 100 persons choking and stumbling for air at the Sahara Hotel, leaving 16 in fair condition in hospital, authorities said today.

The pale yellow fumes, which burn the eyes and skin and cause instant nausea, were released Friday when a tank of chlorine ruptured beside the hotel's crowded swimming pool.

Some 65 persons including the 16 in hospital, were taken by ambulances to the two hospitals.

Chemainus Plant To Close Tuesday

VANCOUVER — MacMillan Bloedel's sawmill division at Chemainus on Vancouver Island will be closed Tuesday, putting 450 men out of work.

J. R. Forrest, vice-president of the company's wood products group, said Friday the shutdown was being forced by the continuing strike of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada.

He said the timber firm's Harmac pulp division at Nanaimo which normally takes wood chips from MB's wood products mills, has been closed by the PPWC strike since July 24.

The Chemainus sawmill division is among the mills which supply chips to Harmac. About 1,000 PPWC members are on strike at Harmac with no sign of a wage settlement.

Previously, production at the company's Vancouver plywood division, which also supplies wood chips to Harmac, had been curtailed for the same reason. The plywood mill is operating only one shift a day, compared with the normal three shifts.

About 600 men were left without jobs at the plywood mill because of the strike, said Forrest.

The PPWC is on strike at seven other British Columbia pulp mills.

Strife, Booze Murder Causes

OTTAWA (CP) — The murder rate is rising, says Dominion Bureau of Statistics, but the bureau's annual volume on the subject is another sad tale of domestic strife or too much booze.

The report, released Friday, says there were 342 murder victims in 1969, a rate of 1.9 per 100,000 populatios. The rate was 1.8 in 1968 and 1.6 in 1967.

At the same time, says the report, the number of murders during commission of other criminal acts—robbery or sexual assault—has "slightly decreased" in recent years.

Family life accounted for 120 of last year's victims and 72 of the 120 were women. When the killing isn't domestic in nature, says the report, the man is usually the victim.

The DBS figures are read closely by legislators as a clue to how the current five-year trial abolition of capital punishment is working.

The death penalty, except where police or prison guards are killed, was abolished Dec. 29, 1967, until that date in 1972.

POLICE MAKE COUNT

DBS gets its basic figures from police, who described 342 deaths last year as murder. Once in court, however, the picture changed drastically.

The report says 121 persons were tried by last Dec. 31 in a number of the 1969 murders and 60 were convicted of manslaughter.

Another 14 were acquitted, four were declared insane, and only 24 convicted of non-capital murder.

That the victims were victims is certain.

The report says 152 were shot, 76 beaten to death, 61 stabbed, 22 strangled and the rest killed in varying ways.

There were 315 "incidents," with 296 single murders, 15 double murders, three triple murders, and one case in which seven persons were killed.

60 UNSOLVED

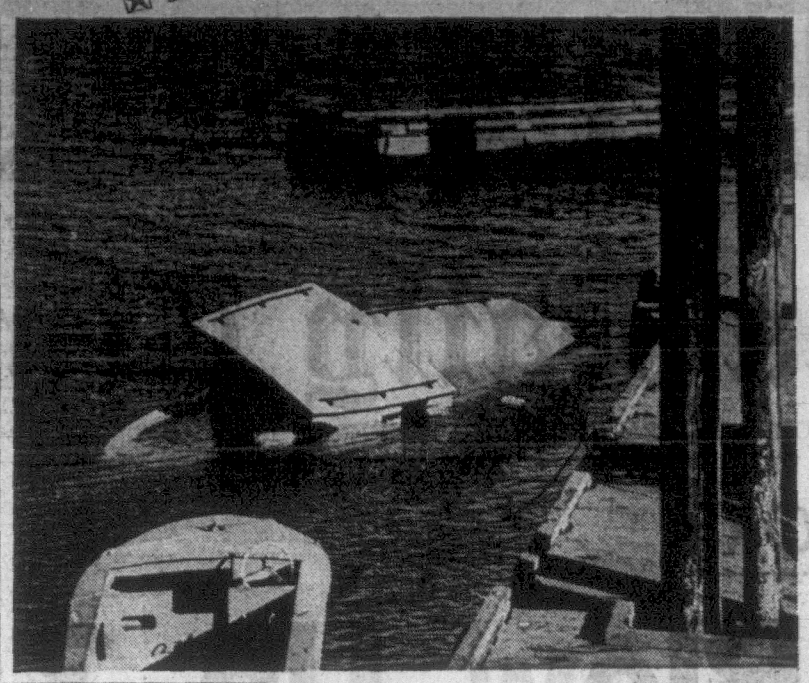

Sixty of the 315 incidents remained unsolved at Dec. 31. In 236 others charges had been placed and in 18, suicide had cleared things up.

The report says that where there was no domestic relationship, "the accused may have been insane, may have been involved in an argument immediately prior to the murder, may have been involved in an argument during a prolonged drinking bout, or the action may have been self-defence." Cases of jealousy and professional killings also are mentioned.

The report looks to the seasons for a clue but finds none. There is "no apparent patterns to the seasons of the year when murders occur," it says.

However, its five-year statistical summary shows summer leading the way in three of the years and winter with the lowest figures in three years.

DBS says one-third of last year's bloodletting was done in Quebec. The Yukon reported no "murders" in 1969 and Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick one each.

winds of up to 40 miles an hour. Gonzales instruments were recording 40-mph gusts late this morning.

B.C. Hydro said six crews were kept busy during the night responding to reports of power outages in Victoria and the Saanich Peninsula. Most of the outages were caused by broken tree tops and limbs.

B.C, Telephone Co. reported a few lines down, but no major interruptions.

The weather office at the airport said a gale warning for Georgia Strait and small craft warning for Juan de Fuca Strait will probably remain in effect until Sunday.

CANADIAN SKIPPER CHARGED

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Four state charges were filed Friday against Dennis Smith of Prince Rupert, skipper of a Canadian halibut vessel seized Monday for allegedly fishing in Alaskan waters off Cape Muzon north of the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Smith was arraigned Friday and pleaded innocent to charges of being an alien fishing for halibut in United States waters, fishing without a commercial licence, fishing without a vessel licence, and fishing without a lingline licence. The last three charges refer to Alaska licences.

B.C. Needs Labor Court —McGeer

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia needs an economic council to set guidelines for labor contract settlements, Dr. Pat McGeer said Friday.

The B.C. Liberal leader said this should be accompanied by an impartial labor court, made up of a judge, a labor man and an industry man, to arbitrate any settlement outside these guidelines.

And, he added, there should be "special laws" to deal with anyone who won't accept settlements worked out this way.

"Their position would be reduced to something comparable to an outlaw."

Dr. McGeer, speaking to the kraft paper section of the Canadian Pulp and Paper association, said the labor court could be given sole control over wage rates of civil servants and people in essential services.

"This concept may even be extendable to those who chronically are the last to catch up in a wage spiral and the first to suffer in inflation, those on assistance of various kinds."

B.C. JOBLESS CUT TO 8.3%

July employment figures for British Columbia showed a 29,000 increase over the previous month, while the unemployment rate showed "a marked decline" from 9.7 to 8.3 per cent, says Industrial Development Minister Waldo M. Skillings in his monthly report on business activity in the province.

The report says industrial unrest in the construction, forestry and transportation industries has been responsible for lower levels of output in many sectors of the provincial economy.

But other sectors have recorded impressive gains, and the report predicts an improved outlook for the rest of the year.

Ferry Off Course, Pilot Testifies

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Canadian marine pilot testified Friday that the British Columbia ferry Queen of Victoria was on the wrong side of a narrow pass when he first saw the ferry from the Soviet freighter Fergey Yesenin, moments before the two vessels collided.

Capt. D. G. Crabbe, 45, of Victoria, told a federal inquiry into the fatal collision that he was on the freighter's bridge just preparing for the turn into Active Pass when he saw the ferry moving in an opposite course.

"Normally I give an order for 20 degrees of starboard helm (when entering the pass), but I can't recall if I did this time because at this point, who should be coming around the point but the ferry.

"As soon as I saw it, I knew the position of the ferry was wrong . . . it was too far down on our side (of the pass)."

Under rules of the road at sea, vessels should keep to the starboard, or right, side of such channels.

The 14,700-ton Sergey Yesenin was headed to Vancouver from Victoria at the time, a sunny Sunday afternoon, and the 3,541-ton ferry was on her regular run to Swartz Bay from Tsawwassen.

Three persons died in the collision, which occurred at about noon Aug. 2 at the western end of Active Pass.

Crabbe, making his first appearance on the stand in 16 days of testimony, said that after sighting the ferry he gave two short blasts of the freighter's whistle to indicate the ferry should "stay where she was (in course)."

He then ordered the freighter to half speed astern. The ferry "kept coming" around the point and the skipper of the freighter, Capt. Nikolai Khaustov, then ordered his ship to full speed astern, the pilot said.

Crabbe said he did not hear any whistles from the ferry.

His testimony as to the ferry's position concurred with that of Khaustov and officers of the Yesenin. Capt. James Pollock, 57, skipper of the ferry has testified that he was on the proper (starboard) side of the pass.

In earlier testimony, Crabbe said he boarded the Sergey Yesenin at 9:35 a.m. just off Victoria and shortly afterward decided to take Active Pass, rather than the longer route through the more southerly Boundary Pass.

He said Khaustov questioned whether Active Pass was a safe route and that he explained the tide was slack and the pass safe. Crabbe also said he consulted a ferry schedule and estimated that all ferries would be clear of the pass when the freighter reached it.

Dissatisfaction Seen In Leadership of IWA

By BOB MITCHELL

Dissatisfaction with leadership of the International Woodworkers of America could unseat regional president Jack Moore following the IWA convention next week.

Several members of the IWA negotiating committee are reported disenchanted with Moore's leadership during the recent inquiry into the forest industry dispute headed by Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz.

At least four members of the negotiating committee — all of them presidents of various B.C. locals — have indicated they will support regional vice-president Jack MacKenzie as a presidential candidate.

Rank and file union members will elect the president within 60 days after the convention.

EIGHT YEARS

MacKenzie backers include Murray Drew of Victoria, Weldon Jubenville of Duncan, Walter Allen of Port Alberni and Syd Thompson of Vancouver.

Moore, who came from Port Alberni, and MacKenzie, who was once president of the Victoria local, have held their respective executive positions for eight years.

Moore resigned as chairman of the negotiating committee in August when the committee voted to recommend rejection of the Nemetz report.

MacKenzie said Thursday he made up his mind to challenge Moore as a result of what happened during negotiations.

"My concern over lack of leadership has been steadily growing and came to a head during the recent negotiations when Jack Moore, in an abortive attempt to force his will on the majority of the negotiating committee, abdicated his responsibility as president by resigning as chairman of the negotiating committee," MacKenzie said.

The IWA's western region includes the four western provinces and a membership of 40,000, most of it in B.C.

HOFFMAN PREDICTS INFLUX OF YIPPIES

CALGARY (CP)—Abbie Hoffman, self- styled Yippie leader, said Friday that by spring 1,000 revolutionaries will have left the U.S. to seek refuge in Canada.

He urged Young Canadians to make sure the government will offer political asylum.

Hands of the Clock Told End of WW II

TORONTO (CP) — John Diefenbaker says former Prime Minister William Lyon Mackenzie King, clad in pyjamas, looked at the hands of the clock at 10:20 a.m. June 14, 1940, and predicted Germany would lose the Second World War.

In an interview Friday, Mr. Diefenbaker, also a former prime minister, reminisced before his 75th birthday next week, and said the incident took place as members of Parliament listened to the war news in a back room of the House of Commons where the prime minister liked to sleep in times of stress.

He said that Mr. King would not make any decision, in cabinet or out of it, unless the hands of the clock were in opposite directions, or unless one hand covered the other.

Mr. Diefenbaker recalled that as the members sat in the room, Mr. King was asked if it was true that Paris had fallen.

"Mackenzie King nodded and walked over to the clock on the wall and looked at it. The time was exactly 10:20 a.m.

"Then the prime minister said: 'Gentlemen, it's going to be all right. The Germans are not going to win the war. I know because the hour hand and minute hand of the clock are pointing in exactly opposite directions'."

raged" that the government appeared to be "bending over backwards" to prevent as thorough an airing of the opposition to the min'e application as could be mustered.

"Their (the pollution control branch) approach should be the other way around, to interpret the law in as liberal a manner as possible in these things," he said.

OBJECTIONS

"Instead, they seem to represetn deliberate government attempts to muffle objections by making it as incomveniet as possible fro anyone with a real interest in pollution control."

Horn said he and the SPEC party — as well as others trying to be present for the hearing — were finding it difficult to find accommodation at Port Hardy, or even to get there.

The SPEC group finally was able to find a basement in a private home where they will be permitted to bunk in sleeping bags, but have been unable to get plane reservations or even to confirm space on the Kelsey Bay Ferry to make the trip by car.

Objectors scheduled to be heard are E. R. Morton, Cowichan Station; Roger Prentice, North Vancouver, the Pacific Salmon Society, Vancouver; and Mrs. Elaine Price, Duncan.

"Mrs. Price is concerned in particular because she has been unable to find accommodation anywhere in the area," Horn said.

EARLIER CASE

The hearing was called following a B.C. Supreme Court ruling that Venables had not acted in a judicial manner in an earlier case, in which no inquiry had been held.

The SPEC brief is especially concerned that a ruling favorable to Utah at Port Hardy would be a dangerous precedent.

Noting that the federal fisheries department had considered the Rupert Inlet dumping plan the "lesser of two evils" in disposing of the mine's wastes, the brief says:

"If this can be interpreted as reluctant approval of this application, what would their reaction be to the fact that four other mining companies have signified their intentions of mining in the same general area . . ."

Horn said that since development of the Utah project had proceeded to the extent it has, a restricted hearing of objections to their plans was making a "farce" of serious attempts to control pollution in the province.

Workmen Honored For Saving Comrade

Two longshoremen have been awarded Workmen's Compensation Board Bravery Awards for saving a fellow worker from drowning in the Port Alberni harbor last January.

Brian J. Davis, 23, of Victoria, and Thomas Watts, 62, of Port Alberni, received the awards and $500 each from Labor Minister Leslie Peterson at a dinner in their honor in Port Alberni Friday night.

24-FOOT FALL

Co-worker Fred Jackson was supervising the loading of a ship in Port Alberni when he was knocked over the ship's side by a timber from a landed load.

He fell 24 feet and landed with his body draped across a fender log between the ship and the dock. Jackson suffered multiple injuries, including a skull fracture, and lay unconsious with his head in the water.

At the cry of "man overboard," Davis rigged a rope from the ship, slid down the fender log and pulled Jackson's head from the water. Watts, a foreman for the stevedoring company, followed Davis down the rope and both men held Jackson out of the water on the slippery log until a stretcher could be lowered.

Jackson was in hospital for seven weeks and is recovering at home in Errington, B.C.

The citations were the 16th and 17th under the bravery awards program since its inception in 1968.

Business Seminar Tuesday

A three-hour seminar on communicating in business and industry will be offered Tuesday as the first in a three-part series by Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

About 25 registrations for the inaugural session at the Imperial Inn at 9 a.m., followed by luncheon, have been received by the chamber office.

Management condultants Woods, Gordon and Co. are arranging the study, in which organization consultant Godfrey H. Chowne, Ronald G. Crampton, of Clarkson, Gordon and Co., and G. Hardy Nielsen, will lead discussion.

How to identify, reduce, and solve communication breakdown in a corporation will be among the subjects, relating to employees, clients, managers, new programs, political issues, union negociations and community relations.

Typhoon Kills 85

TAIPEI (AP) — Police said 85 persons were killed and 42 are missing in accidents attributed to Typhoon Fran, which struck Formosa. The national highway bureau said the typhoon caused $2.5-million damage to Formosa's highways.

Savage Whirlwind Kills 30 in Venice

VENICE (AP) — A short-lived whirlwind wrought destruction and death in the suburbs and on the lagoon of this historic Italian port city Friday night. It picked up a crowded passenger boat "like a toothpik," spun it in the air and plunged it back into the water, where it sank in 30 seconds.

Frogmen recovered 18 bodies, and 30 other persons were rescued. The remaining toll on land was 12 killed and about 200 injured, police said.

"I saw the whirlwind whisk by," a gondolier said. "It picked up the motorboat like a toothpick, held it in the air and then threw it back into the water like a cannonball.

"There wasn't a shout. Nobody had time to realize what was going on. I only heard the bang of the metal being twisted as if it were a feather."

The survivors, including Enzo Bullo, the pilot, fell from the craft while it was in the air, police said.

DAMAGE WIDESPREAD

"I tried to steer the wheel away, but I couldn't do a thing," Bullo said. "suddenly I found myself in mid-air, the boat plunging into the water under me. I fell into the lagoon, and I looked around for any possible survivors. But I was dazed, half crazy, and I barely managed to get to shore."

Authorities estimated the wind speed at 125 miles an hour. The whirlwind, similar to a tornado, splintered houses, shops and street stands, then dissipated over the Gulf of Venice. Electrical power was disrupted throughout the canal city.

Police said damage was confined mainly to private buildings, although a hospital and soccer stadium received heavy damage. The twister spared the city's art treasures in St. Mark's Square and along the Grand Canal.

The 25-ton motorboat had just pulled in to St. Elena Island, off St. Mark's Basin, when the wind struck, demolishing the dock and capsizing a number of empty boats.

Passersby began rescue activities, some swimming to the stunned survivors. Then frogmen took over. Policemen and Italian soldiers were called to control anxious crowds.

"The boat looks like a car after a head-on collision," one diver said after inspecting the craft on the bottom. "It's all in one piece, but all broken up, the roof caved in, the seats all ripped away and the windows no longer there."

The lagoon has been the site of many disasters, but none has taken so high a death toll in recent years.

Venice was hit by a wind-swept high tide almost four years ago, when sea water caused an estimated $1.6 million damage.

Stoke City Beats Leeds United 3-0

LONDON (CP) — Leeds United suffered its first defeat of the English soccer season when it lost 3-0 today to Stoke City. The result opened up the race in the English First Division.

Despite the defeat, Leeds still is on top with 13 points. Manchester City, 1-0 winner over Nottingham Forest, has 12 points. Crystal Palace and Arsenal are tied with 11, while five teams are bracketed at nine—Southampton, Chelsea, Manchester United, Liverpool and Tottenham.

The season has only started, however, with some teams having played eight games in a schedule that calls for 42.

Bond Investors Await New Issue

TORONTO (CP) — Prices remained generally unchanged on the Canadian bond market, as most investors appeared to be waiting for details on the new Government of Canada refund issue expected Monday. Trading throughout the week remained light.

The new Canada issue will total $525 million plus or minus 10 per cent. The Bank of Canada has agreed to acquire $150 million.

Canada Cement introduced a new issue Wednesday totalling $20 million. The 9½-per-cent, Oct. 1, 1990, issue sold at par.

Figures compiled by Wood Gundy Securities Ltd., show that government, municipal and corporate bond financing for August totalled $288,665,724 compared with $271,306,467 for the same month last year.

Total bond financing for the first eight months of the year was $3,015,251,171, down from $3,472,173,122 in 1969.

Day-to-day money ranged on the week from 5¼ to 5¾ per cent, closing Friday at 5¼ per cent. Three- and six-month treasury bills traded at 5.46 and 5.96 per cent, respectively.

Bell Seeks New Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — The decrease in demand for service that followed Bell Canada's increase in long-distance rates last September cost the company "some millions," Bell's head of operations said Friday.

But, Vice-President Walter Light told the Canadian transport commission, despite the fact that demand drops when prices rise Bell needs an additional increase in its general service rates to provide continuing adequate service to its customers.

Newsprint Hike 'Unreasonable'

CHATTANOOGA, Ten. (AP) — Canadian newsprint mills have been warned that a $10-a-ton newsprint increase might force members of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association to buy elsewhere.

Ralph W. Callahan, association president, issued the warning Friday in telegrams to the mills.

The increase, he said, is "shocking" and "unreasonable."

Canadian Pulp and Paper Mills Ltd., has announced the increase will be effective Jan. 1.

Few Developments for Reaction by Markets

By ART JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets remained almost unchanged at the close of trading this week.

The Toronto Stock Exchange's industrial index, a broad indicator of market movement, stood at 161.61 when trading ended Friday, the same level at which it had begun the week.

Exchanges were closed Monday for Labor Day.

During the four trading sessions, there were no major fluctuations in market trends.

Markets failed to maintain either an uptrend or a downtrend for more than one session.

On Tuesday, the first trading day of the week, prices moved downward. This was countered by a modest upswing Wednesday. Markets turned lower Thursday, but were up moderately Friday.

There were few Canadian developments to which markets reacted.

Observers said, however, that some profit-taking continued and Canadian markets reflected the unease in the United States over threatened rail and auto industry strikes.

Trading was fairly strong. The Toronto Stock Exchange's daily volume was 2.50 million shares, the highest level on a daily basis in about 13 weeks.

Investors received during the week some indications that the tight-money squeeze is loosening more.

The Bank of Nova Scotia reduced its lending rate for National Housing Act mortgage loans to 9.5 per cent from 10 per cent.

Other major banks did not immediately follow, but were said to be studying the possibility.

On index at Toronto, golds were up 6.62 points to 165.70 and base metals .97 to 96.79. Western oils dropped 2.89 to 178.69.

Volume for the four days totalled 980 million shares.

Gains outnumbered losses 378 to 356 with 213 issues unchanged.

At the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index was down .66 to 160.75.

Volume was 5.23 million shares, compared with 6.82 million last week.

Gains outnumbered losses 195 to 155 with 102 issues unchanged.

Tonight

RODEO SPECIAL. 6 p.m., Channel 6. The Calgary Stampede is featured in this hour-long special, which features Arthur Godfrey and Calgary's Gordon Kelly sharing the host's responsibilities. All the top events of the stampede are shown . . . a highlight is the chuckwagon races. The hour was filmed during this year's stampede.

MISS AMERICA. It's the Saturday after Labor Day, and most American TV set owners know that they'll be watching the proceedings from Atlantic City where the 1971 Miss America will be chosen. The decision will be made around midnight, the girl will be lovely and will probably cry as Bert Parks serenades her triumphal march down the runway . . . but we'll all be watching an American tradition which has managed to survive change, and prosper for 50 years. This 16th annual telecast of the proceedings will feature, in addition to the perennial Mr. Parks, former winners Debbie Bryant (1966) and Lee Meriwether (1955) as co-hostesses and Mary Ann Mobley (1959) and Vonda Kay Van Dyke (1965) in one of the many production numbers used to build up the suspense until that final envelope.

JACKIE GLEASON. 7 p.m., Channel 8; 7:30 p.m., Channels 7 and 12. Togetherness is too much for the Nortons and the Kramdens, who are sharing quarters to save money. Songs include Let's Consolidate, One Big Happy Family and Show Him That You Are a Man.

ALL-STAR CIRCUS. 9 p.m., Channel 5. A real treat for circus buffs as 11 of the biggest acts are paraded before the camera performing their breathtaking or death-defying feats — or a combination of both. Host Ed McMahon is ringmaster for the acts including the Great Alzanza on the high wire; the Flying Artons, Miss Liza and Miss Elizabeth, three of the better known trapeze acts; Charlotte Walsh and her leopards, Baudy's Siberian tigers and Hans Burger's trained pigs.

SPECIAL. 10 p.m., Channel 5, Joel Grey stars in this TV adaptation of the stage musical based on the life and music of George M. Cohan, which Mr. Grey created on Broadway and toured in all over the country. For those of you who think instantly of Cagney's characterization in the film, let us assure you that this production is not intended to make you forget it, but it's certainly a more honest presentation than the movie biography. Grey is a triple-threat performer and he handles the role skillfully aided by a first-rate supporting cast headed by Jack Cassidy, Nanette Fabray and Bernadette Peters as the Cohans; Anita Gillette and Blythe Danner as his wives; and Red Buttons as Cohan's producing partner, Sam Harris. The music, all Cohan's, is corny, dated, but still melodic, nostalgic, and capable of providing an excellent score for this special. Don't expect a big, brassy musical or another version of Cagney's film, and you'll find this an entertaining 90 minutes.

ONCE MORE WITH FELIX. 10:30 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Actor Robert Morley and the Los Paraguayos are guest performers. Julie sings Someday Soon, Buttermilk Hill and The Flower Lady. Los Paraguayos do A Mia Tierra and La Mosonera.

Sunday

INTERTEL. 4 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Who Speaks for Man? This film, representing the opinions of producer-director Arthur Zegart, deals with the limitations as he sees them of the United Nations. He interviews Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban, Carlos Romulo, Foreign Affairs Secretary of the Phillippines, and Nobel winner biologist George Wald.

PEANUTS SPECIAL. 7 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. It Was a Short Summer, Charlie Brown. Charlie and his tent mates at summer camp, including Snoopy the superdog, compete against the girls. They try baseball, swimming and a canoe race, and all three are disastrous. Just one, Charlie Brown, if you could win . . .

WILD KINGDOM. 7 p.m., Channel 5. (Season's Premiere) "Challenge of the Chettah — Part 1." Back for his ninth season on NBC, series host Marlin Perkins joins his associate Stan Brock in covering a graphic and dramatic conservation project — the relocation of cheetahs in southern Africa — due in great part to poachers who kill the animals to meet the demand for pelts. Taking advantage of a rare case of population explosion in one cheetah range, Marlin and Brock have been moving the animals to Kruger National Park in South Africa.

SPECIAL. 7 p.m., Channel 4, "Just Friends." Composer-singers Johnny Hartford and Mason Williams head the list of guests on this musical variety hour, full of appealing songs for the youngsers and some for their elders as well. Among the former, there's Mason Williams' award-winning "Classical Gas," and among the latter, there's "Gentle on My Mind," Johnny Hartford's winner. Other songs are performed by the rock group, Kenny Rogers and the First Edition, and Jennifer Warren, with Pat Paulson and Bob Einstein along to handle the comedy.

ED SULLIVAN. 8 p.m., Channels 7 and 12 (Repeat) Good show devoted to many of the wonderful songs composed by the Beatles. In addition to the Beatles themselves, tonight's array of stars features Eydie Gorme, Steve Lawrence, Dionne Warwick, Peggy Lee, Duke Ellington, Peter Gennaro, Edward Villella and the Muppets. Highlights include Edward Villella's special ballet to "Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds"; Peggy Lee's selections from the Beatles' album titled, "Abbey Road"; and Duke Ellington's new concerto based on Beatles' tunes.

THE BILL COSBY SHOW. (Season's Premiere) "Anytime You're Ready, C. K." Very funny opener. Bill launches his second season with good script which gives him ample opportunity to show off his ability to play the clown. As football coach, he is forced by the team to borrow a movie camera so that the boys may study their post-game errors. The result is hilarious — particularly when the team sees the film their cinematographer-coach has taken.

BONANZA. 9 p.m., Challel 5 (Season's Premiere) "The Night Virginia City Died." The Cartwrights are back for their 12th year on TV, and Ben is still exerting his level-headed common sense not only on his family but on his city as well. Tonight, Virginia City finds itself in peril against a firebug, and although the viewer is really privy to the identity of the criminal almost at the outset, suspense and interest are generally maintained by the need to combat the ornery outcries of the hotheads among the residents.

'Boston Blackie' Dies At 69

NEW HOPE, Pa. (AP) — Actor Chester Morris, 69, who gained fame for his portrayal of the movie character Boston Blackie, died here Friday of an overdose of barbiturates, the Bucks County coroner said.

Dr. Samuel Willard, the coroner, did not say whether the overdose was accidental or otherwise.

Morris was appearing as Captain Queeg of The Caine Mutiny Court Martial on the stage of the Bucks County Playhouse here.

He opened in the show Monday after a week of rehearsals. A spokesman for the playhouse said Morris had been in good spirits and showed no sign of illness during his two weeks here.

NOT THE YEAR OF THE BOLD EXPERIMENT

U.S. Networks Maintain No-Risk Programming

WASHINGTON (WP) — This is not a year for bold experimentation in U.S. television.

The nation's recent economic difficulties have sent all three television networks scurrying for proved performers and non-risky series. scurrying for proved per- As a result, a lot of old faces will be back on the TV set, specials will be fewer, the number of hard news documentaries will be greatly reduced and there will be more of pro football with its sure-fire audience attraction.

Press releases have been filled with words about "new social consciousness" of television but the new schedule shows even more emphasis on the safest entertainment form — the situation comedy. Such shows consist of a parent, children, a pet and gales of canned laughter. The new year will provide 27 such programs, nearly one-third of the 83 programs in prime viewing time.

CBS, the network that was built on situation comedy and game shows, has 13 situation comedies and ABC-TV has 11. Only three situation comedies are on NBC and only one of these — "Nancy" — is new.

ABC-TV has made one major change, one that will extend the "weekend widow's" mourning period for an additional day. Traditionally, wives have lost husbands to collegiate football (Saturday) and professional football (Sunday). ABC-TV has added a set of Monday night football telecasts.

ABC-TV has promised, however, to make football more appealing to women.

If that doeosn't work, the network has prepared a set of Monday nightmovies, as soon as the football season has ended.

Feature films, made for theatres and produced for first showing on TV, will continue to be a major staple. A prime-time movie is available on six of seven nights, With Wednesday the sole exception. The made-for-TV movies serve a second, major purpose in that these are the plot or sample shows for next fall's regular series.

This represents a major saving, since a one-hour pilot can cost up to $1 million and, if network executives don't enthuse, the entire investment can be lost. If the movie fails a network has only one or two bad rating periods, not a financial disaster.

Just five years ago much attention was being given to "I spy," mainly because a Negro, Bill Cosby, had a starring role. Now, almost every program has at least one Negro in a featured or starring role. An all-black cast, headed by Scoffy Mitchell, Nipsey Russell and Thelma Carpenter, is set for a situation comedy version of "Barefoot in the Park" (ABC).

Roosevelt Grier, seen last season as a former slave helping "Daniel Boone" make Kentucky safe from marauding Indians, has moved into modern dress. He'll be the piano player for Danny Thomas.

Most promising of the new black stars is Lou Gossett, featured in "The Young Rebels" (ABC). This is best described as an 18th century version of "Mod Squad" with the young rebels determined to make the United States free of British domination.

If you were out of the country for the last 10 years and couldn't watch American television, there will be a familiar look about the schedule. You didn't really miss the 1960s, for the stars of that period have been stampeding back to TV after finding that the movie business is no place for an actor seeking work.

The familiar faces returning belong to such persons as Andy Griffith, Danny Thomas, Mary Tyler Moore, Don Knotts, Dennis Weaver and Walter Brennan.

What will be noticed by most viewers is a sharp reduction in the number of hard news documentaries. NBC is continuing "First Tuesday" and CBS is keeping its Tuesday schedule of "60 Minutes" and the "CBS News Hour."

All networks have cut back sharply, on the controversial news documentaries that deal with current events. The documentaries that will be on display will be mostly nature studies, documenting the habits of birds and animals or tracing natural phenomena such as storms. These bring few complaints and frequently win huge ratings.

At the local level, so called "local" programming continues to consist mainly of syndicated, canned features, of locally produced new programs that rely heavily on network originated news film and of the locally film oriented talk or female program. Occasionally, a film documentary on a local program is offered, along with interview programs on Sunday morning. The result of all this is that a man can travel from the Atlantic to the Pacific, stopping from time to time to look at TV and rarely being able to tell — from television — the name of the city where he happens to be stopping.

ANOTHER TEACUP GOES BANG!

LONDON (AP) — A cannonade of exploding teacups posed a new hazard to the British way of life today.

"We've had complaints from all over the country," announced a home office spokesman.

The trouble started in the kitchen of 71-year-old Victor Cull.

He was pouring his first cup of the day when the cup blew up in his face.

Said Victor: "I got a splinter in the arm. My dog got a splinter in her shoulder. Either of us could have been blinded."

A home office accident prevention expert explained: "This type of cup is made of glass under stress, and if the skin is in any way imperfect the cup is liable to explode when subjected to extremes of temperature.

"We have written to the manufacturers to get the trouble cured."

Palance Sues Network For Injuries From Fall

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Jack Palance has filed suit for $500,000 damages for injuries he says he suffered in a fall during a television performance in a Toronto theatre three years ago.

Palance named as defendants the Dan Curtis Organization Ltd., and the CBC.

He alleged in the suit, filed in New York State Supreme Court, that he fell from a catwalk to a cement floor in a theatre at 354 Jarvis St., owned by CBC and leased to the Curtis firm, on Sept. 5, 1967.

The actor charged negligence and in court papers said the catwalk had no guards or barriers, constituting a "dangerous nuisance and trap." He said he had suffered serious internal injuries and shock to his nervous system.

The suit was revealed today when his lawyer sought a state Supreme Court order to compel the CBC to accept a copy of the complaint through its New York legal representative.

Della Reese Hospitalized

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Singer Della Reese walked through a plate glass door at her home this week and underwent several hours of surgery for severe lacerations, her manager said.

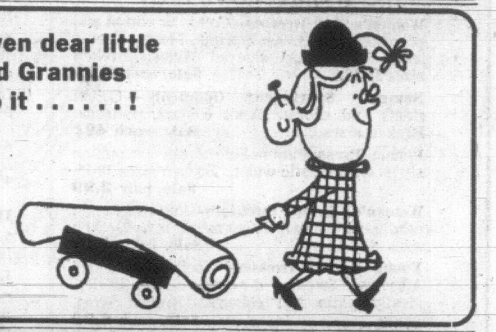

A spokesman at the University of California at Los Angeles Medical Centre said she was in satisfactory condition.

Her manager, Lee Magid, said Miss Reese was entertaining at her Bel-Air home at the time of the accident.

"Her face wasn't harmed," Magid said. "The cuts were on her legs and thighs."

Is Victoria Missing Le Bateau? (A Few Facts About the French Fact)

As it does in so many other ways, Victoria sits serene and aloof above the French-English fuss troubling much of the rest of Canada.

There are no separatists here, no turmoil over bilinguialism in the public service. There are no loud wailings about minority-language education. There is, in fact, no French Fact.

And almost to a man — government rednecks, militant Union Jack wavers, enlightened Canadian unity buffs, average citizens and even some Victorians of French Canadian origin — everybody would like to see things stay that way.

By DOUG MacRAE

Well, not quite everybody.

There is a small enclave of Francophones in the city, working quietly for what they consider a just national unity through preservation of French culture, right here in the buckle on the country's English-speaking belt.

The group is centred around groups like the French-Canadian Federation of B.C., the French Life Council, Maison Francaise (annual summer immersion courses in French at the University of Victoria), and the tiny French-speaking St. Jean Baptiste Church in Fairfield.

Spokesman for French speaking Victorians is Gerald Moreau, a professor of French at Uvic. Moreau is convinced that preservation of the French culture would be good for everybody, but sees little hope for long-term success.

MOREAU
. . . strangling

His pessimism is based on what he sees as indifference, on the part of both the provincial government and the French Canadians themselves.

"It is unfortunate for us that British Columbia is the only province which refuses to go along with federal efforts to make Canada a nation of two rich cultures," Moreau says.

He cites the Trudeau government's announcement Wednesday that Ottawa will be giving grants totalling $300 million to the provinces over the next four years to encourage bilingual education.. British Columbia's share will be only $602,000.

Moreau realizes that Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick, with the vast majority of Canada's French-speaking students, must be given most of the federal money. But should B.C. be virtually ignored?

"All we are asking is the same treatment for Francophones in this province that is afforded English-speaking residents in Quebec.

"Justice is not a matter of numbers. Ten people have the same right to eat as a million."

He thinks the government's position is unsympathetic. So few votes are involved that the political gain in helping French B.C. residents would be too small to make it worth the effort.

And although he says the Bennett adminstration is made up of sound business men, they are not culturally inclined. ("After all, Bennett is a storekeeper, isn't he?")

Moreau's other problem is that he is something of a cultural Messiah who finds himself shepherding a reluctant flock.

"It's a matter of assimilation. French-speaking people move here and are immediately immersed in a totally English environment.

"The men work in English, the women shop in English, all the children's friends speak English. Schools, television, newspapers, movies — all English.

"The French arrival reaches the point where he is so close to strangling that he says the heck with it and capitulates.

"The tragedy of this is that Victoria continues to lose the opportunity to take part in what is one of the best aspects of Canadian life — the coexistance of two of the world's richest cutures."

The government's position is clear-cut and firm. There is no school district in the province, says superintendent of education Frank Levirs, with a big enough concentration of French-speaking pupils to warrant setting up French-language schools.

Levirs points to a government-backed pilot project in Maillardville, near Coquitlam, in which one class is being taught in French only begins ning at kindergarten level. And he also says B.C.'s program of teaching French as a second language is the best in the west, with 116,000 students taking French as a second language in the secondary school grades.

Even with more help and a more understanding provincial government, Moreau sees little hope for a pocket of French culture thriving in B.C. But he has been encouraged a little bit in some areas, notably Uvic's Maison Francaise program.

Every summer for the last six years, 50 to 100 persons from all walks of life — students, retirees, professional men, stenos — from B.C. and the American Northwest, study French under Quebec teachers for seven strenuous weeks.

The students achieve a solid fluency in French, opening the door for them to the culture that Moreau is so anxious to preserve. And there is a significant by-product.

The French teachers go back to Quebec shorn of any sympathies they may have had for separatism.

"They see eagerness on the part of this wide variety of people out here to share in the culture of which they are so proud themselves, and in that they see new hope for a viable, bicultural Canada.

"They are only a few people a drop in the bucket. But the ocean is made of drops."

Shoe-Shiners Out to Raise Fast $8,000

Students from the University of Victoria and nurses from St. Joseph's and Royal Jubilee hospitals hope to raise $8,000 next Saturday by shining shoes.

Fifty-eight universities across the country will participate in the second annual Shinerama—organizers hope to raise $220,000 to aid cystic fibrosis research.

Shoe-shine teams will be located at all major shopping centres, downtown, the airport and the ferries from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Cystic fibrosis is a chronic lung disorder which affects one infant in every 1,000.

There is no cure yet for the ailment, but the symptoms, which include lung infection, difficult breathing, failure to gain weight and salt loss, can be treated.

It is thought children with cystic fibrosis are born lacking certain mucous gland functions, with the result that mucous glands secrete an abnormal, thick, gluey mucous.

Normal mucous is thin and slippery, helping to keep air passages clear and free of infection. However, the thick mucous clogs the bronchial tubes, causing lung infections, numerous attacks of pneumonia, shortness of breath and difficulty in exhaling air from the lungs.

A further complication is that the mucous also plugs the flow of digestive enzymes from the pancreas to the small intestine. Even if the child has a voracious appetite, food is only partially digested, and malnutrition can result.

Treatment of cystic fibrosis includes use of respiratory inhalation machines and mist tents, special diets to maintain nutrition, and addition of salt and digestive chemicals to the diet.

WOMAN KILLED IN CRASH

A 60-year-old Saanich woman is dead and a 79-year-old man is in satisfactory condition in hospital the result of a two-car collision at Fifth and Henry in Sidney early Friday afternoon.

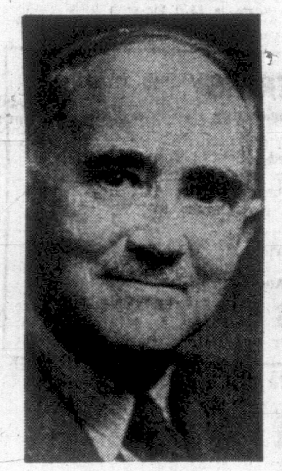

Sidney RCMP identified the woman as Mrs. Lillian Frates, 2581 Maynard. She was pronounced dead at Rest Haven Hospital in Sidney at 2:50 p.m. several hours after the crash.

Hospital officials report the condition of Ernest John Harwood, 79, of 3905 Hobbs, as satisfactory. He suffered unspecified injuries.

Police said Harwood was the driver of the car in which Mrs. Frates was the only passenger. He was returning from a trip to a summer home in the Sidney area.

The second car, police said, was driven by Roy Edward Tebo, 64, of 1480 Thurlow, who was treated at Rest Haven for bruises. Tebo's wife was a passenger in the vehicle and suffered two broken ribs. She was treated and released from hospital as well.

Police said an inquest was tentatively set for 8 p.m. Monday at McColl's chapel with Coroner D. G. Ashby officiating.

KENT

Ask The Times

Q. Could you please tell me to what churchyard the poet Grey was referring in his An Elegy Written in an Country Churchyard? Where he was born and how he lived? L.S.

A. A native Londoner, Thomas Grey (1716-71) is believed to have been referring to the churchyard of St. Giles at Stoke Pages, where he is now buried.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send it to the "Ask the Times" editor.

Council 'Courting Disaster'

By PETER McNELLY

A former Victoria alderman and Chamber of Commerce president says city council is courting an environmental disaster by flirting with developer J. A. Reid's proposal for three high-rise towers on Wharf Street.

Aubrey Kent, 228 Douglas, said in an interview that council appears to be rushing Reid's waterfront complex without having fully considered the alternatives to Inner Harbor development.

He said this impression was reinforced this week when aldermen endorsed the principle of Reid's project on a "yes or no" vote put before an informal council meeting on Wednesday.

Mayor Courtney Haddock put the motion before the aldermen after Reid paid a surprise visit to see where council stood on his plans. Reid's tentative project includes a $25-million hotel-marina-shopping complex on Wharf Street next to the Ocean Cement Ltd. plant.

'OUT OF CHARACTER'

Kent said the Reid project is totally out of character with other buildings in the downtown core and will obscure views of the harbor and the Olympic Mountains.

He said other high-rises are sure to follow on Wharf Street if Reid's project goes through as planned.

"A high-rise is nothing to boast about and I doubt whether the waterfront is the place for them."

Kent said he can understand how council wants to increase tax revenues with high-density development on prime land. But in the long run, this kind of development would turn Victoria into a mirror of any other North American city.

Kent said some planning mistakes—like the swimming pool in Central Park—can be endured, but the harbor is too important to bungle.

"I am convinced time will prove our new swimming pool is badly located. This we can live with. But any blunder with our waterfront will really be disastrous."

Kent said he can understand how council wants to increase tax revenues with high-density development on prime land. But in the long run, this kind of development would turn Victoria into a mirror of any other North American city.

Kent was an alderman from 1948 to 1952 and twice an unsuccessful mayoralty candidate. He was president of the chamber in the early 1960s. As an alderman, he said, he participated in a similar environmental mistake by voting for extended land and water rights for B.C. Forest Products.

Kent says if he looked at things then the way he sees them today, he'd have voted against extending the company's water and land rights.

He said all city councils since 1908—the year the Empress Hotel was opened—have permitted a "continuing desecration of the harbor for 60 years."

"Most of the cities I've been to except Paris and London are a hodge-podge of high-rises."

PREPARE FOR TAXES

Victorians should be prepared to pay higher property taxes, he says, if they want to keep the city from repeating the high-density mistakes other cities have made to keep taxes down.

Kent is not against commercial development on Wharf Street as long as it's not out of character with the rest of the downtown core.

If medium density development is not quite as profitable as high-rises, that's too bad for the developer, says Kent.

"This property is too important to fuss around with for a few dollars in taxes."

Kent does not think the city has to buy Reid out, a suggestion Ald. Peter Pollen recently asked council to consider. Reid should be asked to present an alternative design for his land which does not include 25-storey buildings.

"Let him sit there. We've waited three years on this thing and what the hell are three years when we're planning the city for the next 100. If Reid pulls out, someone else will come along. That's prime land, it can only increase in value."

CAR DEALERS READY FOR LAW

Victoria's car dealers are well-prepared for a provincial government order issued Friday that all new motor vehicles sold in B.C. after Jan. 1 must be equipped with anti-pollution devices.

Friday's cabinet order-in-council said the devices must control emissions from exhaust, crankcase and evaporation. The regulations do not cover vehicles made for industrial use such as mining and forestry.

Victoria dealers say all major manufacturers are aware of the new regulations and have been producing vehicles to comply with them for the market here.

Needed Now for the People Crunch: MORE CITY PARKS

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Parks being eroded away. High-rises going up every year. People, more people pouring into Victoria to live. Cars, thousands more.

Feed the facts to a computer. You will get the reply: you have a problem. And a real big problem by the year 2000, says Herb Warren, newly-retired city parks administrator.

The 65-year-old park expert says there is no need to go to a computer for a solution — it's there for everyone to see.

It's obvious we need and will need much more space in 30 years," he said. "Every-time you see a low-cost housing development going up, ask yourself what play areas are being provided for children.

"And those high-rise apartments — the homes of thousands of people in the near future — what is being done to take care of their needs," he added.

If Warren had his way, land would be acquired now for future development into small parks of the character of Stadacona Park on Pandora.

This would provide space for apartment dwellers.

Warren, who was given a farewell party by city officials Thursday, says the city's environment is declining and will continue to decline.

During his 40-years service as parks administrator he has seen Beacon Hill Park eroded with roads, green fields which would have made excellent parks used for housing, and majestic trees cut down to widen thoroughfares.

Environmental decline can be expected as the population increases, he says.

"But we should take steps to slow down the decline — avoid mistakes we have made in the past," he said.

He has reason to be concerned. Capital region planners predict a population of 370,000 for the metropolitan area by the year 2001, mostly all concentrated in the city, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt.

In 1969 the population stood at 190,200.

One of Warren's pet subjects is the preservation of streams, creeks and lakes in the metropolitan area. He says the area lacks fresh water streams and visitors notice this.

He thinks the members of the regional district board responsible for acquiring land along creeks and improving

WARREN

them are sitting on their butts.

It seems they tried to convince him they were doing their best towards the rehabilitation of streams.

"I'm not personally convinced that they are giving high priority to this," he said. "They should get on with the job. The technical difficulties which prevented the board from undertaking such a program in the past have now been resolved."

He feels the board should step up the program for acquisition of land along Colquitz Creek, Craigflower Creek, the Bilston-Metchosin Creek, Millsteam and Veitch Creek which flows into Sooke harbor.

The creeks are in poor shape, he points out. Craigflower Creek along the east boundary of Thetis Park is clogged with debris, making it difficult for salmon to make their way upstream.

Other creeks need cleaning out and are being polluted.

Warren, slight of build, and by nature a quiet man, is not inclined to reminscent on park problems. He was born in Ontario, but has lived most of his life in Victoria.

As a parks administrator, he excels in landscaping. He has a genuine feeling for flowers, and one of his regrets is that many species of wildflowers are no longer bound in Beacon Hill Park.

"We have to cut the grass to prevent fires," he said. "This of course destroys the native flowers."

On the question of his experience in park development, he admits mistakes have been made.

"But many good things have been accomplished, too."

Warren never says harsh words against people opposing his park development policies, but he stands up to them and makes his views known.

While most of his work has involved formal landscaping, he loves nature — untamed wilderness — the forest — the wild rugged west coast — the silent alpine meadows — the snow-capped mountains.

His hobby is hiking and he has been to places on Vancouver Island visited by few.

Since his retirement, he hasn't lost time in getting back to the work he loves.

He is now working at Butchart's Gardens on a part-time basis which he says suits him well. He is also doing on the side some consulting on parks and gardens.

"Of course," he added. "I'm going to keep on fighting for more parks and to preserve existing ones."
